BATTLE BEFORE LODZ BECOMES FIERCER

LANE, SENATE'S 'GOAT GETTER,' MAY LOSE HIS

Observers Say He Has Baited Old Guard a Little Too Far.

HE CALLS 'EM MUTTS.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—If Senator Harry Lane of Oregon does not get a drubbing from some of his colleagues before long he will be much surprised, for he has twisted the tail of that august body as no new fledged senator has ever dared to do before.

At present Senator Lane has the shortest biography in the congressional directory. All that he says about himself is this: "Harry Lane, Democrat. Term expires March 3, 1919."

It is quite possible there will be some more to add when his colleagues have finished reviling him for his temerity in criticising them.

Will They Stand for These?

Those who have watched the displays of temperament on the floor of the senate believe it will be quite impossible for such men as Lodge, Root, Gallinger, William Alden Smith, John Sharp Williams, or the effulgent James Hamilton Lewis, to say nothing of a dozen others, dignified or easily excitable, to sit still under such stings as these from the junior senator from Oregon:

"If a lot of the senators ever visited an asylum they would never get out without the assistance of their friends," or

"There are a few highly intelligent men, but the bulk are just common, ordinary, average mutts," or this,

"A senator is some pumpkins. When he flashes his card, every one jumps."

Much Dignity at Stake.

The dignity of the senate, as conceived by some senators—mostly old timers—will not allow that such scathing remarks shall go unchallenged.

Senator Lane permitted himself to be interviewed in order that he might give to the world certain impressions he has gained through twelve months' service in the senate. He declared that he can see no difference between the senate and the city council of Portland when he was mayor and he thinks that President Wilson occupies the same relative position to the senate as he did to the council "and is having the same sort of merry hades."

"The senate feels as kindly toward the president as the council did toward me, which means they are out with a knife," he added. "Mr. Wilson goes to the senate and says he wants a certain piece of legislation. Well, the senate proceeds to do things to that bill. They drive nails in it; they maltreat it; they stuff it full of burrs; they mangle it, and then send the bleeding remains to the president with their compliments. The president does does not get what he wants, but he is committed to the measure and can't veto it, yet the bill Mr. Wilson gets is calculated to make the poor man sit up half the night sweating blood and wondering where he is at.

They Cannot Be Shut Up.

"And the wind jamming and hot air! They talk and talk and then talk some more and you can't shut 'em up, for 'senatorial courtesy' is the slogan. That senatorial courtesy thing is the biggest joke I have found at Washington. It is the rule that any senator can talk to his heart's content; he can put in two or three days if he wants to and no one objects. They will permit their most nefarious member to spout words without end, because if any one tries to stop him the objector knows that he also will be stopped sometime, and he does not want that to happen.

"They are great for precedent—they call it pree-cee-dent. They go tracing precedent back to the days of Noah and they wouldn't for the world do anything contrary to precedent. I have watched them argue precedent for three days while important matters are hanging in the air by their toe nails.

All "Distinguished Gentlemen."

"A bird's eye view of the senate shows there are a few highly intelligent men, but the bulk are just common, ordinary, average 'mutts.' They are the same sort you find in the council, in the legislature, or in the street, but every one is the 'distinguished gentleman from Oregon,' or whatever state it is. That 'distinguished gentleman' stuff is senatorial courtesy. In Washington, just the same, a senator is 'some pumpkins.' His card takes him anywhere, and every time he flashes his card every one jumps. He sends in his card, and the president sees him while other people wait. He offers his card in

Bribery Charge Against Girl in Alexander Case

Miss Cope Said to Have Proposed 'Shakedown' Game to Clyne.

WOULD SPLIT $50,000?

Miss Jessie E. Cope of Los Angeles, complaining witness in the Mann act indictment against Col. Charles Alexander, millionaire grocer, banker, and steel magnate of Providence, R. I., was arrested by federal officials yesterday on charges of attempted bribery.

She is charged with offering to split $50,000 with District Attorney Charles F. Clyne and several of his assistants if they succeeded in forcing Col. Alexander to pay her the money as the price of escaping prosecution.

The case is the first of its kind on record under the Mann act. Miss Cope took her arrest calmly. She was arraigned before United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason, who fixed her bond at $5,000.

Under Surveillance.

She was permitted to sign this bond on her own recognizance. She was placed under another bond of $1,000, however, as a government witness against Col. Alexander on the Mann act charge, in default of which she was taken into custody and will be held under surveillance at Coulter house, at 2119 Calumet avenue.

"I will not talk to any one about this matter until I consult an attorney," Miss Cope said, when asked to make a statement.

Commissioner Mason read the bribery complaint to her when she was arraigned. "I don't understand it," she said. "I don't know what it is all about, and I must see an attorney before I can say anything."

Telephones Chief Sleuth.

Since her arrival in Chicago in October Miss Cope has been living at 4012 Drexel boulevard. Early yesterday when she read of the arrest of Col. Alexander she telephoned to Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the local bureau of investigation, and arranged for a meeting.

Lucien C. Wheeler, a special agent, met her at the Great Northern hotel and kept her practically in custody until 2 p. m., when she was brought before the commissioner under arrest on the bribery charge.

Following her arraignment she was taken behind closed doors in Assistant District Attorney Michael L. Igoe's office to escape newspapermen and a battery of photographers. Later she was taken down the federal building freight elevator and through the basement of the postoffice.

Whisked Away in Taxi.

She emerged through the "swing room" door on the Clark street side of the building, where several deputies hurriedly escorted her across the street, through a building, and into the alley. At Jackson boulevard she was put into a taxicab and driven to Coulter house.

She was heavily veiled when she left Mr. Igoe's office. In crossing Clark street she lost her veil.

Federal officials say they suspected Miss Cope's good faith from the start. Miss Cope held several conferences with Assistant District Attorney Igoe and Mr. Clabaugh before it was decided to proceed with the Mann act charge against Col. Alexander.

On Nov. 4, according to the government, Miss Cope made the bald proposition to the officials that she would split the money with them if they would aid her in making the colonel "come across" under the Mann act threat.

Writes Out Agreement.

She wrote out an agreement in her own handwriting, in which she set forth that the officials should aid her in "shaking down" Col. Alexander, in consideration of which she would pay $25,000, to be equally divided among District Attorney Clyne, Assistant District Attorney Igoe, Mr. Clabaugh, and Special Agent Wheeler.

She explained that out of her own $25,000 she would take care of her lawyers, both in Providence and in Los Angeles. In furtherance of the plan she wrote a letter to Attorney Thornley, her counsel in Providence, introducing Special Agent Wheeler. Wheeler was to act as the "go-between."

Wheeler the "Go-Between."

Her scheme was, according to the government, to send Wheeler to Providence to "interview" Col. Alexander. The colonel was to be told that the government was on his trail and he would be prosecuted under the Mann act unless he made a prompt settlement for $50,000 with Miss Cope.

The complaint against her charges violation of section 39 of the criminal code. The penalty provided by the statute in case of conviction is a fine of not less than three times the amount of money offered as a bribe and imprisonment in the penitentiary not more than three years.

In case of conviction Miss Cope faces

POLICE QUAIL AS HOYNE GETS NEW "SQUEAL"

Bureau Man's Confession Adds to Halpin-Tobin Panic.

CODE USED ON PHONE.

The skulking fear of the informer swept through the ranks of Chicago's crooked police officialdom yesterday.

The return of the graft indictments against Capt. John J. Halpin, Lieut. John H. Tobin, and former Detective Sergeant Walter O'Brien and the immediate suspension of Halpin and Tobin by the mayor were the developments that appeared on the surface of the day's activities.

But something else has happened beneath the surface—inside the ring of those who it is alleged protected thieves and shared their spoils, while drawing money from the city as guardians of the law.

Some One Has "Squealed."

One man at the detective bureau has "squealed." Whether he is a detective or whether he is one of the former officers of the station is not certain. The fact remains the confession has been made and in return for it immunity has been given.

"I have another confession," said State's Attorney Hoyne. "It is the confession of a member of the police department. I have a number of confessions. I have some a month old and some of them are a year old. None of them have been used yet. They will be produced at the proper time.

"I am making this public now just as a tip or a hunch to some of these policemen who are making statements that I have not got the evidence to back up what I say. This might jog their minds a bit."

Make Immunity Offer.

Mr. Hoyne refused to talk any further about the additional confessions.

"There are some others," continued the prosecutor, "I would give immunity to and, furthermore, I think the city authorities would forgive the past for them, but that does not refer to the number of them that are in too deep.

"Here's a piece of the unwritten history of the detective bureau during the last six months. I won't mention the names of the detectives in it, but they know. Dick Powell, alias the 'Waco Kid,' the confidence man we arrested in El Paso, was taken down in the basement of the bureau and beaten up so badly that his leg was broken.

Send Him Flowers.

"He was hurried away by the police to a hospital. They sent him flowers and telephoned their sympathies every day. Later there was a love feast in Skidmore's saloon on the west side and another fight to decide who was the best man. After that more than twenty complaints from men swindled by Powell came into the bureau.

"When the crooks talked over the telephone with the coppers protecting them they used code names to indicate one another. Halpin was the 'Big 3' and Tobin was 'Sub 3.' Walter O'Brien was 'Caroline,' and 'Bill' Egan was "The Devil."

Adds Another Star Witness.

The additional confession means that Hoyne has knocked away one more prop from the defense of the alleged bribe takers and added another star witness to the row of informers, now composed of Frank Ryan, alias "Prof. Robert L. Milton," "Barney" Bertsche, politician go-between for the swindlers and the po-

Peace Evangels Urge Wilson to Terminate War

English Suffragist Urges Militancy to Bring End to Conflict.

TURNS TO AMERICA

Nearly 1,000 men and women assembled in the Garrick theater yesterday noon called on President Wilson to take immediate steps toward bringing the European war to a close. Mme. Rosika Schwimmer of Budapest and Mrs. Pethick-Lawrence, militant suffragist leader of London, who offered the peace resolutions, urged the women present to resort to militancy as a means of furthering international peace.

The meeting was the first of a series of public gatherings planned by the emergency peace committee of thirty recently appointed and headed by Miss Jane Addams.

Message to Wilson.

The message which will be sent to President Wilson reads:

> We urge the president of the United states to invite the neutral countries of Europe to send envoys to meet the delegates he will appoint to carry the message of our nation, and that these envoys shall unite in a demand upon the nations now at war that they declare a cessation of hostilities until this message shall have been delivered, being confident that this armistice would be the first step toward permanent peace.

Mrs. Schwimmer began her talk by urging her listeners not to contribute to Red Cross work unless they were assured that their donations would be spent in food and clothing for the poor in Europe and not for surgical relief work. Contributions to the ordinary work of the Red Cross prolonged the war, she said.

Appeal to Americans.

"It is to the women of the world," said she, "that the task of restoring peace is given. We women will never believe that fighting proves anything. And when this war is finished we will ask, Will other nations follow the example of Europe? Will you imitate what we have done, will you flatter us by imitation, or is the United States going to show us the way toward absolute international disarmament?

"I ask you not to wait any longer, but rise in your might and bring back sense to a senseless world. If you use your power, peace will be restored. Never before has the hope of a world been placed on one country as it is now.

"Rise up and become crusaders, you women of America. Go out and fight for intervention in this slaughter on the part of President Wilson."

How to Bring Peace About.

Mrs. Pethick-Lawrence presented nine propositions which she said were necessary before international disarmament and arbitration might be realized. They were:

1. The reinforcement of the democracies of the world by the inclusion of the mother half of the human race into the ranks of articulate citizenship.
2. The creation of some constitutional machinery, where none at present exists, by which the democracies may exercise some control over foreign policy.
3. That all treaties and alliances on the part of any democratic nation shall be ratified by the representatives of the people.
4. That the manufacture of armaments shall be nationalized and that the export of ammunition from one country to another shall be vetoed.
5. That the powers now at war shall be held to their slogan that this is a war to end war.
6. That at the conclusion of peace no province shall be transferred from one government to another without the consent of the population concerned; that this consent shall be obtained by plebiscite and that women shall be included.
7. That women as well as men should be sent as representatives of their nation to The Hague conference.
8. That the democracies shall press for some kind of international agreement by which all the nations shall put themselves at the back of any one law abiding nation that is aggressively attacked, or of any small country that is menaced by a stronger power.
9. That the idea be brought to the front and the possibility discussed of the formation of an European senate composed of representatives of every European nation. That this senate exist for the discussion of international concerns and in this way a means may be constructed whereby nations can seek to obtain what is necessary to the development of their national life by bargain and by exchange, instead of by secret treachery or open slaughter and loot.

War Is Hell, She Says.

"We know today that our child ideals of war were false," said Mrs. Pethick-Lawrence, "and that the reality is not a thing of chivalry and ideals, but naked slaughter, murder, destruction, and devastation that brings all curses in its trail. War is hell let loose.

"It is not the men who have begun this war who suffer, but the democracy of every country in the world. Why do millions of people allow themselves to be dragged into this strife? Because in no country is there any democratic control of foreign policies. Because the moment that war is declared the passionate spirit of militarism sweeps everything in front of it."

HUGE WAR CRAFT REPORTED LOST

Australia, Battle Cruiser, Said to Be Missing by Wireless from Berlin.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—[By Wireless.]—Information given out to the press today by the German official press bureau says that, according to a report received by the Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera the Australian battle cruiser Australia apparently is missing.

A British submarine today tried to force a passage through the Dardanelles, according to a dispatch from Constantinople to the Frankfurter Zeitung.

The submarine's presence was discovered, however, the message adds, and the vessel apparently was hit by shots fired by the Turkish forts.

Take Norwegian Steamer.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Norwegian steamer Conrad Mohr, oil laden, from Philadelphia, Nov. 19, was captured by a British cruiser while proceeding to Christiania, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegram company.

SHIP OF 19,200 TONS.

The Australia is a dreadnaught cruiser of 19,200 tons. It is 578 feet long, 79½ feet beam, and has a mean draft of 27½ feet. It was built at Clydebank in 1912 and is capable of traveling twenty-six knots an hour.

The Australia carried eight twelve inch guns, sixteen four inch guns, and three twenty-one inch torpedo tubes.

The Australia was last reported in Hawaiian waters last September, when the steamer Wilhelmina picked up a wireless message from the dreadnaught saying that it was in full chase of the German cruiser Nuernberg.

HAWKEYES BACK AQUARIUM FOR PUBLIC IN CHICAGO

Fellowship Club Sees Valuable Fish Belonging to John W. Gage and Worth $500 Each.

A campaign for the creation of a public aquarium in Chicago will be prosecuted by the Hawkeye Fellowship club of Chicago, according to sentiment expressed by members at their annual "fish luncheon" in the Auditorium hotel. The idea was introduced by John W. Gage of the Chicago Fish Fanciers' club, who illustrated his remarks with live fish shown in aquariums, among them two guppyi, which he said were "the Mocropodus of Persia and the Hermichyomus of West Africa, worth $500 each." The guppyi were one and one-half inches long, shaped like a black bass, the male changing its coat each day and the female swallowing its young at the approach of danger.

STEALS JANE ADDAMS' COAT; ALSO MME. SCHWIMMER'S.

Thief Gets Away with Clothes While Women Are Making War Peace Addresses in Theater.

Two cloaks, one belonging to Mme. Rosika Schwimmer of Budapest, Hungary, and the other to Miss Jane Addams, were stolen from the stage of the Garrick theater while their owners were addressing a peace massmeeting yesterday noon. A felt hat belonging to Louis P. Lochner, secretary of the local peace society, also was taken.

The thefts were discovered after the meeting adjourned and those on the stage returned to the chairs behind the scenes where they had left their property. Nearly 100 women and a few men were seated on the stage during the meeting.

J. J. Garrity, manager of the playhouse, placed two detectives on the case. The women were indignant. Mme. Schwimmer's coat was a black one with a heavy fur collar, while Miss Addams' was dark blue with a figured black pattern. Mr. Garrity believed the coats would be returned.

ENNIS FREED FROM JAIL; JUDGMENT SERVER TOO LATE

Walks from Ludlow Street Jail Few Hours Before Hotel Detective Hunts for Him.

New York, Dec. 5.—Former Justice Alfred Ennis walked free from Ludlow street jail this afternoon in great haste. The venerable ex-justice had been a member of the famous "alimony club," since he was charged several days ago with not contributing to the support of his youthful wife, Mrs. Norma Schilling-Ennis.

The haste on the part of Mr. Ennis was explained when, a few minutes after he left, a private detective representing the Waldorf-Astoria arrived at Ludlow street jail and asked for him. The man said he wanted to collect a judgment of $893 which the hotel claims to have obtained against him.

Mr. Ennis is 70 years of age. His wife is 27. In her recent petition for separate maintenance she declared the jurist deserted her, leaving her to take care of a lease on a costly Riverside drive apartment.

MAYOR CUTS TEN CENTS FROM CITY DANCE HALL FEE.

Next Entertainment Will Be at Douglas Park Auditorium Tomorrow Night.

Bargain prices are to prevail at the next municipal dance. Fifteen cents will cover all expenses of guests, including check for wraps. This is in accordance with a suggestion by Mayor Harrison. The first three dances have netted $225. The next dance will take place Monday night in the Douglas Park auditorium. Then will follow dances at Belmont hall Tuesday night and at Dreamland on Wednesday night.

ITALY CONFIRMS HER NEUTRALITY

Chamber Backs Up Cabinet Stand as One Showing the Country's Power.

ROME, Dec. 5.—The Italian chamber today passed a vote of confidence in the government, 413 to 49.

Admiral Bettolo, former minister of marine, presented the resolution calling for a vote of confidence in the cabinet. The admiral said he approved of the reasons for neutrality as given by Premier Salandra.

Italy's neutrality was not due to unsatisfactory military conditions in this country, Admiral Bettolo said, but to the fact that Italy was not obliged to follow the central empires of Europe. The former minister added:

"Our neutrality must be strongly armed to enable us to defend the supreme interests of the country if they are threatened or unrecognized. Our neutrality should be an expression of Italy's diplomatic and military power."

Von Buelow's Errand Puzzle.

The announcement that Prince von Buelow, former chancellor of the German empire, had been placed at the head of the German embassy here while the present ambassador, Herr von Flotow, is to be absent for three months on account of his health has aroused much interested comment in Rome.

Although this move has been reported as probable for some time, it may be said to have produced a considerable sensation. It is remarkable that a former chancellor should become the head of an embassy which is by no means the most important in the German diplomatic service.

Politicians Argue Cause.

The appointment was discussed with animation in Italian political circles today. Some statesmen declared it to be Germany's answer to the declaration of Premier Salandra to the Italian parliament on Thursday that there was no clause in any treaty binding Italy to participate with the Teuton allies in the present conflict, and that Italy would maintain her present attitude of watchful and armed neutrality, while others recalled that Prince von Buelow had been most popular in Rome since he was ambassador to the quirinal twenty years ago, and that his wife belongs to a very prominent Italian family.

Move to Thwart Allies?

Many observers are of the opinion that the appointment of Prince von Buelow to this post means that Berlin is about to exercise strong pressure to prevent Italy from passing to the side of the allies.

GREAT ARMIES STILL LOCKED IN GRIM FIGHT

Struggle Between Germans and Russians Is Bloodiest of War.

CARNAGE IS APPALLING

WAR NEWS OF LAST 24 HOURS.

GERMAN and Russian armies continue in bloodiest battle of war near Lodz, in Russian Poland. Losses of both armies reported enormous. Both Berlin and Petrograd claim progress.*

ALLIES gain position between Ypres and Dixmude for which battle has been fought for weeks. Berlin admits allies have assumed offensive at many places.*

SNIPING, hand grenade fighting, and artillery duels take place of infantry assaults on that part of line held by British, eyewitness says.*

PETROGRAD, Dec. 5.—Desperate fighting is still in progress in Poland. The Russian official statement issued today and covering operations of Dec. 3 follows:

"On the left bank of the Vistula there was obstinate fighting on Dec. 3, also along the Glovno-Lowicz front and on the western roads toward Lodz and Piotrkow.

"On the northern and southern fronts the situation is unchanged."

With dashing cavalry raids along the Vistula the Russians are constantly threatening the German line of communications, while the massed forces of the czar's army are driving at the center.

Reports received today declare the attempt of the Germans again to carry the fighting to the Russians and advance their lines has totally failed of its purpose.

Battle South of Lodz.

The center of the field of operations has moved to the south of Lodz. The German effort centers at Szczerczow, twenty miles west of Piotrkow, with that town the objective.

On this line, which is fifteen to twenty miles long, east of the Warta, the fighting appears to indicate that the Germans have been heavily reinforced and are filling the gap between their right wing and the isolated body which has been striving to turn the Russian left.

The heaviest fighting in the vicinity of Lodz during the last two days has occurred in the course of maneuvering for the possession of Lask, fifteen miles southwest of Lodz.

The strength of the German force opposing the Russian left wing is estimated at five corps, each corps occupying a front from eight to ten miles in extent.

Bloodiest Battle of War.

The most tragic moment of the fighting about Lodz thus far, it is reported here, occurred between Tuszyn and Brzeziny, southeast of Lodz. Heavy German forces which had penetrated to Tuszyn, it appears, were surrounded and obliged to fight their way to Brzeziny to unite with the main body. The Russians essayed counter attack after counter attack to prevent the junction, but the Germans cut a passage at the point of the bayonet for a distance of fifteen miles.

The Russian success is attributed chiefly to the endurance and tireless aggression of the Siberian troops. The German disaster began with a charge of the Siberians at Rzgow, a town six miles south of Lodz.

Siberians Lead Attack.

The Siberians, after a long march, entered prepared trenches and immediately asked permission to attack Rzgow, where the Germans were intrenched on a slight rise. The Siberians attacked the German position from two sides. The Russian assault surprised the Germans and the first trenches were quickly taken, though the Germans soon recaptured them.

In the next few hours these trenches were taken and retaken three times.

On being dislodged finally at Rzgow, the Germans retreated northward, being pounded by the Russians. The Germans fell in rows, but their comrades pushed forward over the bodies and hurled themselves against the Russians.

The battle is called the bloodiest and most pitiless fight of the war. Ninety per cent of the German officers were put out of action and many regiments had less than 100 men left. The fighting lasted thirty-six hours.

The entire wooded region from Brzeziny to Kurpin is described in these dispatches as a German graveyard. The dead and wounded are reported to be so thick that the Russian hospital corps, after working three days, had not cleared the field. Most of the Germans treated showed bayonet wounds.

The fire blacked ruins of the village of Kurpin, dispatches from the front say, are packed with charred bodies of Germans who took refuge from Siberian bayonets to fall under the fire of a Russian battery.

A rough cross surmounted by a peaked helmet and another cross on which rests a Siberian cap, blood stained and bullet holed, now marks the field where thousands of dead lie side by side.

Drawn Battle In North.

The German defense on the northern front in East Prussia occupies a position along the river Angerapp from Gumbinnen to Darkehmen and thence to the northern extremity of the Masurian lakes at Angerburg. Here the Russians are intrenched close to the German line. On the east front of the lakes and to the Vistula the Russians have taken a position slightly back of their line of advance of ten days ago.

Both sides appear to be awaiting the outcome of the struggle at Lodz. The main German forces in this region are concentrated about Mlawa.

Austrian Armies Lose One-third.

The military critic of the Bourse Gazette reckons that the loss of the Austrians in prisoners is equal to their number of dead and wounded and places the fighting strength of Austria now at two-thirds of what it was at the beginning of the war.

The critic also points out the large proportion of officers, including colonels and lieutenant colonels, among the prisoners. He states that the last 50,000 Austrian prisoners included 600 commissioned officers.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—Progress of German forces in the east is reported in an official statement given out this afternoon at the army headquarters. The statement follows:

"In the fighting to the east of the Mazurian lakes the situation is favorable for us, and in minor operations there we took 1,200 prisoners.

"Our operations in Poland are taking a normal course."

Germans Forming New Line.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—In Poland the Germans, whose daring stroke to penetrate the Russian center apparently has ended in failure with heavy losses, according to the latest reports from Petrograd are forming a new line extending roughly from Kutno in the north to Cracow in the south.

The right or southern wing of this army rests on Cracow and is commanded by Gen. Dankl. He is supported on the north by the army under Gen. Hetzendorf, which is based on Czenstochowa, while the new army which was sent from the west fills the gap between this force and Gen. Mackenzen's army, which after extricating itself from the Russian meshes is now in a new position extending from Kutno southward.

The Eighth East Prussian army presumably has taken up the northern part of the line.

New Great Battle Impending.

Thus it will be seen that an entirely new battle is about to be fought, for the Germans are determined at all costs to keep the Russians out of their territory.

Berlin claims heavy captures of prisoners in this struggle, while from Kieff comes the announcement that the fortress there is crowded with German prisoners. Incidentally Kieff reports that since the beginning of the war 130,000 soldiers and 2,500 officers have passed through there as prisoners of war.

Report of Russian Victory.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—A Petrograd message received here today declares reports that the Lodz battle has terminated in a brilliant victory for the Russians have been confirmed. The Russians captured many prisoners, cannons, and machine guns, it is declared.

BELVIDERE BOARD SENDS $233 TO BELGIAN AID FUND.

Wilmette Public Schools Forward $58.47 and Many Others Contribute to Red Cross.

The Red Cross war relief fund for the Belgians was swelled $233 yesterday by a check from the Belgian committee of Belvidere, Ill.

The pupils of the Wilmette public schools sent in $58.47, the new First Congregational church of Chicago gave $20 from its Thanksgiving collection, the church of Rogers Park $20.50, and other smaller sums. The fund is now above $105,500.

From Manitowoc, Wis., came a shipment for the German wounded. There were 400 gauze wound pads, 174 gauze bandages, 24 nightingales, and stockings bed slippers, caps, and the like.

FRENCH CABINET MEMBERS ARE RETURNING TO PARIS.

Most of Them Will Be in Capital by Tomorrow Night—Poincare Back Early in Week.

BORDEAUX, via PARIS, Dec. 5.—The members of the French cabinet are returning to Paris, where it is expected the government will be reëstablished at an early date.

Aristide Briand, minister of justice, left for the old capital today. Alexandre Ribot, Louis J. Malvy, and Gaston Doumergue, ministers of finance, the interior, and colonies, respectively, will leave tomorrow. MM. Sembat, Guesde, and Thomson will go to Paris Monday.

No date has been announced for the return of President Poincaré, but it is understood he will leave Bordeaux early next week.

FRENCH ADVANCE AGAINST METZ; SIEGE NEARING

First Attack on German Fortress in Lorraine May Come Within Few Days.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—The French lines in Lorraine, south of the German fortress of Metz, are being advanced to within range of the outer defenses of the stronghold.

Although official statements of the last few days have been noncommittal as to developments in this section, all reports indicate that the French attack is developing to the point where the bombardment of Fort St. Blaise, the outermost of the Metz defenses, may be expected.

Little has been said of this fighting since announcement that the French artillery had succeeded in bombarding Arnaville, just across the border on the river Moselle. It is evident, however, that this movement has been further developed.

Makes Advance in Belgium.

The allies have further advanced their lines in Belgium and northern France and also in the Argonne, where desperate fighting is reported in the official statement from the war office today.

A position between Dixmude and Ypres, long contended for by the opposing armies, has been taken and held in the face of counter attacks by the Germans. North of the Lys two lines of trenches have been captured and similar gains have been made in the Argonne. Reims is again bombarded.

Despite the extremely had weather in Flanders, the Germans are being given little rest. The center of the fighting continues to be near Ypres. During the last few days a howling gale, driving before it sleet and snow, has swept the fighting line. This has caused illness in both armies.

French Official Statement.

The official communication given out in Paris this afternoon was as follows:

"To the north of the Lys we have made perceptible progress. Our infantry, making its attack at daybreak, occupied in one operation two lines of intrenchments. The advance here was of 500 yards.

"A part of the hamlet of Weidendreft, one kilometer to the northwest of Langemarck, has remained in our possession. In front of Poesele, half way between Dixmude and Ypres, we took possession, on the right bank of the canal, of a house the occupation of which has been disputed spiritedly for a month.

"In the region of Arras and in Champagne there have been intermittent cannonades from one side and the other. Reims has been bombarded with particular severity. On our part we have destroyed with our heavy artillery several earth fortifications of the enemy.

"In the Argonne the contest continues to be hot. We have occupied several trenches and repulsed all counter attacks."

German Official Statement.

Continuance of the allies' offensive in Flanders is admitted in the official war office statement made public in Berlin today. It says the French attacks were repulsed. The statement declares:

"French attacks yesterday in Flanders and south of Metz were repulsed. We made progress about La Bassee, in the Argonne, and southwest of Altkirch."

FRENCH AIRMEN DROP FOUR BOMBS ON GERMAN TOWN.

Attack Freiburg in Baden, Wrecking Part of Railway and Escape Safely in Fusillade.

BERLIN, via wireless to London, Dec. 5.—French aviators dropped four bombs yesterday in the neighborhood of Freiburg, it was reported from Karlsruhe today. Announcement of the attack upon Freiburg was made in an official statement.

A portion of the railway is said to have been destroyed. The aviators escaped safely despite a fusillade from the German guns in the vicinity.

Freiburg is in the grand duchy of Baden, on the Dreisam, seventy-five miles southwest of Karlsruhe and forty miles northeast of Altkirch, where fighting between the French and Germans was reported yesterday.

There is a famous Gothic cathedral at Freiburg, an ancient university, and a famous library of more than 270,000 volumes.

Deny Attack on Krupp Plant.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—An official statement was issued here today denying the report that the Krupp plant at Essen had been bombarded by a foreign aeronaut.

PREDICTS REPUBLICAN RULE IN POLAND AFTER WAR.

City Attorney Piotrowski Says France and Britain Will Force Reconstruction of Nation.

Prediction that Poland would become a republic after the war was made at the Irish Fellowship club luncheon in the Hotel La Salle yesterday by City Attorney N. L. Piotrowski.

Mr. Piotrowski spoke on "The Past and the Future of Poland." He said Poland has no faith in promises made by Russia and Germany because of promises broken in the past.

"The reconstruction of Poland is necessary for the peace of Europe. I think that after the war the influence of France and England will force a reconstruction of the country as an independent nation. If it is reconstructed it should have, and I think it will have, its own government, with a constitution modeled after that of the United States."

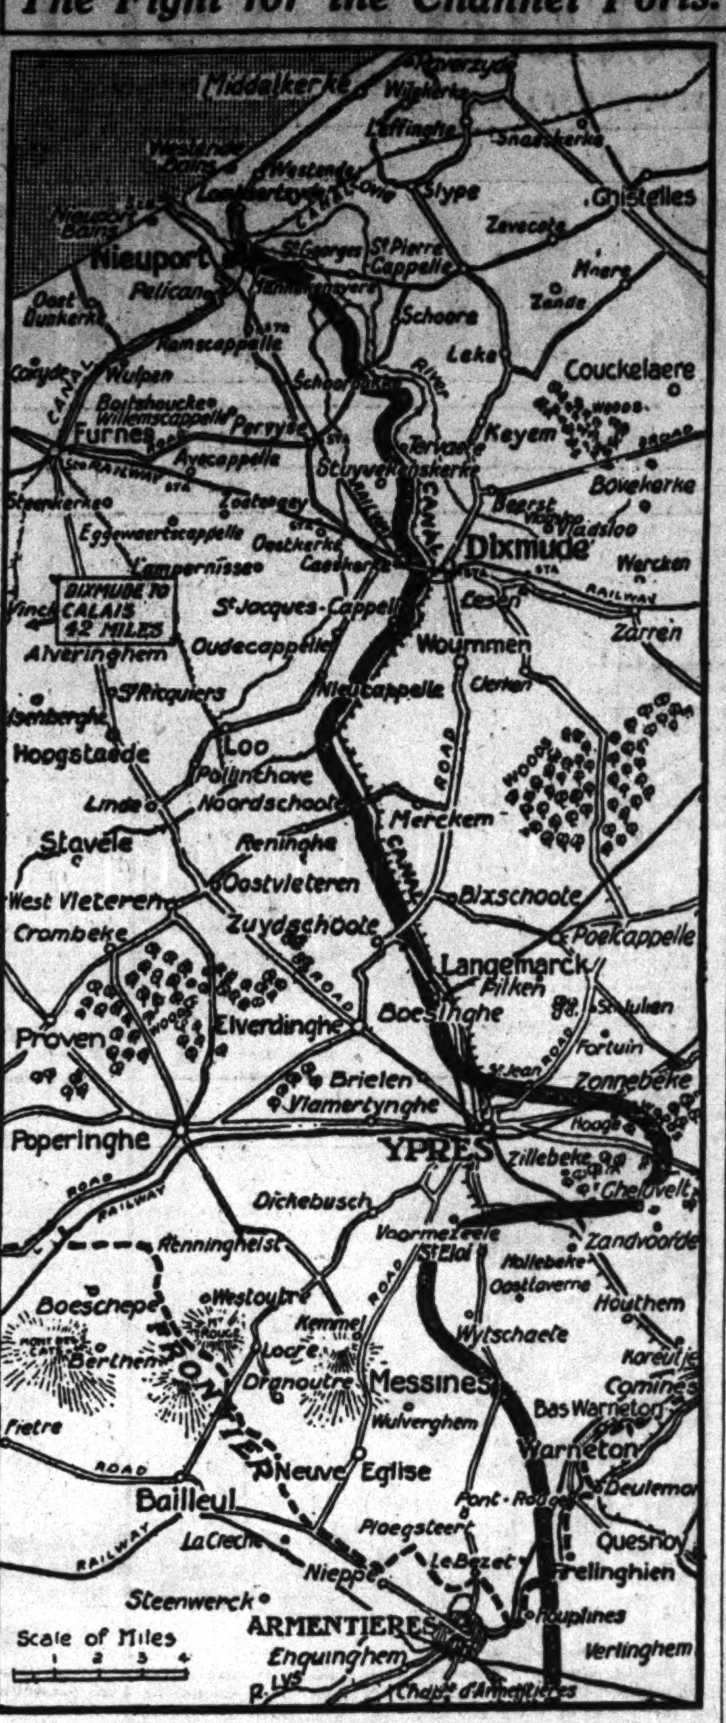
The Fight for the Channel Ports.



The black line on the map, which is based on the French official message, shows the approximate battleground from Nieuport to Armentières.

THE BATTLE LINE IN BELGIUM—A month of terrific fighting along the line from near Nieuport to the vicinity of Armentieres has resulted in continual shifting of the line, with alternate gains and losses, but the nature of the fighting is such that these gains, while important, result in advances of so short a distance that, on a map, the lines appear to be stationary.

Both the allies and the Germans have "dug themselves in," and the deep intrenchments, protected by barbed wire entanglements and many other protective methods, have turned the battle into what resembles siege operations.

Paris claims that the allies within the last week have assumed a more vigorous offensive and that the Germans, weakened by the sending of reinforcements to the Russian frontier, have been beaten back at several points. One of these gains was the capture of a height between Dixmude and Ypres for which the armies have been struggling for many weeks. The German official statements for the last several days have admitted for the first time that the allies are pressing the attack instead of acting on the defensive.

The position which is being defended by the British troops in the vicinity of the town of Ypres has been the scene of some of the hardest fighting of the whole western campaign. It was in this vicinity that the Germans attempted to break the allied line after their attempt to march down the seacoast to Dunkirk and Calais had been stopped at Nieuport. At several times the British troops were in extreme peril at this point, it has been admitted in reports given to London, but they now seem to have made their position secure and are taking the offensive.

The Yser river and canal form one of the chief points in the defenses of the allies, and it was the water there that proved the biggest handicap to the advance of the Germans. The same water was used by the allies to flood the Germans out of their positions at several points by the cutting of the dikes.

PUPILS' FUND NOW $13,700.

School Children Expect Clothing Money for the Poor Will Reach $15,000.

With twenty-one schools to be heard from it was announced yesterday at the offices of the board of education that the school children's Christmas fund for poor children had reached $13,700. It was expected that the sum would be increased to $15,000. The fund will be turned over to the School Children's Aid society and is intended to be used for the purchase of clothing or other immediate necessities for unfortunate school children.

BRITONS AND FOE TURN TO SNIPING; QUIT ASSAULTS

Dig Secret Trenches and Resort to Hand Grenade Fighting; Artillery Kept Busy.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Sniping, hand grenade fighting, and artillery fire have taken the place of general assaults on that part of the battle line where the British troops are located, according to an eye witness.

The narrative, permitted to become public by the censor, covers the days from Nov. 26 to 29, inclusive.

At only one point during that time was there a general attack, and that location is held secret. The writer says that an attempt by the Indian troops to extend their trenches in an endeavor to get in close quarters with the enemy brought on an attack by the Germans. He fails to state which side gained the advantage.

Shelling South of Lys.

"There has been some shelling of the rear of our front line south of the Lys," the writer says, "but this form of annoyance diminishes daily along the whole front. Sniping, however, is carried on to a considerable extent.

"While it is necessary to accept the evidence of all prisoners with caution, there is a change in the views expressed by some officers captured recently which appears to be genuine. They admit the failure of the German strategy, and profess to take a gloomy view of the future.

"The change within the last few days of what may be termed the atmosphere of the battlefield has been marked. The noise of cannonading has now decreased to such an extent that for hours at a time nothing is heard but the infrequent boom of one of the heavy guns of the allies, the occasional rattle of machine guns, and the intermittent fire of snipers on either side.

Germans Cease Assaults.

"The enemy has practically ceased his efforts to break through the line by assaults and is now directing his energies to the same type of siege operations which have been familiar to the allies since the beginning of the battle of the Aisne.

"Attacks are made on the firing line by blinded saps, which are constructed by a special earth borer. When this secret tunnel reaches the enemy's trench an assault is delivered amid a shower of hand grenades. The stormers endeavor to burst their way through the opening and then try to work along the trench. Machine guns are quickly brought up to repel a counter attack.

"These grenades are thrown continuously by both sides, and every trench assault is first preceded and then accompanied by showers of these murderous missiles. This kind of fighting is deadly, and owing to the difficulty of observation it is at times somewhat blind."

PORTUGUESE MINISTRY OUT; PREMIER TELLS PARLIAMENT

Resignations Due to Terms of Interpelation in Regard to Mobilizing of the Army.

LISBON, Dec. 5.—The Portuguese ministry resigned today. Premier Machado was the only member of the cabinet to attend the closing session of parliament when it convened, and presented a note announcing the resignation of the ministry en bloc.

Developments following the mobilization in Portugal resulted in the retirement of the cabinet. The premier declared the resignation was due to the terms of the interpellation of the ministry regarding the mobilization decree.

It was denied today that Germany offered any explanation of the invasion of Angola, the Portuguese African possession.

WHITLOCK DENIES GERMANS BAR YANKEE RELIEF WORK

Says They Are Respecting Our Efforts and Keeping All Their Engagements—Alarm Groundless.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The American relief commission in London today received a telegram from Capt. T. F. Lucey, American relief commissioner at Rotterdam, incorporating another telegram which he received from Brand Whitlock, the United States minister to Belgium, regarding charges which recently have appeared in newspapers in connection with the relief work. Mr. Whitlock's message follows:

"I can assure you there is no ground for the alarm reported in your telegram this morning that soldiers billeted in houses are fed with food provided by our commission.

"The German authorities are respecting our work and are keeping all their engagements, and the organization of the commission with its almost scientific methods of distribution is such that it is practically impossible for our food to go to any but the suffering portion of the population."

Madame Melba's Pretty Compliment

BEFORE Madame Melba went abroad last June, her concert tour being over, she stepped into the factory warerooms to select a Mason & Hamlin piano for her own personal use.

She tested them herself, for she plays as well as sings. Rising from before a beautiful parlor grand, she said with all of an artist's enthusiasm: "This is the piano for me—it's just like my voice!" Then and there she bought one of those beautifully toned ordering it sent to her home in Melbourne, Australia. What a pretty compliment —

"It's Just Like My Voice"

—and you can easily forgive the little conceit in it, for singing tone was exactly what she was looking for, and it is exactly what Mason & Hamlin makers continually strive for—and get. HISTORIES FAIL TO REVEAL TRUTH ABOUT U.S. ARMY?

League Issues a Statement Showing Force Always Outnumbered Foes Opposing.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The Army league of the United States has joined in the fight to obtain proper military legislation at the coming session of congress.

In a statement issued today the league declares that the inquiry into the national defense will show that past victories of American over foreign troops have not been accomplished with inferior forces, as popular histories relate, but with vastly superior forces in numbers, and also with outside assistance. The superiority in numbers, however, was more than made up for by a lack of preparation, lack of munitions, and lack of training.

In opening its campaign the Army league says that the responsibility for the lack of preparation rests squarely on congress, but indirectly on the people, inasmuch as they are responsible for congress.

Statements Made by League.

Here are some of the facts the league sets forth:

Instead of the revolutionary war having been won by a handful of ragged continentals and minute men from a superior force of red coats, as the popular histories indicate, the official reports of the war department show that the total number of American troops in the revolutionary war was 395,858, while at no time were there more than 42,075 British troops on American soil.

In the war of 1812 this country employed 527,654 troops, as against 16,500 British soldiers.

The only great victory of the revolutionary war that was won by American troops exclusively was the capture of Burgoyne. Cornwallis was forced to surrender to combined American and French forces aided by the French fleet.

In the war of 1812 the only land victory was that of Jackson at New Orleans, after the signing of the treaty of peace. The international situation in Europe compelled Great Britain to withdraw her troops from American soil.

Congress Always to Blame.

Standing alone and without any knowledge of the military policy of congress, these facts would indicate that this country has no right to boast of the heroism of its soldiers. Military men declare that the weakness of our army in former wars was not due to lack of bravery on the part of the men who fought, but entirely to the restrictions enforced by congress.

If the continental congress had taken the advice of Washington the revolutionary war would not have been a struggle lasting through a long term of years, it is claimed, nor would it have been terminated only through the assistance of France.

Washington's greatness as a military commander and the glory of the soldiers who fought under him rest upon meager support from the continental congress. Military experts declare that it was one of the greatest military achievements of the world for Washington to have accomplished so much under the unwise laws passed by the continental congress.

Civilian Leaders a Peril.

From that day to this army officers have in one way or another been called upon to face the same conditions in congress that Washington did in the revolutionary war. The United States has the only legislative body in the world which assumes that civilians have better knowledge of military problems than officers who have spent their lives in the study of national defense.

Official reports from army officers for the last fifty years are teeming with warnings to congress of the dangers of our military policy. The question now confronting them is whether in view of the European war congress will continue to turn a deaf ear to those warnings.

Plans to Reorganize Army.

After three years of study, the general staff of the army, assisted by general officers, has made a report on "the organization of the land forces of the United States." In this report a plan is set forth by which the regular army is to be a nucleus for a great army that would be needed in the event of war.

It calls for the stationing of certain troops in the Philippines, Hawaii, and the Canal Zone. The minimum number of troops that would be required to hold these positions until they could be reinforced is provided for in the report, and most of them, with the exception of those that are to go to Panama, are now stationed at their garrisons.

The remaining troops have been organized into three divisions, one for the Atlantic, one for the Pacific, and one for the central department.

O'CONNOR ORDERS SMITH TO BE HANGED ON FEB. 13.

Lawyer's Final Plea for Mercy and Criminal's Renunciation of His Confession Avails Naught.

Roswell C. F. Smith will pay for the murder of little Hazel Weinstein with his own life on Feb. 13. In the Criminal court yesterday Judge O'Connor sentenced Smith to be hanged on that day. It will be the fifth Saturday execution in the history of the county.

Smith's lawyer, Edward J. Cook, made a final plea for mercy before sentence was passed.

"Let the defendant stand," spoke the court, ignoring the lawyer's appeal. Smith, trembling, rose to his feet.

"I am not guilty!" he cried. "The police got what they call my confession when I was irresponsible. I have no remembrance of killing the girl."

"The sentence of this court," said the judge, "is that you be taken by the sheriff of this county to the county jail, from whence you came, and that you be safely kept and guarded until the 13th day of February, 1915, and that on that day, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, the sheriff take you to the gallows within the walls of the county jail and hang you by the neck until you are dead. And may God have mercy on your soul."

Boy and Girl Disappear.

Police were asked yesterday to search for Martin Horvat, 8 years old, and his sister Anna, 7 years old, of 537 Pine street. The children left for school Friday morning and did not return. The boy carried a small air rifle.

WAR DOOMS CAT; SKIN TO COVER KAISER'S TROOPS

Pussy's Hide Efficacious in Winter and Germany Is Rounding Up Felines.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1914: By the Brentwood Co.]

Count Bernstorff, Germany's ambassador to the United States, or else Dr. Dernburg, the kaiser's personal agent in New York, declared the other day in print that Germany would "fight to the last cat and dog, before she would acknowledge herself beaten."

In so far as the cat is concerned, this remark acquires a new significance through the sudden heavy demand in Germany for cats. The winter in Europe has begun early, and is exceptionally severe, with the result that the sufferings of the armies in the field have been increased a hundredfold.

From the seats of war in eastern Germany and Austria and western Russia as well as in France and in Belgium, there come reports of the ravages among the troops caused by exposure to the terrible cold, and thousands of officers and men already have been placed hors de combat by frozen feet and hands—frozen so badly that there is no alternative but amputation.

Preventive of Rheumatism.

It is with a view of diminishing in a measure these sufferings, as far as the kaiser's soldiers are concerned, that the German authorities have hit upon the idea of providing the officers and men with mittens, neckpieces, hoods, and body belts made of the fur of the cat, which is particularly efficacious as a preventive of rheumatic affections.

Consequently, the municipalities of the various towns, cities, and villages have been called upon to furnish all the cat skins that they can collect, and they in turn have issued an apeal to the public to help them in the matter, to the best of their power.

Cat hunting has, therefore, ceased to be a sport for small boys, but has become a regularly established service to the state. It is a service that is appealing more especially to the younger element of the population.

But it is by no means restricted to the juveniles. Grown men and women, and even the aged and the infirm, are participating in the chase of poor pussy, and in the rounding up of every feline in sight, with an ardor wholly characteristic of Teuton thoroughness and patriotism.

May Give Bryan a Problem.

While the number of cats subject to the kaiser's rule is large, until now they have been regarded, by the authorities at any rate, in the light of a pest, and every conceivable endeavor has been made to discourage their increase.

The consequence is that there will probably not be enough cats to satisfy the German demand, and it is on the cards that it will be necessary to have recourse in the matter to neutral states, especially to America.

The question will then arise, for the first time in history, as to whether or not cats can be considered in the light of contraband of war.

As the state department at Washington has no precedent to guide it in the matter I fear that the problem may cost Secretary Bryan many an anxious hour before he finally indicates his views on the subject to the ambassadors of the belligerent powers, particularly to Sir Cecil Spring-Rice.

Others May Follow Lead.

It is quite possible that the other nations now engaged in the war may follow the example of Germany and have recourse to cats for the purpose of protecting their soldiers in the field from cold and from rheumatic complaints of a crippling nature.

In that event the demand upon the cat market of the United States will become still more heavy and it may be just as well to make preparations in view of that eventuality. Otherwise there may be corners in cats, and the American tabby may become a subject of keen competition between the purchasing agents here of the belligerent powers.

Japan Bought Cats from U. S.

It will not be the first time that American cats have been imported by a foreign government. Five or six years ago they were being dispatched by the shipload from here to Japan, where the imperial authorities, after the most extensive and elaborate of scientific investigation, had arrived at the conclusion that pussy constituted the only efficacious means of arresting the spread of the bubonic plague, through the extermination of the rats which are its principal sources of propagation.

The bubonic plague has now disappeared from the dominions of the mikado, and it would be of interest to learn from official sources at Tokio regarding the exact share which the cats have played in bringing about the extirpation of this pest.

War on Felines in America.

Here in the United States cats have never received their deserts, and in 1909 the department of agriculture came forth with a pronouncement to the effect that house cats should be exterminated, as vermin; that their virtues as destroyers of rats and mice were ridiculously exaggerated, and that by their slaughter of millions of useful wild birds they did each year far more harm than good.

Now we are accustomed to accord a good deal of attention to the department of agriculture. There is none that touches the people so nearly. It determines the quality and gauges the purity of our food, drink, and even medicaments. It indicates to us the bugs that we should cultivate and those which we should destroy as pests.

It professes to teach the farmer the mysteries of the rotation of crops. It is eloquent on the subject of the breeding of live stock and the raising of poultry, and even goes so far as to distribute seeds and plants in the most generous and free handed manner.

May Be Short on Supply.

Consequently the proclamation of the department of agriculture concerning cats resulted in a vigorous onslaught on homeless and stray cats.

In New York alone they were killed off by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at the rate of many thousands each week in that summer, while ever since the protection theretofore accorded to them, as a soft-footed, efficient servant of the household has been denied and they have become an object of official and in many cases private persecution; indeed, of a war of extermination so severe that the United States may not be in a position to satisfy possibly the demand of the old world upon the American cat supply.

Serious to the Cat.

The official withdrawal of protection to the cat in this country has been a serious matter—that is, to the cat. For almost alone in the brute creation it finds no mention whatsoever in the Bible. Many a beast and many a bird has been preserved from cruelty that would otherwise have fallen to its share by the reflections that it was the work of the Creator and recorded as such in the pages of holy writ.

Nearly every other animal finds a place in the old or the new testament. But no allusion is made to pussy, even in the Apocalypse, although it must have been known to the Jews both in the time of Moses and in the days of the founder of Christianity, since in those ages it was an object of worship in Egypt.

One might have thought that Levitical law would have included the cat among the unclean animals as unfit for human food. But although we have no reason to believe that the Hebrews did eat cats, the code which owed its origin to Moses does not anywhere specifically forbid its consumption as an article of food.

Cat and Witchcraft.

It is perhaps just because cats are so pointedly ignored by the Bible, the talmud, and the koran that they have been from ancient times identified in a measure with the spirit of evil. In the middle ages the cat was invariably associated with notions of witchcraft.

Pussy was either the familiar of the witch, and the object to which she addressed her incantations, or else she was the witch herself. Indeed, at most of the trials of alleged witches in olden times, which resulted in their being consigned to death, either by fire at the stake or by drowning, they were charged, on the strength of sworn testimony, with having at given moments transformed themselves into cats. Every old print portrayed witches riding through the air astride a broom with a cat, usually coal black, perched either fore or aft on the broom.

A Few More Hints on Christmas Mails.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Postmaster General Burleson today issued another statement to the public urging early mailing of Christmas packages in order to insure their delivery on time.

Here are some of the postmaster general's suggestions to Christmas gift senders:

Be sure each package is properly packed and addressed before offering it for mailing.

Prepay all postage or your parcel will be held for postage.

Write the address plainly and completely, giving street and number for city destinations and rural route or box number for country destinations.

Your name and address must appear on the face of your parcel, preferably in the upper left hand corner and within the parcel.

Pack securely, wrap in stout paper, and tie well with string cord.

Reinforce canes, umbrellas, golf sticks, and similar articles with strips of wood, or otherwise wrap them to withstand the ordinary risks of handling and transportation.

Pack hats in strong boxes. The ordinary pasteboard boxes must be crated.

Use a stout box, thoroughly wrapped for shipping cut flowers, candies, etc.

Mark all parcels containing crockery, breakable toys, etc., "Fragile."

Mark hampers or containers in which dressed fowl, vegetables, fruits, eggs, butter and the like are shipped, "Perishable."

In shipping articles having sharp points or edges, pad the points and edges so that they cannot cut through their covering.

You should insure valuable parcels. The fee is 5 cents for values up to $25 and 10 cents for values up to $50.

STRIKING STUDENTS REFUSE APOLOGY PRINCIPAL ASKS.

Eau Claire School Board Backs Up Mr. Jack and 22 Boys Face Expulsion in Row Over Girl.

Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Only one of the twenty-three boy students ordered by the school board to sign a statement apologizing to F. M. Jack, local high school principal, has signed and gone back to school.

The demand for the apology grew out of a student strike provoked by Mr. Jack's objection to 15 year old Florence Blood's way of wearing her hair down her back in curls.

Failure to sign the statement meant expulsion. Three boys were expelled for six months. A committee appointed by the parents of the boys to wait on the school board was told that body would not recede from its original stand. Interesting developments are expected.

WEEK'S BATTLES BRING CHANGES IN WAR FORTUNE

Capture of Belgrade Shows That Servian Army Is at Desperate Point.

BY J. W. T. MASON.

[Former European Manager of United Press.]

New York, Dec. 5.—The capture of Belgrade by the Austrians, while having no bearing on the large military problems of the war, was the week's most important gain for any of the belligerents. The Servian army is so demoralized that it does not seem capable of resuming the offensive, regardless of the duration of hostilities. Russia is unable to relieve the distress of the smaller Slav community, whose helplessness was the original cause of the war.

Servia can be saved, apparently, only if Roumania moves an army into the unhappy country, or if Italy, by declaring war against the dual monarchy, compels Austria to withdraw from Servia for a campaign along the Italian border. These possibilities are not so near realization as to dispel a strong hope among the Austrians that when the war ends Servia will be in their possession. Such a termination would put Vienna in an ideal position to bargain for the restoration of Galicia.

Reach Standstill in Poland.

The campaign in Poland has remained at a standstill during the week. It does not, however, resemble the deadlock that has so long existed in France and Belgium. Both Russians and Germans are much more mobile than are the enemies in the west. The Russians have been trying constantly to get around Von Hindenberg's front and cut his communications. They have not succeeded only because of the German speed in transporting numerically smaller troops to places where the Slav lines are weakest.

Reports have been circulated in Petrograd during the week that the czar has dismissed Gen. Rennenkampf, who was one of the few Russian generals to win laurels in the Japanese war and to return home with the lessons of Manchuria well learned. It is not probable that Rennenkampf has gone, but the report seems to mean that disputes concerning responsibility for the failure of Russia's strategy are developing among the army commanders. This condition of distrust is not a happy augury for the future effectiveness of the Slav offensive.

Change in Western Battle.

In the western battle area the allies have been attempting during the week to put themselves on the offensive for the first time since the early weeks of the war. Not only are small successes reported in Flanders, but Paris intimates the initiative once more is being taken in Alsace and Lorraine. The German statements bear out the interpolation that the kaiser's troops are now on the defensive in the west. For the first time Berlin locates the fighting in the Meuse region by its proximity to Metz instead of Verdun.

It is probable that the sudden change of offensive in France and Belgium is due to the withdrawal of German troops for operations in Russia.

There is no indication as yet that the allies have been largely reinforced. Bordeaux officially states that the French army now is "equal to what it was on Aug. 2." This means reinforcements have done no more than kept pace with French casualty losses.

British Grow in Strength.

The British army is undoubtedly growing in strength slowly, but not sufficiently to account for a general allied offensive unless the Germans have weakened their battle line. The week, however, has seen the offensive in Flanders change sides, whatever be the reason for it. The time is now coming when it will be demonstrated whether numerical superiority will permit the allies to develop better offensive tactics than the Germans have done.

Girl Sets Record at Law School.

Miss BERTHA MacGREGOR

Miss Bertha MacGregor not only has the highest mark in her class at the Kent College of Law; at 22 she is the youngest member of it, and her average of 99 is the highest ever recorded at the school. The fact was learned yesterday in connection with the announcement of prizes for the year. Miss MacGregor will receive her degree in June.

The students at Kent divide themselves, according to their averages, into flunkers, students, sharks, and geniuses. Miss MacGregor has a category all her own—she is a "super-genius."

"I have only two marks of which I am ashamed," she said yesterday. "I got a 95 in torts and the same in agency. I am proudest of my mark in common law pleading, in which Prof. E. C. Higgins gave me 99 5-6. Of course, I have two or three 100s. I got one in criminal law and another in domestic relations and another in equity jurisprudence."

Miss MacGregor was born in Chicago and she is a graduate of the Riverside high school. She works in a downtown law office during the day and attends law school at night.

"I hardly ever study more than two hours a day," she said yesterday.

Miss MacGregor will receive a prize of $100 for leading her class. The other prize winners are William T. Pridmore, '16; George A. Eheim, '15, and Harry I. Tiffany, '16.

PASSENGERS ON LUSITANIA FORCED TO MEET INQUIRY.

Unusual Precautions Taken by Officials to Prevent Suspicious Persons Getting Aboard Liner.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Unusual precautions were taken by officials of the Cunard line to see that no suspicious persons were among the 1,190 passengers who sailed for Liverpool on the Lusitania this morning. The ship was delayed more than half an hour so that every passenger and every ticket could pass under the careful eyes of the company's officials.

Just why these extra precautions were taken could not be learned, but it was reported that fear was entertained that some fanatic might seek passage with the intention of blowing up the ship in midocean.

Another report was to the effect that German spies might be seeking to land in England as Americans coming over on business on the Lusitania. Neither of these reports could be verified.

OLD FRIGATE GOES ASHORE.

Ancient Constellation, Being Towed to Station by Tug, Grounds in Chesapeake Bay.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—The old frigate Constellation, being towed by the naval tug Ontario from this city to its regular station at Newport, R. I., grounded near Thimble Shoals in Chesapeake bay, according to a telegram from Capt. de Steiguer, acting commandant of the Norfolk navy yard.

The Constellation is at anchor, the message says, but "apparently dragging." The Ontario also is anchored with the tow line fouled in the propeller. A fleet of tugs and the revenue cutter Itasca are standing by.

Strong northeast winds add to the seriousness of the situation, the message says.

WORK BUREAU GETS RESULTS

Club Women Obtain Permanent Posts for Many Jobless Girls.

SOME CASES IN POINT.

Permanent results for good from the employment center of the Chicago Woman's club are commencing to be shown. Approximately 150 women have been given regular positions. Nearly seventy-five a day have been put to work in the emergency sewing room of the center.

A few cases of known good results were given out yesterday by the bureau. One of them, as told by Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, follows:

"The first day of the bureau's existence a frail little woman applied for immediate help, saying that her husband had been out of work for months, and that neither she nor her husband had had anything to eat for two days.

Children Cared For.

"Her three children had been cared for by a local charitable agency and she was given work in the Red Cross workroom at a dollar a day. Clothes were supplied for the entire family.

"Through one of the men's organizations a position was found for the husband, some necessary dental work was done for the woman, and today she left the workroom to take her place in the family so that the children no longer will have to be placed out during the day.

"Her husband is receiving good wages and as long as he keeps his position there is no danger that the family will need further assistance."

The members of the committee in charge of the center are working hard for more funds. The emergency sewing room is taxing the resources of the club women.

Job for a Typist.

"The second day the center was opened a slender, dark haired girl begged to have her application taken, although it was time to close the office. She was admitted because she had spent her last nickel to apply for work. She had had several years' experience as a stenographer, and was sent at once to a firm in the loop district.

"Yesterday she returned to report that she had been accepted and had been told that she would receive an increase in salary next month. When she applied at the center no one in the family was working. Her brother, encouraged by her success, applied to the pastor of their church for help, and he too is now working, so that they are able to take care of their parents."

They expected to employ only thirty women at most in this room. They have come in contact with so many women and girls in actual destitution, however, that the number who have been given the emergency employment has steadily increased since the first day, when sixteen persons were put to work.

MRS. YOUNG GETS UNITED SUPPORT OF CLUB WOMEN.

Education Board's Rooms to Be Thronged with Feminine Partisans Election Day.

All the moral support that hundreds of women can bring to bear is to be used next Wednesday toward the election of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young as superintendent of schools.

At a meeting of the committee on public affairs yesterday in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club it was decided to crowd the board rooms with women. Practically every woman present promised to take the word back to the club she represented and to urge her fellow members to go to the board rooms on the day of the election. The women present represented clubs whose aggregate membership runs into the thousands.

Open Ballot Favored.

The report of the school section of the organization, which asked for an open ballot on the election of the superintendent of schools, was indorsed unanimously.

"Without regard to the present situation," said Mrs W. S. Hefferan, chairman of the school section, "the board of education ought not to use the secret ballot. Fundamentally it is not sound or right. It is medieval and archaic.

"The women of Chicago want Mrs. Young returned to the superintendency. Her practical, humane, sensible handling of the fraternity situation is a sample of her work as superintendent which appeals to all women."

Bewail Loss of County Officials.

Mrs. Jean Ellis Driver gave an extremely pessimistic report on the county board situation.

"This is the first time since this organization was formed," she said, "that the county section has not had something encouraging or of a constructive nature to report. But no other section has had such an appalling catastrophe as we have had.

"We feel that we have lost a tremendous force for constructive and inspiring work in the retirement of Mr. McCormick, Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Mullenbach, and others."

Mrs. Richard Gray gave a report on the sanitary district and Mrs. Helen Scanlan on the city council.

ELECTIONS GIVE HOPE OF VICTORY TO REPUBLICANS

Result in November Causes Optimism in Regard to the Chances in 1916.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—In no more striking manner is the result of the recent congressional and state elections reflected than in the attitude of the senators and representatives who are returning for the last session of this congress.

The Republicans are buoyantly optimistic over the marked turn of the political tide in their favor, Progressives are downhearted, and Democrats disclose a chastened spirit and misgivings concerning the outcome of the presidential election in 1916, upon which the events of the next two years will have their bearing.

By the Republicans the recent election is regarded as a forerunner of the return of complete control of the administrative and legislative branches of the government to their party in 1916.

Hope for Senate Control.

The Republicans are confident of overturning the Democratic majority of fourteen in the senate of the next congress, a tremendously more difficult feat than electing a Republican president or a Republican house of representatives.

The Democrats generally admit the correctness of Col. Harvey's statement that their party has been "unmistakably warned" by the outcome of the election.

Incidentally Col. Harvey, who shortly before the election became reconciled to the president and again is his champion, admits that the Democratic national committee's analysis of the returns comes dangerously near to forecasting a Republican victory two years hence. The colonel also admits that the Democratic party must restore prosperity in the next two years or inevitably "make way for another" party in power.

Thirty-two Senators Face Test.

As now composed the senate has fifty-two Democrats, forty-three Republicans, and one Progressive. After March 4 next it will have fifty-five Democrats, forty Republicans, and one Progressive.

Thirty-two senators will go before the people in 1916 for reëlection. Of these seventeen are Democrats and fifteen are Republicans. All of the Republicans come from normally Republican states. Of the seventeen Democrats only five come from the solid south and twelve come from states which are debatable territory in every election. Thus, to gain control of the senate the Republicans must win eight of the states north of Mason and Dixon's line, now represented by Democratic senators whose terms expire March 4, 1917.

Can this be done? The Republicans say yes. The Democrats say no. The Republicans predict they will sweep the entire list. The Democrats will concede several losses, without specifying which states are to be lost, but they assert they will win enough to maintain their control in the upper house at least two years longer.

Democrats Whose Terms Expire.

The Democrats whose terms expire in 1916 are: Ashurst [Ariz.], Bryan [Fla.], Chilton [W. Va.], Culberson [Tex.], Hitchcock [Neb.], Johnson [Me.], Kern [Ind.], Lea [Tenn.], Lee [Md.], Martine [N. J.], Meyers [Mont.], O'Gorman [N. Y.], Pittman [Nev.], Pomerene [O.], Reed [Mo.], Swanson [Va.], Williams [Miss.].

Of these under normal conditions Ashurst, Bryan, Culberson, Lea, Reed, Swanson, and Williams, or other Democrats in their places, would be sent back to the senate. However, Lea and Reed have such strong factional fights on their hands that the Republicans look upon them as defeated already. Because of his fight on the president Reed will not have the administration's support in Missouri. Nor will he have the support of his party organization. If he is successful in the primaries a large faction of his party appears certain to bolt him in the election, probably insuring the victory of the Republican candidate.

Lea Faces Hard Contest.

Lea faces similar division in his party in Tennessee. However, he is making a strong bid for the support of the opposing faction of Democrats there. Thus far he has been unsuccessful in his bidding. If defeated for the nomination, Lea's supporters may bolt the ticket. His opponents are extremely bitter toward him, charging him with having deserted his party on several occasions during his career.

The difficulty the Republicans face in West Virginia is not the strength of the opposing party, but the factional differences in their own party. If they get together, Chilton well may be marked as defeated.

Hitchcock of Nebraska will have the fight of his life if a strong candidate is put up by the Republicans. The Bryan wing of the Nebraska Democracy is opposed to Hitchcock. A bolt is likely to be the result of the nomination of a senatorial candidate by either of these factions.

Martine Probably Will Go.

Martine of New Jersey is regarded as a sure victim, even though he represents the president's own state. Martine won his seat in the senate in the famous fight between himself and "Jim" Smith, former senator and Democratic boss of New Jersey. Running in a primary where only a handful of votes were cast, Martine got the Democratic nomination. Then, when the New Jersey assembly went Democratic, Smith bobbed up as a candidate.

Woodrow Wilson, governor elect, swung his influence to Martine and forced his election. Since then, however, Martine has opposed Mr. Wilson in many ways, with the result that he may have to make the fight for reëlection without Wilson support. The Republicans carried a majority of the New Jersey congressmen in the recent election.

Ohio Returns to Party.

Ohio, according to the results in the recent election, is back in the Republican fold. Senator Pomerene of Ohio was sent to the senate from the position of lieutenant governor. Already he is campaigning hard for reëlection in 1916. The Republicans are massing their forces against him, however. If Gov. Willis lands a place on the national ticket, they feel certain Pomerene will go. If Willis declines such a place, it is probable he may make the campaign against the senator.

Likewise, if the presidential boom of Ambassador Herrick falls through, the ambassador may make the race for the senate. There is a wealth of material in the Republican party, while Pomerene has but a small organization, as a result of the wrecking of his party in the state a month ago.

Republicans Facing Test.

While looking over the chances for victory over the Democrats, the Republicans are not overlooking weak places in their own defense.

Republican senators whose terms expire in 1916 are:

Catron [N. M.]
Clapp [Minn.]
Clark [Wyo.]
Du Pont [Del.]
La Follette [Wis.]
Lippitt [R. I.]
Lodge [Mass.]
McCumber [N. D.]
McLean [Conn.]
Oliver [Pa.]
Page [Vt.]
Sutherland [Utah]
Townsend [Mich.]

Senator Poindexter of Washington, Progressive, will also be up for reëlection in 1916.

Of these, La Follette and Townsend appear to be the only ones who face fights for reëlection. La Follette, however, is confident of retrieving his injured political fortunes.

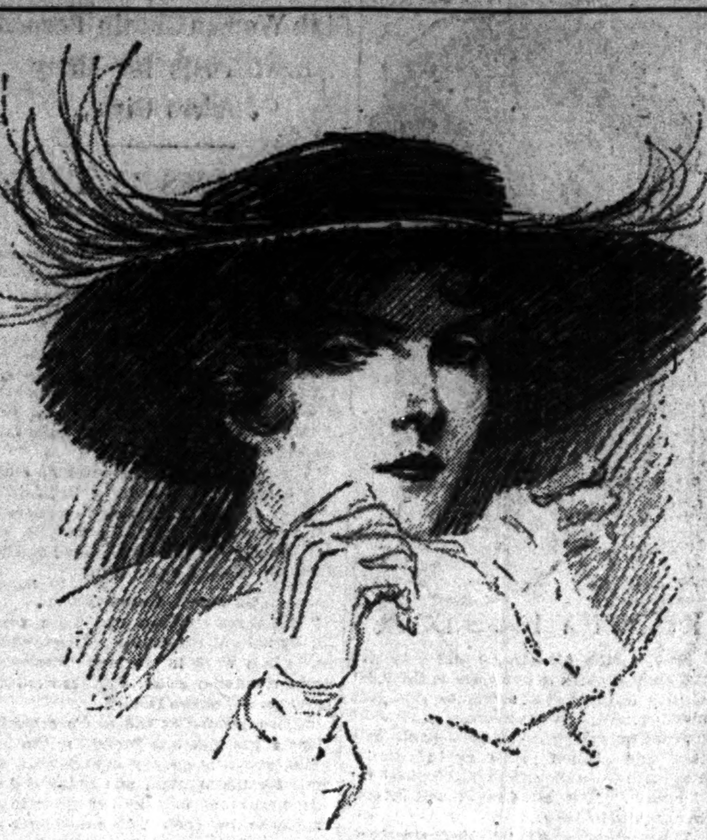
Former Gov. Osborn of Michigan will oppose Townsend for the nomination in that state. Gov. Ferris probably will be the Democratic candidate. Senator Poindexter has a great personal following in Washington, but the Republicans swept the state in November, despite strong Democratic and Progressive tickets. They expect to sweep it again in 1916.

ARTHUR ORR GOES TO FRANCE

President of National Aeroplane Company Will Be Second Secretary to Embassy.

Arthur Orr of 2126 Lincoln parkway, president of the National Aeroplane company and an aviation enthusiast, is on his way to Paris with his wife and family to take up his duties as second secretary to the American embassy at the former French capital. Mrs. Orr, who was Miss Alice Meigs, will join the large number of American women engaged in Red Cross work in France. Mr. Orr, who graduated from Princeton in 1906, held a post in London during the last administration, and at one time held an office in the orient. He is a member of the Aero club of Illinois, the University, Saddle and Cycle, and other local clubs.

Woman in "White Slave" Case Accused of Attempted Bribery.



MISS JESSIE COPE.

BRIBERY CHARGE AGAINST GIRL IN ALEXANDER CASE

Miss Cope Said to Have Offered to Split $50,000 with Prosecutor Clyne.

a possible maximum fine of $75,000 and three years in prison.

Grand Jury Not Through.

The grand jury is not through with the case. A searching investigation of all circumstances connected with alleged attempted bribery will be made during the next few days.

Charges of blackmail made by Attorney Henry Hayes, counsel for Col. Alexander, were taken up during the day by Mr. Clabaugh. The government is going to the bottom of every phase of the blackmail charges. Mr. Clabaugh sent a telegram to Attorney Hayes asking that all blackmail evidence against the woman in his possession be given the government for grand jury purposes.

Attempts at Settlement.

Before seeking the aid of federal officials to help her use the Mann act as a club over the "colonel's" head, it is charged, Miss Cope made several attempts on her own account to obtain a settlement from Col. Alexander. An offer of $5,000 was made to her, according to the government's information, but she refused it.

It is understood the grand jury also is considering a conspiracy feature of the case. This inquiry will be conducted on the theory that Miss Cope also can be prosecuted under the Mann act on a charge of conspiring to violate the law by traveling interstate with Col. Alexander.

Expected to Marry Him.

Until last August Miss Cope expected to marry Col. Alexander, according to her acquaintances in Los Angeles. She and her mother had been in that city since last April.

Mrs. E. Zuber, proprietor of an apartment house, said Col. Alexander appeared to be attentive to Miss Cope.

"Miss Cope's mother generally was present," Mrs. Zuber said. "Before leaving here Miss Cope said she expected to be married to Col. Alexander."

The Colonel's Verses.

Miss Cope turned over to the government the complete "Alexander" verse she said Col. Alexander wrote to her as a New Year's greeting in 1913 to his "great big girl of the golden west." Here it is:

A WORD OF WELCOME.

Alexander of the olden days
Was said to sadly weep
Because there were no other worlds
To conquer and to keep.
How happy would this man have been,
To cure his many ills,
If he'd had luck enough to see
The grand old Berkshire hills.
But in these later, better days
Of trusts and politics
Another Alexander came
Who knew the modern tricks.
He saw the beauty of the place,
He cared no more to roam,
So built a cozy bungalow
And made another home.
The fair fields lie on either hand,
The soughing pine trees sigh,
And far and wide, on every side,
The mountains meet the sky.
It's hard to realize it now,
But many years ago
The Indians raised Merry Ned
Upon the fields below.
They drank the Sand springs water,
Which cured all human ills,
And took the Sand springs ginger ale
Instead of doctors' pills.
We welcome, then, this stranger
Within our peaceful vale;
May all his days be hapy ones
And blessings never fail.
May all the benedictions
Descend upon his roof—
Since Nelson Roberts built it
We know it's waterproof.
May life be full of sunshine,
May heaven blessings send On Col. Alexander,
Our generous, welcome friend.

Alexander and Miss Cope met in Los Angeles two years ago. At that time he was living in Pasadena. Last year Miss Cope told Mrs. Esther Church, another apartment house proprietor, that she intended to marry Col. Alexander, whom she described as a very wealthy man.

WILL OLD GUARD SENATORS STAND LANE'S BAITING?

His Caustic Comment on the "Distinguished Gentlemen" Goes the Limit.

a department, and there is an upheaval to assist him.

"Sometimes it looks as if a couple of senators will fight, but they never do, for some one always gets in between them before the blow is struck. I have never interfered myself, for I would like to see them scrap.

Says It "Grows on One."

"I am told that being a senator grows on one. There are a few who have been there a lifetime—they're from the south—they like it, and I am informed that when one of them can't be returned he becomes positively and completely sick. Senator This and Senator That and the 'distinguished gentleman' stuff kind of turns the heads of some of them. But it is an expensive game.

"No one can get away with any money at Washington. The people are organized to take your last cent. An ordinary citizen can rent a house for $30 a month, but a senator would have to pay $150 or more for the same house. The game of 'soak the senator' goes down the line. I know a senator who sends his colored clerk to buy his shirts, because the colored boy can get them for half what the senator would have to pay.

"Now about appropriations. There is all sorts of graft, and most of the senators have a pet graft to stick into the appropriation bills. The taxpayers are not considered. But these things will change and the 'pork barrel' will be plugged so that one's hands cannot be shoved in to the elbow."

Investigators' Role Hard.

Senator Lane told about forcing an investigation of the steel trust, in which he claims it was discovered that $60,000,000 in rebates had been paid, and he said: "The end is not in sight.

"Before the investigation of rebates is through I believe $400,000,000 will be shown up. But, believe me, the big fellows are tough boys to go against, and they don't like being investigated.

"I've discovered this—the senate, with all its hot air and uppishness, is nearer to the people than the house of representatives, and is getting nearer all the time. Those standpat senators, they are Republicans and Democrats, don't know what to make of the Oregon people and the Oregon system. They look at Chamberlain and yours truly, Democrats from a Republican state, and shake their heads. They can't make it out.

Strong for Submarines.

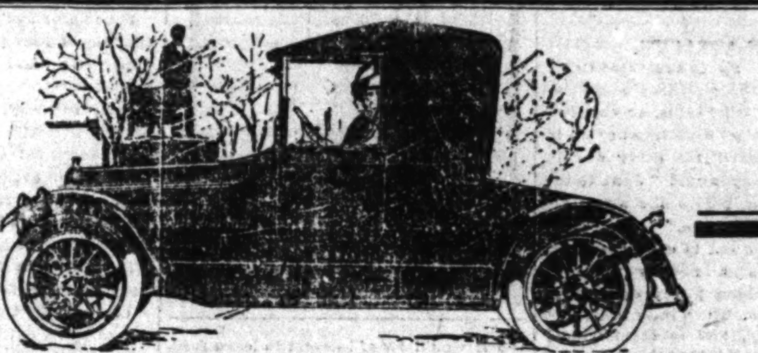
"When we get back to work again we're going to prepare for peace by getting well heeled. I'm in favor of building a flock of these boats that scoot under water. We can build a bunch for what one battleship costs, and they're better and we can cover more territory with them.

"The United States let Germany get one of the main submarine inventions from us—the old chap who made the invention came to my office often—and we don't want to repeat the mistake. If we can get the men with the waterless river and the boatless river, and the chap whose river improvement has cost the government $325 for every ton of freight moved, to be reasonable, we can build those submarines."

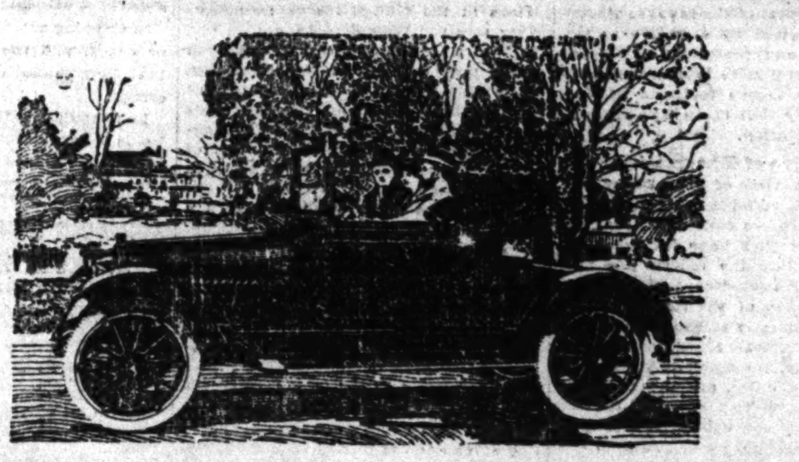
ETHEL NOYES TO WED DEC. 19

Death of Bride's Grandmother Causes Abandonment of Church Service—Quiet Home Marriage.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Plans for the wedding of Miss Ethel Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Noyes of Washington, formerly of Chicago, to Thomas Blagden Jr. have been changed owing to the recent death of Miss Noyes' grandmother, Mrs. Crosby S. Noyes of Washington. The wedding will take place on Dec. 19 as planned originally, but the service will be a quiet celebration at the family residence, 1239 Vermont avenue, instead of at St. John's church.



COZY COMFORT WHEN IT STORMS



An Open Roadster When It's Fair

Here is a motor car that you must admit meets your hopes in a practical roadster. It is an all-weather, all-the-year-'round car. The acme of comfort on stormy winter days and yet open, airy, and delightful in the sunny summer time.

For theater and social use, for business or calling—driven by your chauffeur or yourself—it is called by hundreds of enthusiastic owners the final limit of closed car comfort and perfection.

When the top is up, by raising the door sash, you have a completely enclosed car. Winter driving then becomes your pleasure—you are protected from wind and snow. The top tips back instantly with ease. Then you have an open roadster.

Creates New Interest

The oldest motorist will feel new interest when he looks at this HUDSON Six-40 Convertible Roadster; a new model for 1915.

This Convertible Roadster body is built on the famous HUDSON Six chassis. Such strength with such lightness means much, when you figure your saving in tire cost.

Luxury That Is Practical

Here also is the modern ideal of a handsome roadster. Every detail shows the artist's touch. Wide seats, high back, deep cushions. All the latest conveniences. All the regular equipment and much that's rare or exclusive.

An exterior stream line design and finish unapproachable. An interior so complete in appointments that no car at any price surpasses it.

End Over-Tax Now

This new HUDSON Roadster, seating three, is as large as any man can want. The wheelbase is 123 inches.

Better materials and master designing have cut down overweight. It now underweighs other cars of its size and power. This saves immensely in tire costs, yet there never was a sturdier car.

The HUDSON new type motor—small bore and long stroke—has given to this six lower operative costs than fours.

All This for $1,750

Just see what this HUDSON price buys—what fine engineering, what beauty, what comfort, what up to date equipment. No car of the season offers greater attractions.

This Service, Too, Is Yours

HUDSON satisfaction is guaranteed by the Geyler Service for HUDSONS. Every HUDSON does its duty every day in the year. Geyler owners of HUDSONS will tell you that. Their cars are always "on the street." We sell you the HUDSON for your pleasure and convenience. And we keep it so by regular examinations and all necessary adjustments. This makes HUDSON ownership your motor car delight.

Come judge for yourself, at the Geyler show rooms, this car that all men talk of.

We Will Transform Your Own Piano Into a Modern 88 Note

PLAYER PIANO for $175

Don't trade your good piano for what may be an inferior instrument with a player in it and pay $350.00 to $700.00 to boot. Let us build a player into the piano you already own and save you $200.00 to $300.00.

This is a factory to consumer proposition. We have no agents or salesmen. But we have a force of expert workmen who know how to do this work and do it right at a saving to you of $200 to $300.

We guarantee positively not to DAMAGE your piano in any way. We will change its outward appearance only by making panels in top and bottom of the front.

You will still be able to play your piano by hand and its tone will be as sweet and pure as ever.

We promise you that it will be superior to more expensive players in that it will have no mechanical sounds, but will be sheerly musical.

An Ideal Christmas Gift

Our Player will play any 88 note music. We have testimonials from hundreds of satisfied customers.

We guarantee to keep the Player in perfect repair free of charge.

Deafness

From All Causes, Head Noises and Other Ear Troubles Easily and Permanently Relieved!

Thousands who were formerly deaf, now hear distinctly every sound — whispers even do not escape them. Their life of loneliness has ended and all is now joy and sunshine. The impaired or lacking portions of their ear drums have been reinforced by simple little devices scientifically constructed for that purpose.

Wilson Common-Sense Ear Drums

often called "Little Wireless Phones for the Ears" are restoring perfect hearing in every condition of deafness or defective hearing from causes such as Catarrhal Deafness, Relaxed or Sunken Drums, Thickened Drums, Roaring and Hissing Sounds, Perforated, Wholly or Partially Destroyed Drums, Discharge from Ears, etc. No matter what the case or how long standing it is, testimonials received show marvelous results. Common-Sense Drums strengthen the nerves of the ears and concentrate the sound waves on one point of the natural drums, thus successfully restoring perfect hearing where medical skill even fails to help. They are made of a soft, sensitized material, comfortable and safe to wear. They are easily adjusted by the wearer and out of sight when worn. What has done so much for thousands of others will help you. Don't delay—Write today for our FREE 168 page BOOK on DEAFNESS—giving you full particulars.

CHARLIE AND BEN, JUST BOYS, KEEP A "HOME" GOING

Mother Ill and Father Gone, They Support the Family and Do Housework.

Charlie and Ben are trying to keep the home going.

Charlie has a job as errand boy at $5 a week, because he is the brave age of 14 and has his "working papers."

Ben, who is 12 years old, goes to school and does the washing, cooking, and housekeeping for his sick mother and little sister, 6 years old.

The two small boys have been running the household for almost a year. Their father was taken to an asylum and he will never again be of any use to his family. The boys, however, have a hope of maintaining the home for their mother and sister.

At first the mother tried to support the family by taking in washing. Charlie, then in school covered a milk route after hours to help out. But recently the mother's health failed and now the boys have to do it all.

Seeks Advice on "Home" Work.

Ben went to the district office of the United Charities yesterday seeking advice on his domestic duties.

"I want to see Miss M. right away, if I can, please," he said, "because I've got to hurry home and get the supper. Charlie'll be home from work pretty soon and he's always hungry."

Ben and Charlie need a Good Fellow's attention. They will not be able to have much of a Christmas for mother and sister unless a Good Fellow helps them. Then besides the interest of a Good Fellow who might give them some personal attention probably would help them grow up as better citizens. Also the rent, $7 a month, is quite a problem at their house.

It's a big Good Fellow opportunity.

Business Men Join Movement.

Business organizations and institutions with a desire to give aid and attention to the poor at Christmas are adopting the Good Fellow way. Among these organizations is the North Clark Street Business Men's Improvement association. When the association at a recent meeting took up a discussion of the Christmas giving, Otto Klemperer, president of the Marcus and Klemperer company, suggested the Good Fellow plan of THE TRIBUNE.

Forty-five merchants agreed to the scheme and proposed giving food, clothing, shoes, toys, furniture, and other gifts to the poor of the district.

Plans are in the making to supply the association with the names and addresses of the needy of their district through the Good Fellow department.

Will Take Gifts to Home.

The merchants of the association will use their automobiles and delivery facilities to take the gifts to the families Christmas eve. The association does not propose entirely to confine its activities to its district, but expects to extend its giving over the north side.

The Woodlawn Business Men's association has instituted a Good Fellow campaign in coöperation with the South Chicago district office of the United Charities. Dr. W. H. Falker has been named the chairman of the relief committee. which will have charge of the deliveries to be made by members of the association.

Candy Company to Help.

A candy company has sent to the Good Fellow department for the names and addresses of 100 children, who are each to receive a box of bonbons by mail Christmas.

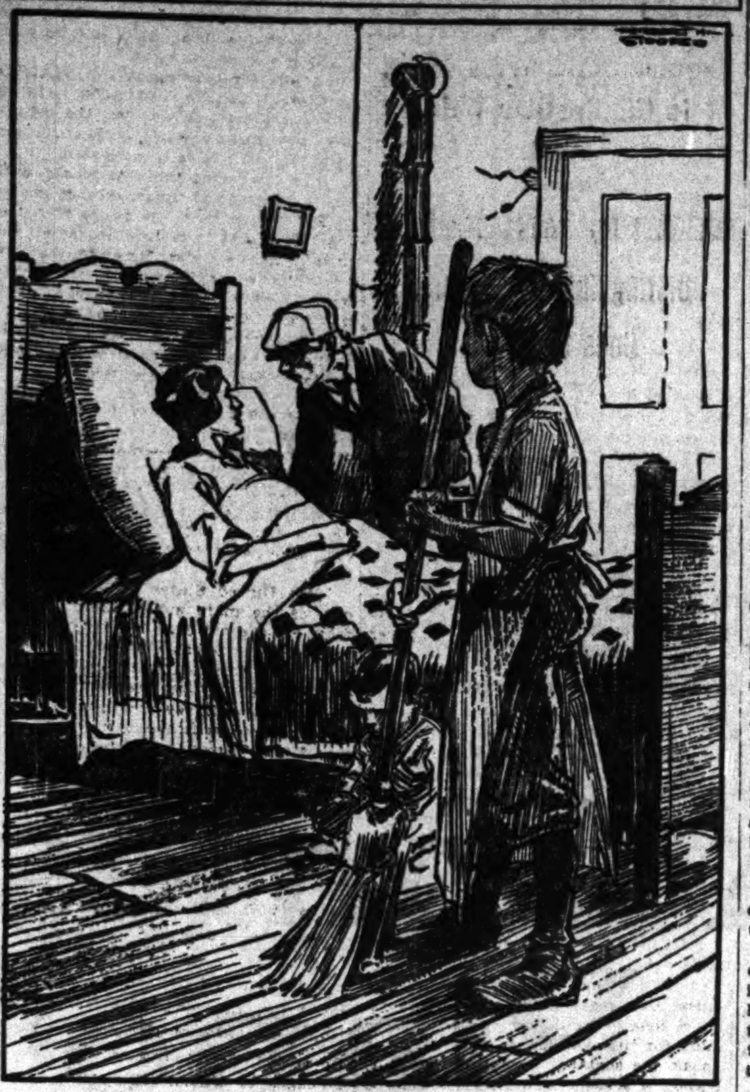
Saturday brought increased activity among the Good Fellows. Throughout the day there was a constant series of applications for families to be supplied with Christmas dinners and gifts.

"Give me some family way out somewhere on the outskirts, somebody that would be likely to be neglected," one Good Fellow asked. "I have a machine and I can drive out and take care of them easily. I don't care how many there are in the family or what sort of folks they are, just so they really need a Christmas and are likely to appreciate it."

Runaway Horse Hits Auto.

Pedestrians were alarmed yesterday when a runaway horse attached to a wagon of the American Express company crashed into an automobile in charge of George L. Berman at South Dearborn street, between West Monroe and West Adams street. Berman was shaken up, but escaped being thrown to the street.

Here Is a Scene Typical of Many a Chicago "Home."



This is an artist's impression of a peek into the L. home, where Ben and Charlie, 12 and 14 years old, are trying to earn the living and keep house They will need a Good Fellow Christmas.

Every Case Shown Here Is Known to Deserve Good Fellow Aid.

Here are some timely Christmas suggestions. If any of them appeals to you there is a very simple, direct way to help these families. The first step is to send your name and address to the Good Fellow Department, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Today is a good time.

D.—Mr. D. is in the hospital for the insane. His wife and five children live at the top of a dark flight of stairs in $4 rooms. The children are not very strong, as they have never had sufficiently nourishing food, and most of their fun comes from "make believe" and imaginary joys. Mrs. D. is nearly down hearted, Who will help her with $1.12 a week for milk for the children, $4.50 a week for food, and $8 a month for rent? [Northwestern district.]

M.—Mrs. M. is a widow and only able to do light work. A girl of 14 has been working in a factory, helping her mother to support the family, but has been laid off on account of slack work. The other children are young. The St. Vincent de Paul society gives the family $1.50 a week and the county is assisting. The family is threatened with an eviction unless rent of $7 is paid at once. [Central district.]

S.—Mr. S. is dying in a hospital in the east. Mrs. S., who is a thrifty, neat, capable woman, has been supporting their three children for two years. For the last few months she has only been having irregular work, earning about $3.50 a week as a bread wrapper. She has now lost this position. Rent is due and the family must have assistance with food temporarily. Who will meet one month's rent of $7.50. [Central district.]

RUMELY COMPANY CHIEF SEES GOOD TIMES AHEAD.

Clarence S. Funk Is Optimistic Concerning Business and Financial Conditions.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Clarence S. Funk, president of the Rumely company, is optimistic concerning business conditions and the financial affairs of the nation's commercial and industrial interests, according to a statement given out here today.

"Periods such as we have just passed through are absolutely necessary, occasionally for the business welfare of a country," Mr. Funk said. "Such periods always result in increased prosperity for the country generally. If these periods did not come nobody would pay their debts and the country would be carried off its feet.

"Money is easier in New York, and that indicates something better in store for the country. After all, I believe President Wilson is about right when he says the troubles are merely psychological. Things tightened a little bit and every one got frightened. Just what they were afraid of no one knows."

President Funk refused to commit himself regarding the date the Rumely company would resume operations.

I am sending it to you so that you may use it to make the Christmas brighter for some other dear old lady. Had my mother been spared to spend it I am sure it would have been used to make some one else happier." Yesterday's contributions:

URGE CHEMICAL TARIFF AS AID TO ARMED DEFENSE

Experts Show Need of Domestic Industry for Making of Explosives.

The report of the committee of the American Chemical society on dyestuffs recommends a high protective tariff as the only means of furthering the manufacture of dyestuffs in the United States. The committee is composed of widely known industrial chemists and work on the report was started soon after the war in Europe when the German supply of dyes was cut off.

The report of the committee, with its recommendations, conclusions, and findings, is printed in full in the current issue of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. Bernhard C. Hesse of New York was chairman of the committee.

The committee found that the change in patent laws which was suggested as a means of protecting the dye industry soon after the war is entirely impracticable and would not be effective.

Report Is Exhaustive.

It is the most exhaustive report made on the subject of industrial chemistry in the United States.

"It can be fairly stated that in general," the committee found, "the chemical industry of this country is efficiently exploited and is making full use of all the opportunities presented to it under the normal conditions existing prior to the state of hostilities.

"Some of the chemicals which are imported from abroad are made in considerable amounts in this country as well, and the amounts imported under normal conditions depend upon the ordinary normal fluctuations of business conditions both here and abroad.

Steps to Remedy Situation.

"With the stoppage of this foreign supply the domestic production was not at once capable of making up the deficiency, but in a number of instances the American manufacturers have taken steps to increase their capacity, and the strain in the market of those particular things will exist no longer than it will require to expand the manufacturing facilities to the proper extent. Among these are ammonia salts, barium chloride, barium nitrate, bleaching powder, sodium cyanide, yellow prussiate, sodium nitrate, sodium hydrosulphite, zinc dust.

"If, however, it be desired, and if the public necessity requires the introduction of the manufacture of explosives and further chemicals and dyestuffs into our home industry, such as coal tar product explosives, pharmaceuticals, medicinals, and other intermediates and finished coal tar products, then alterations of our tariff law are inevitable and the consumers in the first place and the public in general must share in the burden thus imposed.

For National Defense.

"If conditions of national defense in case of attack by a foreign power require us to manufacture our own explosives and to be, in that regard, independent of all foreign nations at all times, if our textile industries or any other of our industries requiring coal tar chemicals such as dyestuffs shall forever be protected and made independent of foreign nations for the supply of those materials, then the nation as a whole must bear the burden incident to such expansion.

"Under existing circumstances private enterprise and private capital have gone their limit. They have reached the limit for two reasons:

"The explosive, dye, and similar industries abroad are in a state of high development and of refined organization and are financially the best suited to carry on an offensive campaign against any nation attempting to take business away from them."

These are the conclusions of the committee after an exhaustive research and study of the market situation in the United States:

"Finally, it should be pointed out that the United States is by no means the only country whose chemical and allied business has been strained or upset by the European war. Each and every other country has felt the strain. British committees have gone into this same subject of expanding British chemical industries and, not only that, but also into the question of making their very basic necessities, and the reports have so far been adverse to any immediate relief by domestic manufacture.

"It is further clear that the stability of a complete domestic chemical industry, in so far as it depends upon foreign supplies, is bound up to a successful merchant marine and to an efficient banking condition just as is all our foreign business."

Industry Has Increased.

"Prior to the hostilities, domestic chemical industry was utilizing and exploiting every reasonable opportunity to its full extent. Since the outbreak of hostilities, domestic industry has increased its output just as fast as physical means could be provided and physical obstacles overcome.

"Since the outbreak of hostilities domestic plants that had theretofore been shut down or partly dismantled because of disastrous foreign competition are said to have resumed operation with caut on. A 30 per cent duty on some coal tar dyes for over thirty years has not produced a real coal tar dye industry in this country.

New Patent Laws Needed.

"To prevent the unfair underselling alleged to be practiced by foreigners in this country, the adoption of an effective anti-dumping clause. Changes in the patent laws, such as by compulsory licensing or compulsory working clauses, are wholly ineffective, do more harm than good and should not be attempted.

"Your committee recommends that this report be submitted to the appropriate committees of congress."

The report is signed by Bernhard C. Hesse, chairman; J. B. F. Herreshoff, H. A. Metz, I. F. Stone, D. W. Jayne J. Merritt Matthews, and Allen Rogers.

The committee reported also that the "intermediate" products which are derived from the dye and coal tar industries should also be taxed by the government so the factories here will be protected from cheap foreign products.

"BLUE SKY" LAW HELD VOID.

West Virginia Statute Seeks to Restrain Commerce and Abridge Rights, Is Ruling.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 5.—The West Virginia "blue sky" law was held to be unconstitutional by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in a decision handed down here late today. Judges J. C. Pritchard and A. G. Dayton concurred in the opinion, while Judge C. A. Wood dissented. The opinion declares the West Virginia statute seeks to restrain interstate commerce and to abridge the rights of citizens to buy and sell property.

Mrs. Jessie Mack Hamilton is giving a series of monthly musical recitals at 5037 Winthrop avenue the first Sunday of each month. Mrs. Hamilton will give a joint recital with Willard Flint, a bass soloist of Boston, Mass., in the Fine Arts theater at 3 o'clock today. Mr. Flint is a member of the Handel and Haydn society of Boston. Mrs. Hamilton recently returned from Europe, where her musical studies were stopped by the war.

TUNNEL ON DANUBE RUINED.

Great Bore Between Servia and Roumania Blown Up; Passage of Russian Transports Halted.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 5.—The great tunnel near Tychjetchar [Tekija] has been blown up by dynamite, thus severing communication between Servia and Roumania, according to advices from Nish, Servia, to the Rotterdam Courant. The passage of Russian transports along the Danube, the dispatch states, has therefore become impossible.

GOOD ROADS MEN TO VIEW PAVING

To Show New System City Will Lay New Street Surfaces.

CONGRESS NEXT WEEK.

To demonstrate to the delegates to the fifth American good roads congress and show the great saving possible under the system of repaving developed by the Chicago municipal asphalt plant the city is preparing to give a portion of Jefferson street a new boulevard surface. The closing of Jackson boulevard and Lake street bridges has thrown automobile traffic on the west side into confusion. The ragged brick pavement on Jefferson street, between Jackson and Washington, will be relaid to relieve the situation. Preliminary work will begin on Tuesday if the weather permits, so that the work can be done during the good roads convention. Federal street between Jackson and Van Buren also will be repaved.

Thousand Saved to Taxpayers.

"We have been asked to demonstrate this economical and rapid system to the American Road Builders' association," said Walter G. Leininger, superintendent of streets, "because we have been the first to employ it here. By using the old macadam, granite block, or brick pavements for a base in place of tearing up the old work we have been able to save the taxpayers thousands of dollars. The Jefferson street work, while giving a pavement as good in every way as the other system, will save the city the difference between 70 cents a square yard, its cost, and $2 a square yard.

20 Miles of Road Laid.

"The municipal plant is just finishing up the last work on twenty miles of new country streets within the city limits. By using our railway concrete plant we were able to put in these streets at a cost of 50 cents a square yard."

The new asphaltic concrete roads done within the last six months will be visited on automobile tours by the delegates to the good roads congress and show, which will be in session at the International amphitheater Dec. 14-18.

New Edison Phonograph
Diamond Point (No Needles)

It is the "last word" in phonograph construction—the instrument which at last can reproduce with perfect fidelity not only the notes of every instrument, but also the marvelously sweet tones of the human voice.

The New Edison is the production of the wizard inventor of the age—Thomas A. Edison—and it is an advance over the ordinary talking machine as marked as that of the steamship over the sailing vessel.

There are no needles to bother about. The diamond point reproducer is always on the machine—you can play on the new Edison the disc records of any make, foreign or domestic.

HAPPY NAME IDEA UTTERLY FAILS IN DAUGHTER'S CASE

Separation Suit Blow to Seeress' Science of Nomenclature.

New York, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Aso-Neith Cockran, founder of the cult of appropriate nomenclature, which teaches that if one takes a name that harmonizes with one's vibrations such person will be happy and prosperous, has been unable to find a harmonizing name for her own daughter, Adelaide, who eloped several years ago and married the son of a neighbor living in the same apartment house and just across the hall.

The daughter with the unharmonizing name of Adelaide has had many years of domestic unhappiness, while another daughter having the harmonious name of Olea Wanda Lafayette, is still happily unmarried.

Says He Abandoned Her.

These facts have come to light in the Supreme court in a suit for separation brought by Mrs. Adelaide Cockran Pond against Charles M. Pond, in which Justice Gavegan has ordered Pond to pay his wife $7.50 a week alimony. Mrs. Pond alleges her husband abandoned her in 1911 and that she and her daughter, Beatrice, now 10 years old, have since lived with her mother.

Mr. Pond objected to paying alimony on the ground that his wife left him without cause. He also contended that she was able to support herself and their child because "she is an accomplished musician of considerable repute and has played in public for money."

Her husband didn't work for two years, Mrs. Pond said, and during that time he induced her to get money from his mother to supply him with cigarets. She remained with her husband's parents, she said, until they treated her so cruelly she wouldn't go to the table to eat. Finally she became ill and her trouble was diagnosed as due to starvation. Her mother then took her home and she remained there for some time.

Falsely Accused, She Avers.

Mrs. Pond told the court she and her husband rented a house in Little Falls, N. J., where she took in boarders to help out on the expenses, but her husband gave her little of his $21 a week salary. Money she earned giving music lessons helped some, she said.

Finally, she said, her husband falsely accused her in the presence of the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Thompson, pastor of the Episcopal church at Little Falls, of being intimate with a Mr. Collett, "one of the most prominent and respected men in the town." After that she went home to her mother, she said.

Mrs. Pond relates also that she had been told that her husband contributed of his $21 a week to the support of a chorus girl and that he tore up $400 worth of her music on one occasion.

In an affidavit by Mrs. Cockran she said all the statements made by her daughter were true. Pond denied he charged his wife with infidelity, and also denied an allegation that he threw a beer bottle at her.

Happy if Rightly Named.

Mrs. Cockran's teaching of the science of harmonious nomenclature has been described by her as follows:

"My teaching is that life harmony consists of adjusting one's being to a number of vibrations which will give forth a concord instead of a discord. Everybody knows that certain musical notes sound well together, while others are discordant. It is the same with one's life. I take the letters from your name and resolve a note from it.

"If the vibration obtained from your name is C major and that from your birth date is E flat, you would have a discordant life and you must change your name. I can find a name for anybody which will harmonize with that person's birth number and his fate will then change immediately from misery to happiness of all sorts."

MEXICO CITY SHY ON TOOTHPICKS!

Famine in Wooden Removers of Extraneous Food in the Capital.

STRAWS BEING USED.

Mexico City, Dec. 5.—There is a toothpick famine in the city of Mexico. All the stores have exhausted their supplies of these little articles and it is now impossible to obtain them anywhere in the Federal district.

There is only one store in the city that has a few boxes left. As all its customers are daily asking for toothpicks, the owner is giving a few of his remaining stock to each of his patrons.

He refuses to sell them, however, as he considers it would be a discrimination to do so, and he limits the number given to each person at a time to six. He says his stock will be exhausted in a few days and he does not know where he can obtain any more under present conditions.

U. S. Furnishes Most of Them.

With the exception of a small quantity of French quill toothpicks, which are scarce and dear at all times and which are now out of the Mexico City market, and a limited supply of Japanese toothpicks, which have a small sale here, and which have also disappeared, the entire toothpick supply of the republic is furnished by the United States.

These toothpicks come from the factories of New England, through New York jobbers. For years these toothpicks have enjoyed an undisputed commercial supremacy in Mexico. Every store sells them and persons of all nationalities buy them.

Since last April none of these toothpicks has been imported into the city. Many of the stores here have stocks of them at the Vera Cruz custom house, but as they are still unpaid for they hesitate to make their remittances to the United States while exchange rates are so high.

Straws Now Being Used.

When exchange on the United States was two for one the toothpicks were sold in the stores here at 30 cents for a box containing 1 500. This was at the rate of fifty for a cent.

The low price of these American wooden toothpicks in Mexico is one of the principal reasons they drove all the other toothpicks out of the market, as the others that were sold here several years ago were made of quills and much dearer.

Even Japan, with her cheap labor, has not been able to compete successfully in Mexico with the United States toothpick factories owing to the elaborate machinery of the Americans, which enables them to turn out millions of the toothpicks daily.

Every restaurant in the city had been using the American toothpicks. Straws are being used as a substitute for the wooden toothpicks in a few restaurants, but they are not a success, and many complaints are being made to the proprietors by patrons.

GIRL SAVED BY BELL RINGING

Struck Down by Stranger in House and Unconscious for Hours.

POSED AS INSPECTOR.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 5.—Posing as a water meter inspector, a stranger entered the home of Miss Ella Ball and after making a brief examination of the pipes on the second floor and in the cellar struck the girl down with a blackjack.

That the girl was not further molested or the house ransacked was probably due to the ringing of the doorbell. Miss Ball declared she heard the bell ring as she was lapsing into unconsciousness. An examination of the house later failed to show that any valuables had been taken.

Unconscious Three Hours.

Miss Ball was unconscious for three hours after the attack and was found by her mother lying on the floor in the laundry. The blackjack had inflicted a deep gash in her scalp and physicians who examined the wound declared she was suffering from concussion of the brain.

Miss Ball said that about noon she answered the bell and was accosted by a stranger who showed a badge and claimed he had been sent to examine the water meter. It had been installed only three days ago and the suspicions of the girl were not aroused.

Forgot About Stranger.

The man, she said, asked to be shown the way to the bathroom, where he wished to examine the faucets. After spending about fifteen minutes on the second floor, she said, he went to the cellar, where he remained a similar length of time.

She had forgotten about the stranger being in the house, she said, and went to the refrigerator in the outside kitchen to get something for her lunch. She heard a noise behind her and while in the act of turning received a stunning blow on the head.

OUTLAWS TAKEN AS CHIEF FALLS

Regular Wild West Fight in the Regular Wild West.

SHERIFF'S AIM FATAL.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Dec. 5.—One outlaw is dead and seven are prisoners under armed guards as the result of a real old time plains battle between a sheri's posse and a band of horse thieves, who, for several weeks, have caused a reign of terror in the southwestern corner of the state.

Bud Malley, a cow puncher, with a reputation for skill in the saddle and with the gun, organized a gang of eight men and started out on a horse stealing campaign.

Posse Starts Pursuit.

The band rode int Burntfork with their stolen prizes. Summoning B. J. Gregory, a store proprietor, they demanded food and lodging. Gregory refused them and Malley threatened to blow up the store, whereupon Gregory surrendered.

Gregory sent a messenger to Sheriff Lohan at Evanston. Lohan organized a posse of ten men and set out across country after the outlaws. Near Mountainview, not far from Burntfork, the sheriff found the gang in camp, with their herd of about 100 horses.

The sheriff opened fire on the camp and the outlaws returned the fire. The battle lasted for about fifteen minutes, with both sides firing from behind thrown horses, and then the outlaws made a break.

Chief Falls; Others Quit.

The posse mounted and began pursuit. A running fight followed, and finally the outlaws, after riding about fifteen miles, dropped near Hoops lake and reopened the battle.

Sheriff Lohan, noted as a marksman, paid strict attention to Malley, the leader, and finally shot him through the heart. When they saw their chief fall dead the other seven members of the band surrendered.

A GREAT SPEAKER
"FUDDLED BY LIQUOR"

Millions of American and foreign citizens have admired that able and eloquent American statesman of whom the Detroit Free Press under the above quoted headlines last Thursday in part said:

"Being under the influence of liquor, the lights were turned off and Mr. —— was led from the platform."

It is an established scientific medical fact that high class business and professional men are most "susceptible" to the virulent poison of alcohol. It is retained and accumulates in their systems resulting in that serious diseased condition which virtually forces continued indulgence.

The remedy is both simple and scientific. Spend a few days in the privacy of the home, hotel, club or Neal Institute taking the Neal treatment. It will eliminate the poison "stored up" in the system, create a loathing for liquor or drugs, and restore normal mental and physical conditions.

WHY DID THIS MAN KILL HIS FRIEND? MYSTERY GROWS

Inquiry Planned in Case of Atlantan Slain in Home of Another.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 5.—Although a coroner's jury exonerated W. B. Carhart, president of a shoe manufacturing company, for the killing of J. P. Callaway, a well known resident of this city, the case has presented such mysterious aspects that the police will place it before the grand jury.

The coroner's jury declared that Carhart was justified in killing Callaway, for they believed that the shoe manufacturer had mistaken Callaway for a burglar. His friends and relatives, however, are of the opinion that all of the facts have not been uncovered and that a further investigation may reveal a far different motive for the killing.

Danced with Carhart's Wife.

Detectives have been hired by the relatives of the dead man and are now working on the case. The facts that have been revealed thus far are that Mr. and Mrs. Carhart had attended a dance at the Capital City club on the night of the shooting. Callaway also was at the dance and danced with Mrs. Carhart. Thus far the detectives have not been able to find signs of ill feeling between the two men, either on that night or previously.

For a reason as yet unexplained, Callaway left the dance early, three hours before Mr. and Mrs. Carhart. The next heard of him was when he was fatally shot in Carhart's house. Where he was in the intervening time is a mystery.

Carhart states that after he and his wife had returned from the dance his wife had immediately undressed and then went to the bathroom. Shortly later she cried out that there was a burglar in the house. Carhart hunted up his revolver and went to the bathroom, where he saw a man escaping from the window.

Shoes Were Unlaced.

Callaway apparently had not made any attempt to disguise himself by a change of clothing, but Carhart fired at the retreating man and the latter fell out of the window to the ground. He was dead when he was picked up.

Examination revealed the fact that he was fully dressed except that his shoes were unlaced, a fact that the detectives consider especially important. The shooting occurred at about 2 o'clock in the morning.

Rich, He Attends College with Son.

E. J McVANN
DONALD McVANN

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 5.—Middle aged intellects, clogging with Latin and Greek, are always to be found in the colleges. They frequently represent men whose lives have not been quite successful, who suddenly remember their old ambition for a college education, and who blame the lack of this equipment for their mediocre success in pursuit of a career.

The exception to this type is E. J. McVann, manager of the traffic bureau, in connection with the Commercial club at Omaha, Neb. At 45 he enjoys a salary four times as great as that of the governor of Nebraska.

Yet many hours of his nights and days in the last year he has studied and recited law at Creighton Law college in Omaha, and on commencement day received his law degree, almost a third of a century late, but nevertheless appreciated and treasured.

$2,000 REWARD FOR TRUE BLONDE WILLING TO WED

Blue Ridge Bachelor Finds Wooing Too Much Changed to Win Wife Himself.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 5.—In the foothills of the Blue Ridge in South Carolina there is a lonely hermitage in which resides Col. James J. Roberts, a man of 50, who has fame and fortune, yet is unhappy because he hasn't a wife and doesn't know how to set about getting one.

After a four day journey to Atlanta prospecting in the matrimonial fields, he has admitted defeat, and pulled out, wifeless and as lonely as ever, on an early train back to Carolina to content himself with waiting until some connoisseur in wives accepts an offer of $2,000 to furnish a mate.

Satisfied that his own methods of searching for a wife will not win him success, he has figuratively "passed the buck" to any man, woman, or child who will lead to his lonesome door an unmarried, unattached woman who comes up to his idea of what a spouse should be.

Even though he failed to find an eligible, Col. Roberts succeeded in making considerable impression along Peachtree, due largely to the fact that he appeared on the street, in the hotels, and the cafés clad to the chin in a dazzling and costly fur coat composed of the skin of thirty-nine mountain foxes.

Big, Brawny Man.

In addition, however, there is something compelling about the colonel. His ruggedness and the touching expression of grief, the result of wifelessness, demanded as much attention as his vari-colored coat of fur. He is a big, brawny man who looks out of place in the hothouse environs of a hotel or café. You can't look at him without thinking of big hills and trees.

He is so wealthy that he says he doesn't know exactly how much money he really has. The banks up in Anderson, which try to keep cacount of it, tell him every now and then, he states, that it's somewhere between $200,000 and $500,000. His fortune got its start upon a vast area of land that he inherited, and which grew precious overnight when the town of Anderson decided to expand itself and encroached upon the Roberts property.

Romance in Life.

For years Col. Roberts has lived in his secluded abode up in Anderson—just the colonel and his pack of fifty-five fox hounds. There is a tragic romance back in his past that explains his previous wifelessness. She died and he vowed to never marry.

He kept the vow until modern methods of courtship and wife winning had so progressed that he no longer knew how to go out and bring home a helpmeet. His trip to Atlanta probably revealed just how far up to date lovemaking had outgrown that of his day and time.

And now he is leaving it up to some modern expert who is willing to exert his art for $2,000. The colonel hasn't stipulated any particular qualifications, except that all prospects must be faithful, loving, and tolerant of the whims and natural eccentricities of a hardened bachelor who has spent a half century alone.

She needn't be an efficient housekeeper. Col. Roberts has kept house long enough for one to be able to keep it for two. It isn't necessary that she be such a stunner in looks, although he would like to have a blonde. A good looker, he fears, will excite too much attention, and the colonel would have rivalry to contend with.

But she must put up with his dogs. They are the pride of the state, and he still stands behind an offer made two years ago of $10,000 for any pack of hounds that equals his. Two hundred odd foxes and then some, have they caught in the last three years. His coat is made from the furs of thirty-nine of this number.

FINDS WATCH IN A TREE TOP.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 5.—Ticking away at the top of a pecan tree, K. F. Ueberrhein of Richards found his gold watch where he had lost it.

WOMAN, AGED 71, GAYEST OF GAY DANCING MAXIXE

Life of Party at Mills Where She Worked 58 Years.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 5.—A giddy whirl of dancing couples circled and crushed and laughed about her. Mrs. Catherine Gliss, 71 years old and white haired and blithesome, peered into the swaying, giggling mass of them and felt her feet grow light.

So Mrs. Gliss did the tango and the maxixe, and several other things which they have not named yet. Her partner was a gay young blood of 50, but Mrs. Gliss made him pant and beg for mercy before the dance was done.

This happened at the Lane cotton mills. Mrs. Gliss and thirty-seven other men and women were being entertained as honor guests because they had been in the service of the Lane mills for more than a quarter of a century. Mrs. Gliss and the thirty-seven others were given certificates of honor. Hers carried the record in years of service. She has worked in the mills for fifty-eight years.

"I came here to work when I was 13 years old," boasted Mrs. Gliss. "I've seen these old mills change a lot—I've seen boys and girls come and work a while, and marry and work a little more and I've been to a lot of funerals and a lot of christenings. Why, over there is a man that I was the very first person in the world to kiss."

Peter Langman, overseer in the carding department, thirty-three years in the service of the mills, and somewhat inclined to baldness, wheeled about, blushed, and acknowledged the honor.

MAN DIES, TAILOR PRESSES HIS OWN SUIT—WITH WIDOW

Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., Dec. 5.—Mrs. Murietta E. Ubert, who inherited a fortune from her husband, Harvey J. Ubert, who died last January, announced her engagement today to John H. Ravekes, her husband's tailor. The wedding has been set for Dec. 9.

Ravekes used to call frequently at the Ubert home to get Mr. Ubert's clothes for pressing.

There he met and became acquainted with Mrs. Ubert, who is considerably his senior.

STOP CRAP SHOOTING IN "ONE ARM" LUNCHROOMS.

Pawtucket, R. I., Dec. 5.—Gambling in "one arm" lunchrooms must cease, is the edict of Chief of Police Hill. It has been the habit to allow habitués to indulge in "craps" and other forms of gambling, Chief Hill asserts. Sharpers wait for late lunchers, with lookouts to watch the policeman on the beat.

A small deposit will hold any article until Christmas

We will sell you larger Diamonds for the money than any other Diamond dealer. For you to prove our statement it is only a matter of calling and inspecting our stock, which you will find to be one of the largest in the United States. Furthermore, we give you a bill of sale guaranteeing to take them back (paying you cash) within ten days if you wish to return them. Should you, however, wish to exchange them for higher priced Diamonds, you are allowed the full price in making the exchange. We have only thorough, experienced Diamond Salesmen, that have devoted years to the study of Diamonds, who will tell you all you wish to know regarding them. You are not urged to buy. Use your own judgment. All we ask is your opinion of our prices and methods of conducting our business on the plan outlined above. We have devoted years to perfecting our system in all fairness to our customers on the smallest margin consistent with good business principles. We will say, however, that we are one of the largest Diamond Importers in the United States selling direct to the consumer, and the Diamond Trade will have to admit it. Diamonds are increasing in value every year and are considered a good investment by all far-sighted jewelers, as well as those thoroughly posted on the subject, and we ofttimes pay our customers a profit on diamonds bought from us a few years ago.

SHIP WOLVERINE, OLDEST IRONCLAD IN WORLD, ON JOB

Lake Warship Being Overhauled for Training Naval Reserves.

Erie, Pa., Dec. 5.—Completing her seventieth year of successful cruising on the great lakes, the Wolverine, formerly the Michigan, the oldest ironclad in the world, has gone into its winter berth in the harbor here, and before spring will undergo another general overhauling, preparatory to resuming its duty as a training ship for the naval reserve.

The Wolverine, as it is now known, was launched in this port Nov. 9, 1843, and went into commission Aug. 14, 1844. Since then it has been in active commission, either as a warship or survey ship, and incidentally as a training ship for the naval reserves of the great lakes, and, although nearing the three-quarter century mark, is still in good condition, and if necessary, perhaps, could easily sink anything afloat on the lakes.

The Wolverine and the Michigan are the only two armored vessels on the lakes, the Canadian government never having taken advantage of the concession made when the old Michigan was launched to place a British warship in these waters.

In connection with the history of the Wolverine many interesting things could be told. It is, among other things, the only ironclad in the world that was built miles away from the scene of future activities, having been built at Pittsburgh and shipped here on wagons.

Preceded the Railroads.

It was in commission nearly eight years before railroad connections with that point were established, and had then made a trip through the chain of lakes. Many Indian chiefs have been entertained in its cabin, and during the civil war it saw some stirring times. It then guarded nearly 2,000 Confederate prisoners confined on Johnson's island in Lake Erie, and would have taken a more active part had it been possible to get the boat through the Welland canal.

Unfortunately, when its services would have been of the greatest value to the government along the Atlantic coast, during the months immediately preceding the launching of the Monitor, when the Confederate ram Merrimac was practically cleaning up the Federal fleet, it was discovered the boats' great beam made it impossible to get it to the coast unless it should be taken apart and shipped in sections. This might have been done had not the government anticipated the organization of an auxiliary Confederate army in Canada, and it decided that it was better to retain the ship on the lakes to prevent the landing of an expeditionary force from across the border.

Capture Plot Foiled.

When on guard duty at Johnson's Island a plot was laid by the Confederates to capture and convert the warship into a commerce destroyer as well as to attempt the bombardment of lake ports. According to the plan, the vessel would have had its base on the Canadian shore, probably at Windsor. The plot was discovered in time to prevent its execution and the Michigan was saved.

It was the Michigan, as then still known, which stopped the Fenian invasion of Canada in 1866, when it overhauled the transport carrying reinforcements outside of Buffalo and sending a shell across its bow, sent it scurrying back.

Of a type of warship that has long passed, the Michigan was the best that could be built. It measures 167 feet over all, has an extreme beam of 47 feet and a depth of hold of 14 feet. The boat is pierced for twelve guns and carries a battery of eight breech loading two inch rifles. During active service it carried a crew of ninety-eight, including eleven officers.

WIFE DEFINES HUMAN LIMIT

It Was When Husband Had Another Woman Select Dress for Her.

TOO MUCH PROSPERITY.

New York, Dec. 5.—The human limit, Mrs. Margaret Robinson declares, was reached in her case when, as she alleges, her husband had another woman aid him in selecting a dress for her.

She has brought suit in the Supreme court for separation from Ernest Robinson, engineer and superintendent of the United States Metals Proudcts company. Pending the trial of the action, Justice Newburger has allowed Mrs. Robinson $25 a week alimony and $200 counsel fees. Her husband has entered a general denial to her complaint.

Too Much Prosperity.

Mrs. Robinson says that prosperity made Mr. Robinson "too good for her." They were married Christmas day, 1896, and while living on a small income were contented. Mr. Robinson's rise in business was followed, says his wife, by laying down a policy "of impressing me with a sense of my own shortcomings."

While his income was $100 a week, says his wife, she received $25 with which to run their home, to clothe herself and their son, Leonard, 6 years old; to pay "for the gas, the light, and the mortgage."

In 1912 Mr. Robinson went to Europe and returned, it is said, to speak of "distinguished fellow women voyagers" and "to bait her with unfavorable comparisons with his recently acquired women acquaintances." It was one of his fellow voyagers, it is said, who was asked to select the dress for Mrs. Robinson.

Deserted Him, He Says.

Mr. Robinson entered a denial of his wife's statements, and in turn alleges that she has deserted him three times. She now is living in Jersey City, it is said. While she alleges that she faded from a "robust, healthy woman, who was a member of a bowler's club, to a mere shadow" because of her husband's antics, Mr. Robinson asserted she assumed the aggressive.

Her first desertion, says the husband, was when they lived in Elwood City, Pa. Her reason was that she would live in no place with him except New York.

THREATENS TO SHOOT GIRL WHO REFUSED HIM.

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 5.—Rodney Hart, a dentist's assistant, 21 years old, has been arrested on a charge of attempting to shoot Miss Jeannette Aukamp, aged 18, a stenographer, for refusing to marry him. The girl's mother declares Hart seized the girl by the throat and declared he would shoot her unless she married him by noon. Mrs. Aukamp seized his hand and Miss Aukamp broke away and called for help. Harry Kegel was among several other men who rushed in and he knocked Hart down and out for ten minutes. He is now in jail on the charge of attempted murder.

JAW BLOWN OFF; BOY OF 12 A HERO

Pain Ridden Lad Soothes Mother; Never a Whimper of Complaint.

OFTEN OPERATED UPON.

Topeka, Kas., Dec. 5.—Not all the heroes are getting iron crosses. One of these heroes is 12 year old Johnny Baer of this place, who recently had the lower half of his jaw shot off by the accidental discharge of a shotgun, and after the accident, while suffering the most agonizing pain, he reached over and patted his heartbroken mother on the shoulder in an effort to console her.

And Johnny is still living up to his reputation as a hero. He is in the state hospital at Rosedale. Dr. Sutton is doing wonders with Johnny's face. Part of the bony structure of the nose was blown off, but Dr. Sutton has built him a new nose from live bone tissue. His upper back teeth on one side were blown out, but the doctor has built up the jaw and put in some store teeth.

Wonders in Skin Grafting.

Johnny can chew meat with that side of his jaw. Johnny lost part of his lips, but the doctor has built them up so he will go through life with two good lips. Most of the skin on one side of Johnny's face was taken away, but Dr. Sutton has done wonders in the way of grafting on new skin.

He cuts a slit between the thumb and first finger on Johnny's hand and above the left hip. Then he binds the hand against the hip in such a manner that the two cuts grow together. After this has happened he cuts it apart so that a portion of the skin from the hip stays on the hand.

Then he cuts a slit on Johnny's face, binds the hand against it, and leaves it there until the skin from the body has grown to the face. Then he cuts the hand loose and starts over again. In this way he is gradually covering the boy's face with real human skin.

Often Under Anesthetic.

The boy has been under the influence of an anesthetic a score of times. He suffers everything in the way of physical pain and bodily discomfort. Yet he looks forward, with actual pleasure to each coming operation.

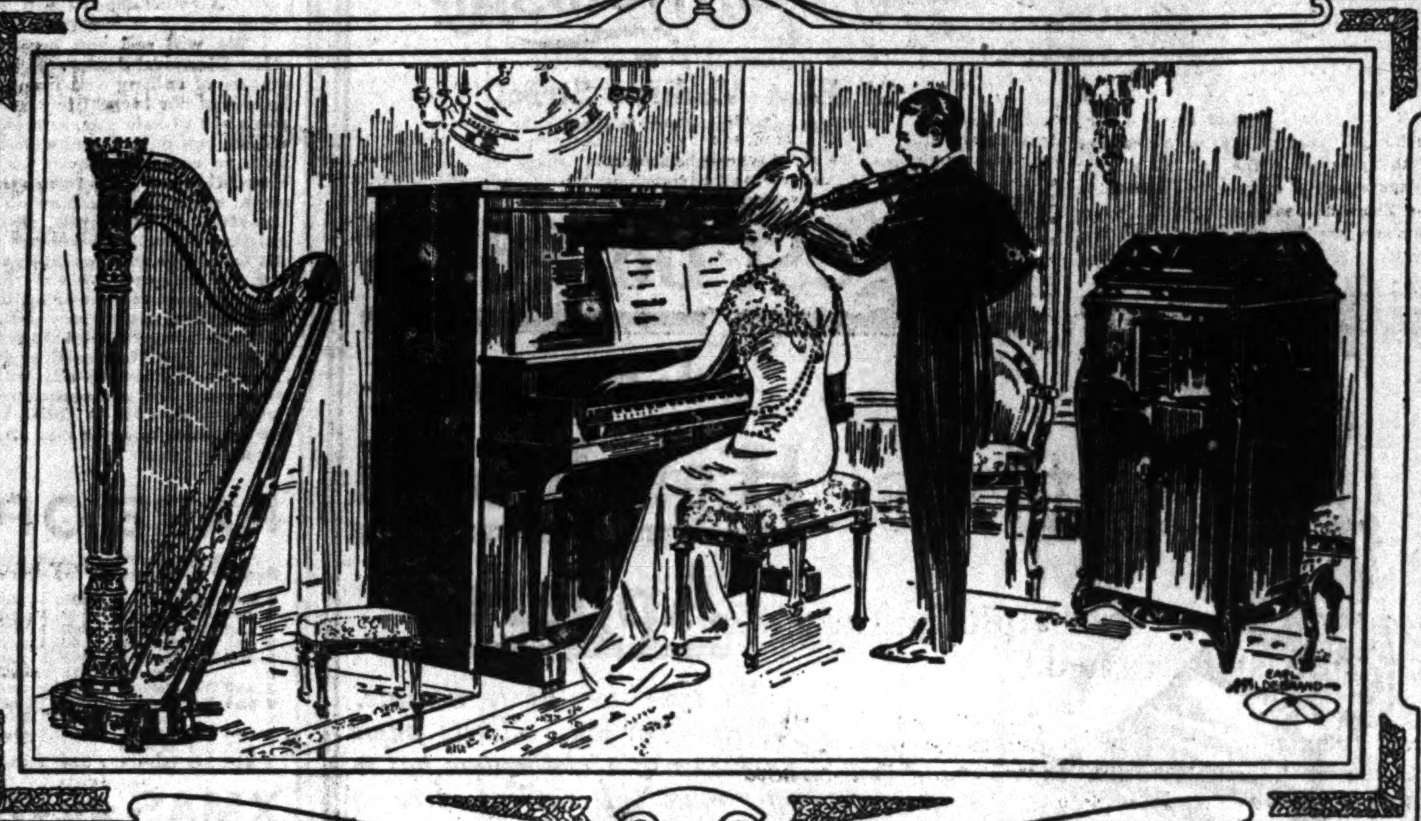
He feels that he is getting those things that will give him an even chance in life, and he wants to help the doctor in his work. Not a whimper, not a complaint ever reaches the ears of his attendants.

TOO MANY SEEK HIS LOVE; PARSON ASKS POLICE AID.

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 5.—The Rev. Frederick Nicholson of the First Spiritual church appealed to the chief of police for "protection against lovesick maidens and scheming mothers."

Foro weeks, he said, his life had been made unhappy by love letters and telephone calls. He turned over to the police a package of letters.

Police officials subsequently visited one home and advised that attentions to the pastor cease.



Harps

Our present display of Harps is the finest in the fifty years' history of this house. Every model of Lyon & Healy Harp may be found upon our floors, including duplicates of those used in the great orchestras all over the world. Harp playing as a profession for young women is increasing immensely in popularity, because it is one of the few lucrative callings which is not overcrowded.

We also exhibit many beautiful Washburn Harps which are priced at extremely reasonable figures. For children we recommend the Clark Irish Harp made by us. This fine little instrument is priced at only $75. A beautiful catalog of Harps will be mailed free upon receipt of request.

Violins

Last week was noteworthy by reason of the sale of a Guadagnini Violin to one of the greatest Violinists of the present day.

In addition to the magnificent masterpieces for which our collection is known all over the world, we offer at the present time a number of moderate priced old Violins which possess a smooth and mellow tone. Visitors are always welcome to our atelier and responsible persons who do not wish to pay all cash will be accommodated with one or two years' time. You can secure a genuine old violin here with the understanding that it may be traded in at full price later on towards the purchase of a more expensive instrument. Many of the violins we have sold in former years have doubled and tripled in value, owing to the increasing scarcity of artistic instruments. Also, a large assortment of beginners' violins from $5 upward.

Mandolins

This is Mandolin week throughout the United States. In hundreds of towns the show windows of music dealers are filled with Washburn Mandolins. Our own part in Mandolin week, as proprietors of the Washburn Mandolin, the world's standard, consists in offering the finest variety of these charming instruments that it is possible to assemble. It is well worth your while to pay our Mandolin Department a visit of inspection.

Washburn Mandolins, Guitars and Banjos sell for $15 upwards. Other styles as low as $3.

ESTABLISHED FIFTY YEARS

Pianos

It is very important to remember that the Pianos which we sell, almost without exception, are of exclusive design. There is nothing like them to be found elsewhere in Chicago. Only in this establishment can you find Steinway Pianos or Pianola-Pianos of the latest models. Only under our roof may be seen the Modern Art designs of Lyon & Healy and Washburn Upright Pianos. In Pianos it is a noteworthy fact that the latest and best designs are really cheaper than inferior patterns. This is because improvements are being constantly wrought in standard, fast-selling pianos and player-pianos. In instruments for which there is limited demand styles and improvements are usually several years behind the times.

Glance for a moment at a few of the makes of pianos sold exclusively by us.

Steinway Mahogany Grands Also styles up to $1,250.	$750
Steinway Mahogany Uprights. Also Uprights up to $750.	$500
Pianola-Pianos Also Good Player Pianos at $375 Other Pianola-Pianos up to $2,350.	$550
Lyon & Healy Uprights, Style K Also styles at small advances.	$350
Washburn Uprights, Mahogany, Oak or Walnut Also styles slightly higher.	$275
Leland Uprights in Fancy Woods. Also styles at but little more.	$225
Majestic Uprights, Style A Other styles as low as $125.	$175

Special Bargains

We have a department in which we assemble instruments, both new and used, which may fairly be classed as special bargains. These are pianos which, for one reason or another, are offered below their usual current value. There are Player-Pianos as well as Grand and Upright Pianos in this collection. Any one who has in mind the investment of a modest sum in an instrument would do well to look through this salesroom or write for a list. The history of each instrument may be had on application and may be relied upon as being accurate. Several new Small Grands as low as $450.

Terms We sell pianos on easy monthly installments. At the present time especially liberal arrangements may be made. Your first few payments will be only about half the usual amount required.

MODEL PRISON ON PARADISE ISLE OF ROBINSONCRUSOE

Place Where Alexander Selkirk Lived In 1709, 400 Miles West of Chile.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1914: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

VALPARAISO, Chile.—I dined the other night on lobsters caught on the shores of the island where Alexander Selkirk, the real Robinson Crusoe, was cast away. They were large, tender, and juicy, and I doubt if better can be found in the world. Robinson Crusoe's island is becoming a great fishing grounds. It has fine cod in its waters, and it is noted for its lobsters and other shellfish. It has also a large Chilean fishing colony, and the Japanese, who are organizing a fishing industry in northern Chile, are considering the exploitation of that territory.

Robinson Crusoe's island is known on the maps as Juan Fernandez. It belongs to Chile, and it lies about 400 miles west of this port of Valparaiso and 2,600 miles south of the Panama canal. It is reached by government steamers, which go there to supply the colony at certain times of the year, and it is ruled by officers of the Chilean government. During my stay here I have met men who know the island well.

Kept Cool by Current.

They describe it as a paradise. It has plenty of rain and is covered with a luxuriant vegetation. It is affected by the antarctic current, which keeps it perpetually cool, and the northern half, on which the rains fall, is covered with green.

The island is only twelve miles long by seven miles wide. It consists of a great mass of rocks rising out of the ocean to a height of more than 4,000 feet. It is made up of hills and mountains, with many ravines and short valleys. The most of the shores are inaccessible, but at Cumberland bay there is an excellent landing place. Behind this is a settlement of cottages and huts made of cane wattled with straw. The houses have gardens about them, and at one time there was an attempt to start a stock raising industry. One settler is said to have had as many as 30,000 cattle and an equal number of sheep. In time, however, his business fell off and the cattle ran wild. The island now has wild sheep, wild goats, and wild mules, and the animals thrive without human care. The grass is excellent and covers every open spot on the northern side of the island, and also wild vegetables. There are wild fruits which have reproduced themselves from the trees planted by Alexander Selkirk, and from the same source there are wild grapes as delicious as those which Robinson Crusoe dried for raisins.

Two Hundred Years Ago.

Alexander Selkirk was the hero of Defoe's story and the real Robinson Crusoe. He was cast away on this island more than 200 years ago, and there is a monument to him, consisting of a marble tablet set in the rocks on one of the higher parts of the island. The place is known as Robinson Crusoe's Lookout, and it is where he is supposed to have kept watch fires burning to attract the attention of any ship that might pass. The monument was erected in 1868 by some English naval officers. I have a photograph of it. The inscription reads as follows:

> IN MEMORY OF > ALEXANDER SELKIRK, MARINER.
> A native of Largo, in the county of Fyfe, Scotland, who lived on this island, in complete solitude, four years and four months.
> He was landed from the Cinque Ports galley, 96 tons, 18 guns, A. D. 1704, and was taken off in the "Duke" privateer 12th of February, 1709.
> He died lieutenant of H. M. S. "Weymouth," A. D. 1723, aged 47 years.
> This tablet is erected near Selkirk's Lookout by Commodore Powell and the officers of the H. M. S. "Topaz," A. D. 1868.

Alexander Selkirk was rescued in 1709, just a little more than 200 years ago. He went to London and there met Defoe, who had many talks with him, and therefrom got the idea and background of his story. The work "Robinson Crusoe" was published ten years later. It ran through four editions in as many months and was the big seller of its time. It is one of the biggest sellers of today, and it ranks with the Bible and John Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" as the greatest sellers of history. "Robinson Crusoe" has been translated into nearly every known language. It has been printed in Spanish, German, Russian, Italian, Greek, and Arabic. It is one of the boys' books of Japan, and a Chinese edition has been recently issued which is having an enormous sale.

Special Steamer Tour.

Now that the Panama canal is completed there probably will be some special steamship excursions to Robinson Crusoe's island. The round trip from Valparaiso can be made in three or four days, and it might include a look at the cave in which Alexander Selkirk lived, at the Lookout, where for four long years he scanned the sea for ships, and, I doubt not, at vestiges of Crusoe's man Friday, and perhaps a petrified footprint of that which the savage made upon the sand.

Selkirk was found by a ship that had seen the fire on the Lookout. According to the narrative of the captain who took him to England, he was clad in goatskins and was running about as though crazy. When he reached London his talk was the wonder of the coffee houses and his adventures were discussed by every one. Sir Richard Steele told of them in one of his papers, and Selkirk published a little pamphlet of twelve pages describing his wanderings.

The Robinson Crusoe cave, where Selkirk lived, lies in a ridge of volcanic rock. It is easily identified. It is about thirty feet deep, and its roof is from ten to fifteen feet from the floor. The entrance is about fifteen feet high, and is almost hidden in ferns. The cave shows signs of having been lived in, and it is like the description of that in "Robinson Crusoe." There are holes and pockets scoooped out of the walls, and here and there is a rusty nail that had been driven in between the stones. The cave is said to have been the resort of the buccaneers, who once ravaged the west coast of South America. There are other caves upon the island, and there are also cave dungeons which were occupied when the island was used for criminals. Some of the cells were far underground, and the prisoners could not stand upright within them. History records that the convicts once mutinied and murdered their guards. They captured the boats in the harbor, and 300 of them made their way to Chile and landed there.

Convict Settlement.

Within the past year or so the Chilean government has decided to make Juan Fernandez again a convict settlement. The officials have visited it and they find it well fitted for the purpose. They have sent a number of convicts there, and are now erecting a model prison upon it.

Another group of islands that will be important, now that the canal is completed, is the Archipelago de Colon. The name on the maps is the Galapagos islands. These islands belong to Ecuador. They are situated about as far from Panama as New York is distant from Chicago, and in such a location that they might form an important coaling station for the ships on their way north and south between the two continents. They are about 500 miles from Ecuador and 2,000 miles north of Valparaiso.

These islands were for a long time uninhabited, and not long ago they had a sort of Robinson Crusoe, who lived there for years upon fruits and roots and upon the wild cattle and pigs which he was able to kill. He caught the animals in traps and killed them with a spear made of a pocket knife tied to a stick. He had a hut with a roof of cowskins and pigskins. When found he was naked and was carrying a pig on his back. He had been on the islands for years, having been left there by some ship.

TWO FLAT PICKETS TAKEN.

Janitors' Union Agents Said to Have Threatened Caretaker of Apartment Building.

Two pickets of the janitors' union were arrested yesterday in front of an apartment house at 4545 Sheridan road. Frank Rainer, nonunion janitor at the building, complained that they had threatened to harm him unless he quit his job. The prisoners, Robert Tostibert of 1411 Thome street and John Vent of 4529 Hazel avenue, were booked on charges of disorderly conduct.

Fined $25 as Gambler.

Frank Thomas, who has a cigar store at 225 North Fifth avenue, yesterday was fined $25 by Judge Gemmill. Thomas pleaded guilty to operating a gambling house.

WOMEN OIL UP STEAM ROLLER

Democratic League to Get Into Mayoralty Fight with Both Feet.

MRS. DOWNES TO RULE.

If the organization wheels of the Illinois Woman's Democratic league do not begin to turn there is going to be a hearty example of "passing the buck" within the organization.

A meeting of the organization was held yesterday in the Auditorium hotel. Mrs. Joanna Downes recounted her woes in getting some of the women to work. She is president of the league.

"A Republican mayor will be elected as sure as you live unless I am given power to do something in the ward organizations," said Mrs. Downes.

How the "Buck" Is Passed.

Consequently she was given power to remove any ward president in the league's organization if she thought the president was not doing her duty in getting Democratic votes. And the ward president was authorized to remove any precinct captain. The precinct chairman was authorized to remove any block captain in true Democratic style. The block captain will be the ultimate possessor of the "buck," as no one was left for her to remove.

Mrs. Paul Gerhardt protested against allowing the ward presidents so much authority.

Fears Personal Element.

"Some of the presidents will remove precinct captains because they have a personal grudge against them," said she.

"If any president removes a captain for a personal grudge," said Mrs. Downes, "I shall remove that president."

Couple Held as Opium Makers.

Internal revenue agents raided a flat at 2829 Calumet avenue yesterday and arrested John ("Monte") Carlow and his wife, Margaret. They are charged with preparing opium for smoking purposes. A quantity of the drug was seized.

Will Sing Carmen at the Ziegfeld.

Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, who was Miss Winifred Starr of Kenilworth, will sing the title rôle in a semi-professional production of "Carmen," one of the features of the program of the Chicago Musical college school of opera to be presented in the Ziegfeld theater on Dec. 12. Other numbers are the second act of "Traviata" and a dance by the Misses Marion Fleming and Libby Bartusek.

WOMEN TO URGE LAWS TO AID SEX

Illinoisans to Gather in Chicago on Invitation of Senate Welfare Commission.

HELP FOR CHILD, TOO.

BY MARION WALTERS LOVETT.

A congress of Illinois women will gather in Chicago on Dec. 10, 11, and 12 to propose legislation regarding women and children to the state senate welfare commission for presentation to the next session of the legislature. Five or six hundred delegates will be present. The sessions will be held in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel.

The congress meets for this purpose at the invitation of the senate commission. This is said to be the first time in the history of the United States that a legislature has sought the counsel of women in forming laws concerning them and their children.

Mrs. Harriette Taylor Treadwell, president of the Chicago Political Equality league, has been appointed chairman. She is to have the support of a representative executive committee with an advisory committee of fifty, representing every branch of women's interests.

Twelve Bills to Be Presented.

Twelve bills have already been presented to the chairman and will be presented to the congress. How many of these measures the congress will recommend to the legislature is problematical. They may be changed or ratified, or others may be considered more important.

The legislative program of the congress fits into three welfare divisions: Social—legislation regarding wife abandonment and protection of children; educational—pertaining to the use of schools as social centers and the unit versus the dual system of education, involving the separation of vocational from academic education, state-wide retiring pensions, and raising the age of compulsory education from 14 to 16 years; industrial—the minimum wage for women, six day week instead of seven, eight hour law, and extension of compulsory education.

An important part of the work of the delegates to the congress will be the selection of a small group of women to go to Springfield as a lobby for the bills proposed.

Met by Enthusiastic Response.

Invitations to act as delegates were sent out to representative women throughout the state. An enthusiastic response has come from these downstate women. Most of the large towns and important women's clubs and civic organizations will be represented.

Among the women who will come to Chicago to attend the congress are: Mrs. George T. Hopkins, Shelbyville; Mrs. Carrie Alexander Bahrenburg, Belleville; Mrs. A. W. Tilly, Shelbyville; Miss Caroline Grote, dean of women at the Western Illinois State Normal school; Mrs. Philo C. Darrow, Western Springs; Mrs. George C. Wilkinson, Alton; Mrs. George E. Cook, Elgin; Mrs. J. Rose Colby, dean of Illinois State Normal college; Mrs. C. E. Smoot, Petersburg; Dr. Harriet M. Daniels, Murphysboro; Mrs. Minnie Starr Granger, Belvidere; Mrs. Charles E. Hull, Salem; Mrs. E. F. Ford and Mrs. W. G. Lloyd, Greenville; Mrs. Harry H. Lyon, Pana; Mrs. J. C. Leishman, De Kalb; Miss Margaret Mercer, Centralia; Mrs. Zillah Foster Stevens, Alton.

MRS. YOUMANS RE-ELECTED BY WISCONSIN SUFFRAGISTS

Proposal to Indorse Woman's Trade Unions Referred to Committee by Convention.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 5.—Mrs. Theodora M. Youmans of Waukesha was reelected president of the Wisconsin Woman's Suffrage association at the closing session of the annual convention today.

Spirited discussion of Mrs. Victor Berger's resolution to indorse the Women's Trade Unions, action on which finally was referred to the executive board and a frank address on the relation of Catholic women toward the question of suffrage, by Mrs. Al Ringling of Baraboo, were features of the closing meeting.

"A great many Catholic women are not in favor of suffrage," said Mrs. Ringling, who is herself a Catholic and a suffragist.

GIVE furniture this Christmas!

If you want to reach an easy and quick decision on what to give for Christmas, try furniture. "Giving furniture" sounds big but it doesn't mean that you have to spend much money.

To help you to realize this, we are making a special display in our south show window, of articles at $1, $2, $3, $5, $10, etc., the little things of real use, good taste and evident value.

Come and look at this window! Every year we see an increase over the preceding year in the number of people who have learned that there is more certainty in buying furniture for gifts than in buying things which depend for favor on personal peculiarities of taste. There's a lot of common sense in this!

Here, for example, are some fine gifts for little money:

POLICE CROOKS QUAIL AS NEW 'SQUEAL' COMES

Confession of Bureau Man Adds to Panic in Detective Ranks.

lice, and James Ryan, alias "Prof. R. T. Crane."

At first the suppression of the indictment against Detective Egan was taken as an indication that negotiations were on between Hoyne and the detective with a view to procuring the former's testimony in return for the latter's promise of immunity.

Opposed to this theory is the fact that Barney Bertsche's principal reason for "squealing" has been the desire to repay Egan for the attempt which he says the latter made to kill him on the Rialto.

Here's "Honor" Among Thieves.

The "honor" that is supposed to exist among thieves did not prevail among the crooked members of Chicago's police, according to information unearthed by the state's attorney's investigators in connection with the swindling of Dr. William Kirby by the fake wire tapping game.

As tho amount involved in the Kirby swindle was $20,000, the percentage paid to the police for protection by John Henry Strosnider, the chief swindler, was 10 per cent, or $2,000, it is said. "Barney" Bertsche turned this money over to the police.

Bertsche told that he was to pay $1,000 of this to an officer at the detective bureau and the other $1,000 to one of the detectives "assigned to the case." Bertsche said that when he handed the first $1,000 over to the officer, the latter said that he thought the other $1,000 was too much for the detective.

Made Detective "Split."

He asked Bertsche not to mention the payment of the first $1,000 when he paid the second $1,000 to the detective. Bertsche said that he did as requested and later learned that the officer at the bureau had made the detective split the latter's bribe.

"The funny part of it is," said Bertsche, "is that —— (naming the detective) doesn't know to this day that —— (naming the officer) double crossed him."

Six indictments in all, charging bribery and operating a confidence game, were returned before Judge Kersten in the Criminal court shortly after 11 o'clock.

Capt. Halpin was indicted on three charges of bribery alone. The other three true bills, charging the operation of a confidence game, were returned against Capt. Halpin, Lieut. Tobin, and O'Brien jointly.

The grand jury also has returned three true bills charging Lieut. Tobin with bribery and a fourth against Detective Sergeant "Big Bill" Egan, charging the operation of a confidence game.

The bonds of the indicted men were fixed as follows:

Capt. Halpin—$30,000.
Lieut. Tobin—$15,000.
Ex-Sergt. O'Brien—$15,000.

Mayor Orders Suspensions.

Mayor Harrison was officially notified of the indictments by the state's attorney's office at 2 o'clock. He immediately sent a letter to Chief Gleason ordering the suspension of both officers.

Chief Gleason refused to make the mayor's letter public. Immediately upon its receipt, however, he issued the following order:

"Special Order No. 257.

"The following are hereby suspended pending investigation of charges:

"Capt. John J. Halpin, commanding the Fifteenth precinct.

"Lieut. John H. Tobin of the Seventeenth precinct. This order to take effect at once.

"JAMES GLEASON,
"General Superintendent of Police."

Indictments Detail Bribes.

The three indictments charging Capt. Halpin with bribery are specific documents and detail the alleged offenses.

The first indictment charges that Capt. Halpin on Jan. 1, 1913, received $200 from Christian P. (Barney) Bertsche on the captain's promise not to arrest Frank Ryan, reputed head of the "clairvoyant trust," and his brother, James Ryan, for "crimes they had committed or were about to commit."

The second indictment charges Capt. Halpin had knowledge that Bertsche and the Ryan brothers were about to fleece Mrs. Hope L. McEldowney of La Crosse, Wis., out of $15,500.

Alleges Halpin Got $500.

It charges that the captain accepted $500 from Bertsche on the captain's promise that he would "lay off" and not interfere with the swindling of Mrs. McEldowney by the Ryan brothers.

The third indictment charges that Capt. Halpin on Oct. 29, 1912, received $1,000 from Bertsche on the captain's promise not to arrest the men who fleeced William T. Kirby, at that time head of the Kirby Savings bank, out of $20,000 in a "wire tappers" scheme.

John H. Strosnider recently was found guilty of a charge of operating a confidence game in connection with the Kirby swindle and faces a prison term.

In his statement to State's Attorney Hoyne "Barney" Bertsche confessed that the swindling of Kirby was one of the "jobs" of the "clairvoyant trust" and was one of the "big hauls" made by the grafting police.

In each of the other three indictments Capt. Halpin, Lieut. Tobin, and former Detective Sergt. O'Brien are charged with operating three confidence games. The first indictment charges them with obtaining $20,000 in the Kirby "wire tapping" swindle, the second indictment charges them with obtaining $15,500 in currency and drafts from Mrs. McEldowney on March 6, 1913, and the third indictment charges that they obtained $11,000 from Mrs. Mary Rapp of Naperville, Ill., Feb. 28, 1913.

The bribery indictments contain two counts each. They charge Capt. Halpin "violated, prostituted, and betrayed the powers and duties of his office" and that he conducted police matters with partiality and favor to criminals, contrary to law.

How Indictment Reads.

The second count of the bribery indictments, regarding the Dr. Kirby swindle, reads as follows:

"And the grand jurors aforesaid do further present that the said John J. Halpin, then and there well knowing the premises, and then and there contriving and intending the powers and duties of his said office of captain of police and policeman of the said city of Chicago, county of Cook, and state of Illinois, and the trust and confidence imposed in him by the ordinances of the city of Chicago and by law, to violate, prostitute, and betray, and contriving then and there the powers and duties of his said office to discharge and perform them contrary to law and with the intent and for the purpose of being influenced in his acts and doings in the performance of his duty to preserve order, peace, and quiet and enforce the laws and ordinances throughout the city of Chicago aforesaid, and to arrest the person found violating any law or ordinances and all persons having violated any ordinances or law and all persons found under circumstances which would warrant reasonable men in believing such persons had committed or were about to commit crimes in the said city of Chicago, and the duties recognized of the said John J. Halpin by the ordinances of the city of Chicago and laws of the state of Illinois, and to perform said duty with partiality and favor and otherwise than as required by law with reference to arresting or causing to be arrested the aforesaid Christian P. Bertsche, John Strosnider, and the divers other persons commonly known as confidence men, whose names are to the grand jury unknown, unlawfully, knowingly, corruptly, willfully, and feloniously did then and there, on the 29th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred, and twelve, in the city of Chicago, county of Cook, state of Illinois, take, accept, and receive, directly or indirectly, from the said Christian P. Bertsche, while he, the said John J. Halpin, was then and there on duty as police officer and captain of police as aforesaid in the city of Chicago, a large sum of money—to wit: $1,000."

Capiases for the arrest of the indicted police will not be issued until Monday, owing to the late hour at which the true bills were returned in court.

When the grand jurors made their return Judge Kersten entered an order continuing their term of service to include this month and gave them special orders relative to an inquiry which they began into alleged tax frauds. The next session of the tax inquiry will be held on Thursday in the county building.

The December grand jury will be sworn in Monday morning. That body will continue the police graft inquiry. Additional members of the police department are expected to be hit.

New York Asks for Tips.

State's Attorney Hoyne said Police Commissioner Woods, of New York city, had communicated with him and requested whatever evidence the prosecutor had regarding corruption in the New York department.

"I haven't as yet replied to the request but I will do so," said Mr. Hoyne. "All the evidence I have in that connection is in possession of District Attorney Whitman. I haven't any evidence of any money being paid to members of the New York department. I suppose the police commissioner has reference to the newspapers quoting Frank Ryan as saying he had been 'shaken down' by the New York police.

"Bertsche wasn't 'wise' to the clairvoyant game until Harry Waite told him what easy money was in it," said the prosecutor, discussing the indictments returned. "Barney had been protecting criminals of different character for some time, but didn't know anything about clairvoyants until Waite drifted in.

"In the Kirby case the coppers got $2,000. They got a 10 per cent split of what Dr. Kirby was swindled out of. One thousand dollars went to Halpin, and Walter O'Brien got the other thousand to be split among the other men.

"On Wednesday or Thursday of next week I will present additional evidence to the December grand jury. I hope to begin at that time, but it may not be until the following Monday—it all depends on what develops in the meantime.

More Evidence to Come.

"There may be obvious reasons why I didn't present all the evidence to this grand jury. There may be obvious reasons also for indicting those who are named in the indictments returned today.

"Some of the gentlemen indicted have seen Frank Ryan's morocco bound books which showed the receipts and 'pay outs' before. Egan and Dempsey, his partner, made a raid on Ryan's place one time and stole these books. Ryan got them back, but he paid dearly for them. That was the time that Charles Eisner, who owned the place at 1318 South Michigan avenue, was knocked down the stairs by Egan after he had told the policeman that Ryan was not in—the time when Ryan ran from the place through a rear exit when he saw who wanted him. The books were kept by Ryan in a small closet under some linen.

Knew Where They Were.

"It would be an impossibility to find them, if they didn't know where they were. They evidently had been there before and must have been in on the 'shakedown.' That's logic, isn't it?"

Prosecutor Hoyne declared he had other confessions in addition to those made by the Ryans and Bertsche.

"Are the confessions from any policemen?" he was asked.

"I wouldn't want to specify," he answered. "I will say that there are other confessions just as ancient as those made by the Ryans and Bertsche. They were taken around Nov. 1."

While the state's attorney was giving out the interview, Charles Fitzmorris, private secretary to Mayor Harrison, telephoned to Mr. Hoyne and asked him to verify the newspaper accounts of the indictments of Halpin, Tobin, and O'Brien.

Most Beautiful Woman in the British Peerage.

This is the latest photograph of the Marchioness of Tweeddale, by many called the most beautiful woman in the peerage, whose husband was wounded in the fighting at the front. The marchioness (whose name is pronounced "Tweddie") was formerly Miss Marguerite Ralli, a daughter of a famous Greek family now Anglicized, and married the marquis in 1912. Lord Tweeddale, whose mother was an Italian, owns over 40,000 acres and, as Lord Gifford, is a member of the aristocratic First Life Guards.

The couple have a daughter, born last year.

ONE OF VON WAGNER'S WIVES TELLS HOW HE GOT HER $507

Met Him in Chicago, Wed Him in Waukegan, Found Him in Hoboken with Another Spouse.

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Two of the many wives of Karl von Wagner were in court in Hoboken this morning. Otto Klee, held in connection with the alleged bigamous pursuits of the missing Von Wagner, was not called into court.

One of Von Wagner's wives was formerly Miss Anna Kohler of Chicago. She is tall, dark, and handsome. Another, who was in court, was formerly Miss Rose Stettin, small, light, and plain in appearance. To know Von Wagner cost the former $507 and the latter $850.

"I met Mr. von Wagner, or whatever his name is, through an advertisement he put in a paper in Chicago," said the former Miss Kohler. "We were married in Waukegan about a week after I met him. He told me the firm he worked for was anxious that he get married, promising him $50 a month more salary and a bonus. I told him I had $507 in a bank in Chicago, and he had me get the money. I haven't seen him since.

"I came to New York and found he was living with another woman at 521 Bloomfield avenue, Hoboken. I suppose I made a mistake in going to the house before telling the police. When I went back with the police he was gone."

GARY LEVEE CLOSED AGAIN.

Ministers Said to Have Forced Acting Police Chief to Act.

Gary, Ind., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—After one short week of glare Gary's "red light" district was closed today. Orders were issued by Acting Chief of Police William Forbes, and tonight the resorts are dark. The Gary Ministers' association is said to be responsible for the reversal of the policy to maintain a segregated district. Chief of Police Heintz is out of the city and the closing order was enforced during his absence.

To the Women of Chicago and Vicinity:

My lease on my present building at 31 South State Street expires May 1st, 1915, and I have been unable to make a satisfactory renewal, so that on or before May 1st I shall be obliged to secure new quarters.

It will mean, sooner or later, the selling of my entire stock of furs, dresses, suits, coats and millinery. I could take my ordinary profits now and start a clearance after January 1st.

But, after carefully weighing the matter, I have decided to "do it now" and take such steps at once as will entirely dispose of my complete new and well selected stock—at reductions even greater than others will offer later on their "left-overs."

Staedter furs, Staedter suits and cloaks, Staedter millinery without reserve, will therefore be offered for immediate disposal, each article carrying the full guaranty that goes with Staedter merchandise when sold at regular prices.

3000 Treasure Islands!

You planned it out so carefully. Directly you grew up you were going to live like Robinson Crusoe on an island, only the person you cared most for would be there with you. In the Tropics one could swim and fish and sail, and live in the open all day. And the beautifully lonely nights, with only a scattering of friendly stars, and the prodigal young moon spilling honey on the sea, for company!

But while the years totalled up astonishingly, they never seemed quite able to overtake your dream. Other men broke away from the grind long enough to keep insultingly well, but somehow you never had the time.

Luckily, when the break-down came, your doctor who could heal dreams as well as people, packed you off to NASSAU-BAHAMAS. There the winter temperature averaged 72 fahr. and the air had the salt tang of the sea and the wild sweet fragrance of exotic flowers.

At first it was just loafing in the sun, then gradually lengthened surf baths, then interesting drives, then golf, then—why, then you were another man. Dark as a walnut, perfectly fit—you had found your Treasure Islands!

COUNCIL BODY DOOMS POLICE "SOFT SNAPS"

Subcommittee Decides to Cut Out Special Details from Department.

Members of the council subcommittee on police, with the approval of Chief Gleason, yesterday determined to apply the pruning knife to all special details and "soft snaps" in the department.

The adoption of the committee's recommendation will mean returning 250 policemen to patrol duty. The aldermen also came to the conclusion 1,000 additional patrolmen are required to protect the city from gunmen and thieves. The committee's report will be presented to the full committee on schools, fire, police, and civil service tomorrow, following which it will go to the council.

The recommendations are the result of a thorough study of conditions in the department, based on the findings of Maj. James Miles of the efficiency division of the civil service commission. The aldermen have had the coöperation of the chief and Second Deputy Funkhouser.

Specials Cost $200,000 a Year.

Maj. Miles estimated that special details for outside institutions, such as the county and the board of education, cost the city more than $200,000 a year. The police subcommittee decided that these details of men must either be withdrawn or the institutions must pay for the service. In the latter case the money will be used to hire patrolmen.

Included in the 250 men the committee proposes to make available for traveling beat are fifty-four license officers. These men are assigned to follow up dog, vehicle, and saloon licenses. The position has been looked upon by members of the force as a soft berth. It is the intention to have the patrolmen look after license matters in the future, in addition to their regular duties.

The proposed changes will bring the department for the first time in conformity with the provisions of the reorganization ordinance, according to the aldermen.

Uphold Chief's Contention.

The recommendation for 1,000 more patrolmen upheld the contention of the chief that his department is undermanned. It was construed as a reply to the minority of the council who prevented the passage of an emergency appropriation for 351 more patrolmen.

The subcommittee is composed of Aldermen Schaeffer, Watson, Lindheimer, Smith, and Vanderbilt. The aldermen were in conference with the chief and Maj. Miles during most of the morning.

City Club Discusses Crime.

The merits of the plan introduced before the Chicago city council last Monday night to increase the police department by 351 new patrolmen at once was discussed before the City club at noon by Ald. Ellis Geiger, who introduced the emergency proposition, and by Ald. Charles E. Merriam, who opposed the plan and succeeded in marshaling twenty-five votes against immediate action. Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the finance committee of the city council, also defended the action of his committee Friday in refusing to recommend the emergency appropriation.

Ald. Geiger gave reasons why he had advocated the emergency measure. Ald. Merriam defended his stand against any increase in the police department, declaring the city has sufficient men now if they were but utilized in the right way. He also charged the real cause for the crime wave in Chicago is the collusion of the detective department with pickpockets, crooks, and criminals.

Ald. Richert pointed out the present plans for the 1915 city budget call for something like $3,500,000 more than the income of the city will be for the year. He questioned the advisability of saddling a larger expense on the city until the means were provided for paying it.

Reasons for Opposing Ordinance.

Ald. Richert said the reason he opposed passing the emergency appropriation by the council last Monday night was that such matters should pass through the regular government machinery, which could be speeded up if found necessary so as to meet any emergency.

Ald. Geiger said he had investigated the exact condition in the police department.

"I found," said Ald. Geiger, "some conditions which justify, I believe, my action in asking for more policemen.

In 1905 we had in Chicago 2,196 patrolmen. In 1906 we increased the force by 866, giving the city at that time 3,062 patrolmen. The force as a whole was increased at that time from 3,046 to 4,077. Nine years later, in 1914, we have 3,410 policemen. This means we have increased our patrolmen but 348 in nine years. The force as a whole has been increased but 998 during these nine years.

"Now the population gradually has increased each of these nine years in considerably larger proportion to the increase in the police force.

Municipal Court Detail.

"As the population has increased, busy centers have grown up in the outskirts of the city, the traffic conditions downtown have multiplied, the work of patrolling our rivers and harbors has increased, the work of taking care of our bridges has increased, and there has been a number of bureaus added to our city governments which all have taken a certain toll in the way of policemen for work outside of the regular patrol duty.

"One of the things I might mention which has taken a large number of patrolmen from traveling beats has been the Municipal court system. Go to one of these courts located at the various police stations and you will find from twenty-five to fifty policemen in attendance. The time these policemen are in court they cannot be on post duty. I agree heartily with the proposition that the special detail work on the part of policemen should be eliminated. The men provided in such offices as in the county building, for instance, should be provided by county appropriations.

"But if we take all of the special detail policemen in Chicago and put them back walking beats we would only add about 200 more to the present patrol force. That is not enough men in my estimation."

Merriam's View of Situation.

Ald. Merriam said there were four steps required before the police department could be put on an efficient basis, as follows:

Elimination of criminals from the police force.

Elimination of "soft snaps" and special details.

Prevention of loafing and loitering.

Establishment of scientific and systematic police methods.

Mr. Merriam asserted the police now know the hangouts of the crooks and thieves and they do not make efforts to clean them out. He declared that much of the inefficiency of the police department could be traced to the inefficient political appointees who serve as prosecutors. The influence of the professional bondsmen must also be banished, he said, from the police and criminal courts.

"UNCLE JOE" TO ADDRESS MANUFACTURERS TUESDAY.

Former Speaker to Speak Before Annual Dinner of Association on "The Industrial Situation."

"Uncle Joe" Cannon will make his first public appearance since his reëlection to congress as an orator in Chicago Tuesday night. The congressman elect from downstate is billed as one of the speakers at the annual dinner of the Illinois Manufacturers' association in the Congress hotel.

The subject of the former speaker's impromptu address is "The Industrial Situation." It is expected the Danville politician will take opportunity to point out many follies of the Democratic administration and tell how good times would be, if he still wielded the gavel in the house.

Samuel G. Blythe and Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts will be the other speakers. Senator Weeks' subject will be "Relations of the Government to Business."

Colin H. Fyffe will be toastmaster for the dinner, which is the largest meeting of the manufacturers' association during the year.

MR. SMITH'S HANDSOME PRESENT

Celebrating his 30th Year in the piano business

You will not have to pay "spot cash" for the piano. If more convenient, pay a fraction of the price now and the Piano and the Dinner Set will be delivered at once.

Out-of-Town Buyers

will receive prompt, careful, generous service. Write for information. Pianos shipped everywhere.

Mr. Smith's present is an additional reason why you should buy now, but the main reason is the big value we offer in the instruments themselves. We have on sale now a carload of Pianos and Players repossessed from the stock of a southern dealer who has been in financial difficulties on account of the European war. These pianos have never been used; are only a little shopworn.

Kensington Piano, No. 141,293, regular price $265, now $149
Strohber Piano, No. 116,213, worth $350, only $236
Willard Piano, No. 141,080, regular price $275, special $164
Smith & Barnes Piano No. 141,091, a $425 piano at $298
Hoffmann Player, No. 141,191, worth easily $475, now $357
Smith & Barnes Player, No. 141,124, $500 value, now $369
Smith & Barnes Player, No. 141,158, sells at $550, now $385
Smith & Barnes Piano, No. 141,076, cheap at $225, now $215

Thomas A. Edison Examining the Wonderful New

Diamond Stylus

The secret of Edison's greatest triumph. The diamond is mounted in a special way to secure the perfect reproduction of the most minute shades of sound. This special mounting is another of the master inventor's great secrets—one that would be of untold value to the jeweler's trade. But he has reserved it for the exclusive use of his masterpiece, the Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph.

*Come to the Edison Shop and ask for Mr. Duggan. He will explain to you fully just how this wonderful invention has finally made the phonograph a real musical instrument.

No Needles to Change

The new Diamond Stylus, of course, does away with the bothersome process of changing needles that scratch and destroy records and have other bad features.

More important, this highly polished, specially mounted Diamond Stylus is so finely balanced that it simply floats over the indestructible sound grooves of the new Diamond Disc records, reproducing perfectly and without the slightest wear. The thousandth repetition finds the record in as perfect condition as the first, while discs on which needles are used wear out rapidly after a short period of service. The specially mounted Diamond Stylus preserves the record.

BUT the main value of the Diamond Stylus lies in the clearness of reproduction. It brings out all the delicate overtones preserved in the New Edison Records, that give body and richness to the tone. It creates that full, round, life-like tone peculiar to the Edison. There is no mechanical timbre—no metallic sound—nothing artificial—just the pure, clear, faithful reproduction of the original tone.

Concerts Now

No charge for seats

Come to the Edison Shop Concert Hall tomorrow and hear this special program of the finest music selected from the wonderful library of New Edison Records. There is no charge. We want everyone to know the great musical triumph Mr. Edison has achieved; how much he has done to bring the music of the greatest artists within reach of all. Request any record you choose—the music of the greatest singers, the most renowned instrumentalists, the latest dance music, the most fascinating popular melodies—we will be glad to play them. You will not be asked to purchase—no obligations whatever.

Easy Payment Plan

This new payment plan, with recently announced price, has interested a large number of Edison buyers, including those who are accustomed to buy for cash. You pay no money down on the instrument, and buy only a small supply of records. There is nothing to pay on the phonograph until one month after delivery of the instrument. Convenient monthly payments, thereafter, while enjoying the exquisite music of the New Edison.

Call and Hear

Do not miss this rare musical treat. No obligation whatever in calling. So many have visited our concert hall just to hear the wonderful music of the New Edison, that our attendants have been instructed to approach none on the subject of buying. But if you want any information they are at your service—just ask them.

TALKED PENURY; HAD A FORTUNE

New Yorker Complained of Hard Times; $30,000 in Gems in His Safe.

CASH, CHECKS, DRAFTS.

New York, Dec. 5.—Just before "Diamond Joe" Costen died he had complained to friends about hard times and told of having to borrow money.

This was several weeks ago, but the same friends have learned that he was by no means on the verge of penury, as he had told them. A fortune in gems and money belonging to him has already been found. Costen died in the New York hospital twenty-four hours after being removed from his rooms in the Breslin hotel.

Complained of Hard Times.

Two of the long, deep steel drawers of the safe in the Breslin were always used by Costen, who occasionally added to the little packets which nearly filled both of them at the time of his death.

He was very taciturn, but in the months just preceding his death spoke frequently of hard times, told of large insurance premiums to pay, for which he had to borrow the money, and seemed to feel that he was in financial straits.

Find $30,000 in Gems.

The final attack of his last illness caused his physicians to order Costen to be removed to the hospital. Two hours before his end he asked for his keys, and when they were handed to him he hooked the key chain about his neck, where the keys hung when he passed away.

In the safe drawers he had diamonds valued at $30,000. In an old trunk in his room filled with discarded clothing, an overworn garment when unrolled disclosed thirteen $1,000 bills. In other odd corners were checks, drafts, postal money orders, and other commercial paper for a total of large size.

RIDES THIRTY MILES TO RETURN FAT MAN'S SUIT.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 5.—To prevent a man weighing 295 pounds from trying to get into clothing made for a man of 150 pounds, Walter Fischer of Alton made a thirty mile trip from Alton to the Glades club to exchange an outfit of clothing he had left by mistake. Fischer had taken the wrong suitcase, and when he returned to the club he found Henry Leyser, an Alton man, puzzling over what to do with the small clothes which had been left for him. Fischer made the return trip in a motor boat.

Scrip

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Patent Office

—a mile in travel for a dollar in trade

Scrip doesn't make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, but it does better than that—it makes a ride grow where you had to walk before. It makes a vacation grow where you stayed at home before. It makes trips to the cool country woods grow where you baked and sweat all summer in the hot city streets before. It brings a glint of gladness to the eyes of children who have never had a railroad ride before. It brings a smile of happiness to the pale faces of mothers who haven't had a vacation in Heaven knows how long.

Scrip takes thousands of people to the mountains who have never seen anything bigger than a skyscraper in their lives. It takes thousands to the seashore who have never before smelled the tang of the salt sea air. It takes thousands for glorious tours on the Great Lakes who have never ridden any farther than St. Joe or Milwaukee before, and probably not that far.

Not only that, but Scrip

gets right down to plain business and helps out in the affairs of the workaday world if you want it to. It will buy your street car tickets if you like. Two miles of SCRIP will give you a ride on the elevated railroad from one end of the city to the other. 37 miles of SCRIP will give you 20 rides on either surface cars or the elevated. 110 miles of SCRIP will give you a $3.00 commutation ticket on any steam railroad running between Chicago and its suburbs. 147 miles of SCRIP will give you a $4.00 commutation ticket—184 miles will give you a $5.00 ticket—and so on.

The only human beings on this whirling globe who can't enjoy the benefits of SCRIP are those who are serving life sentences in jail. Everybody else, from the youngest to the oldest, from the richest to the poorest, WANTS SCRIP. Everybody who ever rides on a street car or a railroad or a boat WANTS SCRIP.

Every day of your life you've got to buy things. You've got to buy groceries and meat and clothing and drugs and shoes and soap and dress goods and hardware and furniture—the thousand and one things that are necessary every day in the year. You've got to buy them whether you get SCRIP with them or not. And as long as you can get SCRIP for nothing—FREE TRAVEL without a penny's cost—FREE STREET CAR RIDES for the mere asking—isn't it worth your while—isn't it worth anybody's while—to look for the stores that give you SCRIP?

LIQUOR CALLED BIGGEST CAUSE OF WOMEN'S FALL

Wisconsin Vice Commission Holds Wages Have No Material Relation to Wrong Step.

OFFERS REFORM MEASURES.

Madison, Wis., Dec 5.—The greatest cause of commercialized vice, according to a report of the Wisconsin legislative anti-vice commission, is the use of intoxicating liquors.

The conclusion was reached after fifteen months' study, and radical proposals for law improvement and better social conditions are made.

Contributory causes of vice are public dance halls road houses, poorly lighted parks, and public places, lack of responsibility by parents, nonenforcement of laws by public officials, lack of public amusement and recreation facilities, and automobiles, the report says.

The committee found that the wage question has no material relation to a girl's downfall.

Recommendations of Committee.

The committee recommends:

That a morals court be established in cities of the first class, with exclusive jurisdiction over all cases involving moral offenses.

That a law similar to the Mann act, applicable between cities, villages, and towns of the state, be enacted.

That police departments be required to record all written complaints made to it, with a resport of its findings thereon, with a view to centering responsibility.

That a permanent state police department be established in this state, with power to investigate immoral practices, the reasons for nonenforcement of law in all communities, and power to enforce the law where local officers fail to do it.

Urge Citizens Help Officials.

That local communities organize private associations to assist officers in the enforcement of such laws.

That in the trial of misdemeanors, when a jury is called the verdict of five-sixths of the jurors shall be sufficient to convict or acquit.

That the sale of liquor be prohibited within or in connection with dance halls.

That a liquor license may be automatically revoked upon a plea of guilty or conviction or upon nolo contendere for violation of any of the moral laws.

That stairs, family entrances, and private winerooms be prohibited in saloons and that no connection be had between them and any other rooms above or contiguous to the saloons.

Covers Sale of Liquor.

That a government liquor tax holder must also secure a local license.

That the license be issued to the floor, lot, and block of the premises where liquor is to be sold.

That public dance halls procure licenses, such dances to be supervised by a policewoman or other competent officer.

That the pass system used in many dance halls be forbidden by law.

That all hotels, rooming, and lodging houses be required to secure licenses; that they keep permanent registers of the names of all guests, to be signed in their own handwriting, the registers to show the hour of assignment of rooms and their surrender, with penalties for using fictitious names.

That the publicity of ownership be established by requiring the name of owners on the front of all hotels and rooming houses.

That women be on the board of managers of all institutions to which women or children are committed.

That policewomen be appointed in every city of the first, second, or third class.

Would Raise Age of Consent.

That the age of consent be raised from 14 years in the case of any female and 18 years in the case of a female of a previous chaste character, to 18 and 21 years, respectively.

That the industrial home for women be established, to be equipped with hospital facilities for treatment of venereal and other diseases, women convicted of immoral practices to be committed thereto for treatment and training.

That in cities of the first three classes special classes for subnormal children be established in the public schools, and that where necessary the state furnish free text books, meals and clothing to needy children to make compulsory education effective.

Urges Social Centers.

That social neighborhood centers be developed in connection with the school system.

That municipalities provide supervised amusements, particularly concerts, moving picture shows, etc.

That employers of domestic servants be required to furnish them with a suitable room in which to receive company.

That the number of hours of labor for domestic servants be fixed by law.

That the rights of the laboring class be protected.

That there be adequate insurance against poverty.

Frames Bills for Reforms.

Bills have been incorporated and recommended for the Mann act as applied to municipalities, for women police, for a permanent police department, for a state police department, for raising the age of consent, for an industrial home for women, for protection against venereal disease, for punishing pandering, to prohibit indecent exhibitions at fairs, to prohibit immorality in cafés, restaurants, saloons, etc., for licensing of hotels, etc., and in general for enforcing all of the regulations proposed in the report.

Honor to Confederate Soldiers.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 5.—A monument in memory of the sailors and soldiers of the confederacy was unveiled in Forest park here this afternoon. The monument was erected under the auspices of the St. Louis chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Fairyland Has Come True in State Street.

WILL RUN AGAIN IF WIFE PERMITS, HARRISON SAYS

Mayor Tells Followers He Cannot Re-enter Race Without Her Consent.

Wanted—A propitious day for announcing my candidacy for mayor for the sixth term. Mayor Harrison, City Hall.

Mayor Harrison cannot think of the proper day to announce his candidacy for mayor. He has considered a large number of days, such as Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's, and the like, but serious obstacles have appeared which made these days unfit ones.

Friends of the mayor have suggested what they believed to be entirely proper days on which such an announcement would have the desired effect on the Democratic clan. The mayor has listened and turned away—silent.

1,200 Democrats Call on Him.

More than 1,200 of the Cook County Democracy called on the mayor en masse yesterday to ask him if he wouldn't say these words: "Let's make it six." They were disappointed, however, with the mayor's remarks, although Chairman Miles J. Devine had sufficient innuendoes in his speech to give the stalwarts assurance that Mayor Harrison would again be in the race.

The inability of the mayor to find the suitable day for his announcement has flustered some of the workers who are desirous of getting into the harness early. Some of those who are not so close to the mayor's secretary are fearful lest Mr. Harrison will not seek the office again.

In an address to his callers the mayor admitted Mrs. Harrison is "boss" of his family, and it is she who must decide whether Carter H. Harrison is to be a candidate for the sixth term.

Cohorts Crowd Corridors.

The mayor's office and the corridors of the city hall outside the offices were filled with Democrats when the mayor came from his private office at the request of Chairman Devine. In a plea on the part of the County Democracy, Mr. Devine asked the mayor to accept the nomination again.

"If I were called upon today to decide," Mayor Harrison said, speaking from a chair at the entrance to his outer office, "my answer would be 'No.' When I ran for mayor the last time I promised my wife that it would be the last time. Up to the present, Mrs. Harrison is holding me to my promise, and Mrs. Harrison is 'boss' in my family.

"If I consulted my own health and comfort, I would not be a candidate again. The citizens of Chicago have honored father and me as no other municipality has honored one of its citizens. My father served five terms and I have served five terms. No other municipality has such a record.

Still Is a Fighter.

"There is nothing further in the mayoralty for me than the opportunity for service. I am not as young as I used to be, but I am enough of a fighter to do some things under way that will be of service to Chicago.

"This opportunity of public service appeals to me. If you are willing, I will delay my answer and be glad to take the question under consideration. I promise to try to use some of the blarney of Mr. Devine in an effort to influence Mrs. Harrison."

The mayor outlined some of the public work he intends to accomplish if he is elected again.

Thompson Attacks G. O. P.

William Hale Thompson, Republican candidate for the mayoralty nomination, attacked the plans of the Republican central committee during the day for its ward committee vote plan as a means of selecting a candidate.

WIFE'S SCREAMS ROUT BURGLAR

Mrs. T. J. Neff Gives Ragged Masked Man $17.50 and Then Cries for Aid.

ROB BY POLE AND HOOK

Mrs. Thomas J. Neff of 820 East Forty-sixth street, whose husband is employed in the circulation department of THE TRIBUNE, was aroused early yesterday by a noise in her room. She opened her eyes to see a small man in ragged clothes standing near the bed with his beady eyes boring at her over a red handkerchief which partly concealed his features.

Mrs. Neff sprang out of bed and was about to turn on the electric lights, when the man jabbed the point of a revolver against the back of her neck. Compelling her to walk ahead, he forced her to open a china closet and give him her purse containing $17.50. When he failed to leave after getting the money, Mrs Neff screamed and awakened the family on the floor above. The robber became frightened and fled. It was found he had used a ladder to gain entrance to an open window on the second floor.

Pole and Hook Robbers.

Two men believed to have used a pole and hook in extracting clothing from residences in Lawndale through open windows were arrested early in the day at Thirty-first street and Homan avenue. They gave their names as Abe Bushwall and John Miller, both of 526 DeKoven street. They carried a suitcase filled with clothing and a long broomstick. In the pocket of one of the prisoners was found a hook fashioned to fit on the end of the stick. The articles in their possession were identified as stolen property.

Burglars who are believed to have used a wagon carted off four bags of coffee worth $19.50 from E. Bankes & Co.'s store at 406 West Division street. Chester Wooton of 118 East Thirty-first street was strong armed by two men and robbed of $11 in Thirtieth street, near Michigan avenue.

Burglars Get $208.

Clothing and jewelry worth $208 was stolen by burglars who jimmied their way into the apartment of Henry B. Dodge at 5406 East View park. Two pickpockets stole a $50 watch and chain from Herbert B. Swift of 4900 Blackstone avenue at the Forty-seventh street station of the south side elevated road.

Thomas Bupont, a negro, who was shot and wounded three times on Nov. 25 by Marion W. Murphy while raiding the latter's chicken coop, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $2,000 on a charge of burglary.

Edward J. Sullivan, 18 years old, 2038 Ogden avenue, was identified at the detective bureau by Eugene H. Darche of 711 North Avers avenue as one of three men who robbed him of a gold watch and $10 near his home Oct. 22. Sullivan was arrested in a raid on a poolroom at 2040 Ogden avenue.

MAY VOID ARIZONA LAW.

Alien Employment Act Protested by Britain and Italy, Gov. Hunt Is Asked to Suspend It.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—On the protests by the British and Italian governments against the Arizona anti-alien employment law, the state department today asked Gov. Hunt whether his authority would permit him to suspend its operation and whether he thought it advisable to take other measures to prevent its immediate enforcement.

Toyland Rings wi.h Jollity as Santa Visits Loop Stores

BY AUDFIE ALSPAUGH.

Well, Mr. and Mrs. Everybody and all the little Everybodies, weren't you in the line yesterday waiting to ride the elephant and ponies, or was it the line winding slowly into the menagerie of wild animals, or the Midway Plaisance, or Brownieville, or Polar Land, or Alice in Wonderland, or past the Electric City?

Surely you must have been there, because Everybody was, and then some. The big Everybodies were just as thick as the little ones, and they seemed just as interested in what was going on in all these big pleasure places set in the State street stores for the special holiday delectation of small folks.

Fairyland Come True.

The Christmas spirit flowing through all the departments of the great stores has reached high tide in Toydom. It's just like fairyland come true.

There's Alice in Wonderland, rabbit and all, marveling the minds of small observers, and there is Muggins tickling the hearts of them, for Muggins is a small elephant who has gone from a stage vaudeville engagement into another type of amusement purveying, in which six small children—any and all small children picked from the lineup as their turn comes and sat into a gorgeous red velvet howdah—ride on his back around a sawdust inclosure.

Muggins seems to like it as well as the children, which is saying considerable, for he rolls his round eyes roguishly and reaches out a soft, curling trunk inquiringly at any one who happens to attract his interest. Though he is small, he is full grown, being 6 years old, perfectly trained, and perfectly safe for the small folks who surround him. His appearance marks the debut of an elephant on State street, and, judging by the crowd waiting on him, he is going to smash all box office records.

Deacon and Buster, Too.

Along with Muggins are Deacon and Buster, two of the tiniest, cutest little Shetland ponies on the sawdust, fixed with cunning saddles and bridles and led by a kind man if the small rider is a bit fearful. There are plenty of kind men around to see that nothing happens to anybody, though far be it from me, after watching Muggins wink his wise little eye, even to fear the tiniest bit of an accident.

But everybody can't stay around Muggins all the time. There are crowding everybodies behind, and there are dozens of other places to see. An elevator to toydom anywhere leads one straight into something interesting.

Sure Nuff Menagerie.

There's a sure 'nough menagerie in one place where, and with protection duly regarded by substantial iron bars, one can get near the denizens of the jungle, such as tigers and lions and leopards and monkeys and bears—some of them a bit bored looking, tis true—but the real thing, not the papier maché kind.

And there's a fascinating Noah's ark, a large sized, ancient looking boat, manned with a competent crew of monkey folk, one of whom is engaged in automatic fishing, with a washing hung out and open windows. Every sign is of domestic life in the process of living, and scattered over the deck are all the animals in the world—toy ones this time—ranged two by two.

Confusing the historical impression a bit, but adding immensely to the fun of the thing, there is a gangplank up which, at the instigation of a certain proprietary gentleman, the animals, on rollers, hop blithely toward an interior disappearance. The original Noah family, of course, is also present.

Brownies Hold Their Spell.

In another place the brownies renew their spell on childhood, and there is a miniature Midway plaisance, aglow with colored lights, a-din with voices of gayly dressed folk, clowns and Indians, and Chinese and Spaniards, and cowboys and every other costumed sort, chanting their wares. A miniature live "cop" person dispenses authority.

One store opens a glimpse into a lovely section of the polar land, icicle hung and glacier gleaming, with really, truly sea lions in the midst. Not only can this be seen, but it can be gone around in and looked at close and marveled at.

Marvelous Electrical City.

A marvelous electrical city with tunnels and hills and houses and street cars and all the proper belongings of luxuriant civic existence is banked a dozen deep with watchers, so the mere member of the outer edge could not see all the glory therein.

Wooden horses of Shetland size adjusted with powerful springs that permit of a tremendously galloping rate of speed, with absolute regard of the "safety first" slogan, lure small boys from the fascinating world of steam engines and self-propelling automobiles.

In the midst of all these glories the patron saint of Christmas time is not forgotten. He is everywhere, almost, in his customary regalia of red and white and whiskers, and he takes shy folk by the hand and delves deep into their secret desires. He has his little house, here and there, and in one place it is a little snow house in a snow field where cute live rabbits scutter around. Here there is a special light of the kind they use in the "movies," where any youngster can have a lasting impression made of himself and the good old man on post cards.

Such toys! Everything from a packed picnic basket to a stationary grocery sets the heart to beating.

There's enough to see in these really royal pleasure grounds to keep one busy a week.

ATTACKS NONUNION MEALS.

Miss Elizabeth Maloney Urges Political Equality League Womens' Aid.

Miss Elizabeth Maloney, business manager of the striking Waitresses' union, in a speech before the Political Equality league in the Congress hotel yesterday asked the women not to patronise the Knab restaurants and other places which, she said, did not employ union labor. She condemned the State street department stores because they had backed up the restaurants against which her union had called a strike.

Woman's Fall Proves Fatal.

Mrs. Rachel Cohn of 1134 South California avenue, who was injured in a fall down a stairway, died yesterday.

HOLD RAIL AGENT AS ROBBER

Police Report Looting of I. C. Sixty-third Street Station Was "Inside Job."

A police report that the robbery of the Sixty-third street station of the Illinois Central railroad Sept. 12, when $200 was taken, was an "inside" job was supported yesterday by Judge Scully in the Boys' court. He held 18 year old Phillip Wieskilnski of 6341 Commercial avenue, the station agent, to the grand jury in bonds of $1,000 on a charge of embezzlement.

Court Denies New Egg Trial.

Judge Maloney yesterday overruled a motion for a new trial in behalf of fifty cases of eggs seized and condemned by members of the state food commission.

WORLD EXPERTS TO UNVEIL STARS IN BIG MEETING

Scientists of National Academy to Reveal Secrets of the Weather.

Scientists and professors in departments of the National Academy of Science will hold their annual sessions at the University of Chicago tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday. The work of the academy will be divided into the following groups: Mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, geophysics, geology, botany, bacteriology, sociology, paleontology, and physiology. The members of the academy will give the results of research and experimental work and will discuss scientific theories in the various branches at the daily session.

President and Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson will be hosts to the visiting scientists as representatives of the university at a dinner tomorrow night in Hutchinson café. On Tuesday Dr. William H. Welsh of the faculty of Johns Hopkins university will give an address at a luncheon to the scientific men at the Quadrangle club. The members of the academy will be entertained on Tuesday evening at dinner by the Chaos club.

Lectures on Stars.

Director William Wallace Campbell of the Lick observatory in California will give two lectures on "Stellar Evolution and the Formation of the Earth" at sessions at 8 o'clock tomorrow night and at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The lectures will be given under the William Ellery Hale foundation, donated to the University of Chicago by Prof. George E. Hale, a nonresident member of the faculty, and his sister and brother, as a memorial to their father.

Prof. Gilbert M. Bliss, Prof. Forest Ray Moulton, Prof. Julius Wilczynski, Prof Elias H. Moore, and Prof. Leonard E. Dickson, all of the University of Chicago, will lecture before the mathematical division. Dr. Dickson will discuss the "Radical —Velocities of Nebulæ."

Ninth Satellite of Jupiter.

In the astronomy division Dr. S. B. Nicholson of the University of California will tell of the discovery of the ninth satellite of Jupiter. Prof. E. E. Barnard and Prof. Edwin B. Frost of Chicago will take part in the program of discussion of the astronomical department.

Prof. A. A. Michelson of Chicago will discuss "The Behavior of Metals Near the Rupture Point" at sessions of the physics scientists. Prof. Thomas C. Chamberlin of the University of Chicago will be the chief speaker at the meetings of the geophysics and geology departments.

Prof. Balke and Prof. Sears of the University of Illinois will give the results of joint research work in a paper on "Atomic Tantalum" at sessions devoted to chemistry topics. Prof. Parr and Prof. Washburn of the University of Illinois, Associate Prof. Harkins and Professors McCoy, Stieglitz, and Mr. Humprey of the University of Chicago faculty will lecture at the sessions of the chemists.

Plan Joint Meetings.

The botany and bacteriology departments will hold joint meetings. Dr. Charles Allen of Wisconsin, Associate Prof. C. J. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago, Assistant Prof. William Crocker, Prof. Henry Jordan, Prof. Lillie, and Mr. Trelease of the University of Illinois will take part in the program of addresses.

Dr. Shirot Tashiro of the University of Chicago will speak to the physiology division on "The Nature of Nerve Impulse" and Prof. Anton J. Carlsen of the Medical school of the university will discuss the findings of extensive research and experimental work in an address on "The Physiology of the Stomach in Man." Dr. Carlson has for years been experimenting to discover the causes of hunger and the psychology of the hunger sensation.

OTTO SCHNEIDER ENDS HIS EXILE

Former School Board Head Went to Germany in 1909 When Defeated for Re-election.

HE BRINGS NEW IDEAS.

Tells How Chicago Should Proceed with Industrial Education; Sure Kaiser Will Win War.

After a self-imposed exile of five years, Otto C. Schneider, former president of the board of education, has returned to Chicago. When he left Chicago, he asserted that there were still some gentlemen left in Germany. When he returned, and took up his residence at Hotel Grasmere, he said that he had found Germany the quietest and pleasantest place to live in he had ever known, even since the war began.

Mr. Schneider left Chicago when he failed to be elected to his third term as president of the board of education. What hurt him most was the action of Theodore Robinson and Modie J. Spiegel in turning against him to support Alfred R. Urion.

Chicagoan for Forty Years.

He had appointed Mr. Robinson chairman of the school management committee, and Mr. Spiegel chairman of the finance committee. At the time he left Mr. Schneider had been a resident of Chicago for nearly forty years.

He believes that there are many features of the German school system which should be adopted in Chicago.

"Vocational education," he said, "is not taken up here to the extent it should be. The first attempt at it was made about six years ago, when I was president of the board. In Berlin I counted 101 different vocations which are taught in the schools. Practical mechanics assist in teaching and an academic education is not demanded of them. In their vocational work they have challenged the admiration of the world.

A Tip to Chicago.

"My suggestion is that Chicago go and do likewise. Conditions are vastly different here and the system would have to be adapted according to our constitution and our different circumstances. I am not in favor of the dual system for vocational training. I believe the board of education can take care of the vocational work without creating a separate administrative body.

"In Germany there are 40,000 teachers in the army. That is 25 per cent of all teachers, but by doubling up every child is taken care of.

"Germany must be a nation of heroes when the mothers can send their sons and wives can send their husbands to the war without shedding a tear. It is not necessary to pull out the recruits in Germany with a corkscrew as it is in England. More men volunteered for service than the government could make use of.

Cousin Killed in Battle.

"A cousin of mine, who was 40 years old, and who had a wife and two children, could not be held back from the war, although he had privileges which he could have taken advantage of to keep from going to war if he wanted to. He joined the army Sept. 28 and was killed the first week in October. I found it out when I sent him a box of cigars. They were returned to me at Wiesbaden marked only 'Gefallen.'

"Germany is up in arms as one man. Every woman is doing something, if it is merely sewing bandages, knitting stockings, or sending fruit juice to the men in the field. Germany can stand the war longer than any one else. By placing an import tax on grain Germany has succeeded in growing enough grain to support its inhabitants.

Sure Germany Will Win.

"I have spoken to a great many officers. They are agreed with all the rest of Germany that there can be but one outcome, and that a victorious one for Germany."

Before leaving for Germany Mr. Schneider gave out a parting statment concerning educational affairs. He said:

"The board of education usually works like a headless institution.

"Paderewski could not get a position as music teacher on the basis of fitness demanded of physical training teachers in Chicago.

"Banishing school prizes is saying children are all mud or all diamond.

"As long as children of union and nonunion fathers sit side by side, teachers should not affiliate with labor unions."

UNCLE SAM SANTA CLAUS GIVES NAMES TO CHARITY.

Assistant Postmaster Sends Letters Mailed by Children to Organization.

Assistant Postmaster John M. Hubbard, Chicago's official Santa Claus, sent to charity organizations yesterday a number of letters he had received from children asking Santa Claus "not to forget me for Christmas."

"Dear Santa: I want a doll," one letter read from a little girl. "My brother wants a rocking horse."

Another child wrote:

"Please bring some coal, Santa Claus. My mama wants some, because I heard her say she wished Santa would bring some coal."

Another letter came from a boy who said he was 12 years old and carrying papers.

"Santa Claus, we are very poor," it read. "Grandma is sick and old. My aunt can't earn very much."

Several letters were from children who said their father was in the house of correction. Mr. Hubbard said the names and addresses will be given to any person who desires to play Santa Claus to the children who sent the letters.

Child's Burns Prove Fatal.

Frank Kolar, 6 years old, of [illegible] West Seventy-fifth street died yesterday of burns received when his clothing caught fire from burning papers which had been left on the floor near the kitchen range.

HOOSIERS DINE; IDLE DAYS AHEAD FOR PUBLISHERS

Writer and Artist Put Down Tools When Indianians Start Celebration.

GET YOUR "WHO'S WHO."

For a day at some time in the near future mighty presses will stand idle. Editors and subeditors, manuscript readers of the first line of defense and manuscript readers of the second line will have a respite. Printers and pressmen, proofreaders and bookbinders will suffer an involuntary layoff. The book reviewers of the nation will rest their tired eyes while their tortoise shell spectacles lie folded in their cases.

All that it means, and more, when the wheels of literary production cease to turn. Yesterday those wheels were idle. Save from the ephemeral stuff that came from the typewriters in newspaper offices not a word was tapped. The curly haired, long lashed, two fisted pretender to the throne of Graustark was left with the assassin's dagger at his throat. The Girl with the Gold Tooth was left in the middle of a quote, with the snappy twist of made-to-order slang yet to come. The war time character sketch of His Lordship with whom I dined in London was left without a nose.

Honor to Chicago.

And the flower of Indiana made merry. They honored Chicago—the Indianapolis of this aspiring commonwealth—with their presence, and they sang a new set of words to the tune of "Illinois."

Once every year for the last decade it has been so, and always the same reaction in the world of letters, always the same rekindling of the artistic ambitions of Chicago, have been noticed.

Although the whole city was dominated pro tem. by the Hoosier spirit, it was at the Hotel Congress, where the literati sat as guests at the Indiana Society of Chicago's tenth annual dinner, from which that spirit radiated.

Van of Invaders Arrives.

The dinner was the second event of the day. Early in the afternoon George T. Buckingham, the chief local Hoosier, took the advance guard of the invading army off a private car, and led the way to the Blackstone hotel. There luncheon was served to the select company. Who? Get your "Who's Who" and check 'em off:

Senator John W. Kern, Congressman Joseph G. Cannon, Thomas Taggart, John M. Studebaker, James E. Watson [once whip of congress], Col. Charles L. Jewett, Kin Hubbard, Judge Francis E. Baker of the United States Appellate court, Judge Albert Anderson of Indianapolis, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, Judge Quincy A. Myers [chief justice of the Indiana Supreme court], the Rev. John Cavanaugh [president of Notre Dame university], George Richmond Grose [president of De Pauw university], Winthrop E. Stone [president of Purdue university], W. A. Millis [president of Hanover university], John T. McCutcheon, George Barr McCutcheon, Orville Harrold!

Bang and Bugle Call.

The festivities of the evening opened at a gathering in the Elizabethan room with a cocktail and with a bang. A bugle call summoned the diners to the gold room, where the Purdue university glee club, having attended in private to the prosaic preliminaries of getting the pitch, burst forth in a song of welcome.

Two other moral courses preceded the Wabash river oysters—an invocation by Dr William Chalmers Colvert and a toast to "Our Country," proposed by President Buckingham. In this toast the president generously included the rest of these United States—and that was the last heard through the evening of forty-seven of them.

SEVEN INDICTED HOOSIERS RELEASED WITHOUT BAIL.

Lieutenant Governor, One of the Thirteen State Officials Hit, May Seek Early Trial.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 5.—Seven of the thirteen state officials indicted last night by the Marion county grand jury, appeared in Criminal court today and were released on their own recognizance.

Attorneys for the indicted men intimated today that the constitutionality of the act of 1885 limiting the number of employés of the legislature might be attacked on the grounds that the constitution gives free rein in this matter. The act has been a dead letter for a number of years.

The indicted men, who are all Democrats, and most of them identified with the Taggart element, probably will come to trial before Judge-Elect Collins, Republican, who, with a Republican prosecutor, takes office Jan. 1.

It is reported, however that the attorneys for Lieut. Gov. O'Neill will ask for an early trial in order that his case may be made a test. An effort may be made to have the trial this month before Judge Markey, who holds office until Jan. 1.

LIFTS CATTLE QUARANTINE.

U. S. Releases Scattered Counties in Four States from Foot and Mouth Disease Orders.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—Release of scattered counties in Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and New York from the foot and mouth disease quarantine was ordered this afternoon by the department of agriculture.

BOOK BY WEIGLE TELLS PERILS OF WAR MOVIE MAN

"Tribune" Photographer Relates Thrills of Battlefield Under Fire.

In "My Experiences on the Belgian Battlefields" Edwin F. Weigle, staff photographer of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, tells in detail how he went to Belgium and brought back the only motion pictures so far taken of the greatest of all wars. Mr. Weigle's achievement already has been told above the power of pen by his war pictures in THE TRIBUNE, and still more impressively on the movie screens, but the little volume which Mr. Weigle has written fills a gap and answers the question asked by every one who has seen his remarkable pictures: "How?"

The average newspaper reader does not realize the magnitude of the task accomplished when one war photograph has been taken. It is true he imagines the danger which the photographer went through in taking an action scene with bullets whizzing about him, shells screaming overhead, and shrapnel bursting within a few rods of the camera.

Difficulty of Work.

But a picture of a ruins or of the wounded does not tell the story of the hundred and one incidents which the photographer went through in order to obtain it; of how he had to think and act quickly every minute of the time, when a wrong course would have meant utter failure of his mission; of the hardships he underwent in passing through districts where spies were shot down like rabbits and sentries always with their fingers quivering on the triggers. These things Mr. Weigle tells in a simple, unpretentious manner and with as little self-consciousness as if he had gone out to snap a Memorial day parade.

It is a story of action. There is not an idle moment in the little yellow booklet, just as there was not an idle moment for the writer during as thrilling a three months' experience as any war photographer ever will undergo and get back alive to tell the story. The story is written in plain narrative style—newspaper style—and has all the more punch for its directness. Every incident is related briefly and without frills, from the time Mr. Weigle left Chicago with Joseph Medill Patterson Aug. 3 until he landed back in town on Oct. 26.

How He Got to Antwerp.

He hurries over his description of the trip across the Atlantic and recounts briefly his trip to Berlin, where he was refused permission by the authorities to take pictures, and his return to the Hague. There he met the American ambassador, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, and thought of the scheme of having Van Dyke appoint him a special messenger of the United States government to carry mail to Antwerp in order to get through the lines. He tells of an incident at Esschen, when his presence of mind prevented the Belgian military authorities from confiscating his whole photographic outfit.

"Tight situations make the mind work fast," says Mr. Weigle. "I thought more deeply in one minute than I ever had thought in an hour before. Here were the Belgians carting away my motion picture camera, all my film and baggage. Like a flash a thought came to me.

How He Saved Pictures.

"I went to the Belgians and told them again that I was a messenger of the United States carrying a most important letter to the American consul, Henry N. Diederich, at Antwerp; that I had to take my baggage along, and that, if they wished, they might seal up my camera case with sealing wax and impress on it the seal of Belgium, and that I would agree not to break the seals or use the cameras unless I got permission from Consul Diederich or the Belgium authorities."

The scheme worked. The cameras were sealed up and he was permitted to go on to Antwerp. But how carefully he handled the camera case in order that the brittle sealing wax might not be cracked and he be thrown into prison as a spy! He relates how one night, after he had arrived in Antwerp and sought in vain for permission to break the seals, he thought of a scheme whereby he would offer the Belgian Red Cross half of the proceeds from the motion pictures in return for permission to take them. Then came the famous trip to the battlefield of Termonde.

Steps Over Bodies.

"As I came closer to the line of fire," he continues, "the grewsomeness of the war became more and more apparent. I had to step over dead bodies constantly. Every now and then a wounded soldier would cry out in anguish to me. One who was seriously wounded, reached up at my trousers as I went by and clinched his nails into the cloth in a last desperate plea for help. As I bent down to pick him up he fell over—dead.

"The moaning of the wounded was mingled with the loud, piercing sounds of shot and shell. Bullets were singing through the air with their familiar 'zing.' Deadly shrapnel was breaking all about. The roar of cannon always blotted out the inferior sounds. The edge of the Belgian firing line was about 300 yards from where I stood. Many of the men were fighting from the trenches. Others were lying about in the fields. From back of the rows of infantry came the shots of cannon and machine guns firing over the heads of infantry at the Germans on the other side.

Wounded Men First.

"I stood there grinding my camera for a few minutes when the order to retreat came, and the lines moved out of my camera's range. It was too dangerous to venture into the open field, so I dropped back to find Patterson and the car.

"Then I saw an example of Patterson's hospitality. He had turned our automobile into a Red Cross hospital and was piling in the wounded to take them where medical attention could be given. I set my camera on the ground and helped the wounded into the car. We strapped two of them on our trunk rack. Several were bleeding so badly and were so covered with dirt that we stripped off their clothes and gave them our cravenettes."

But it was during the sixteen hours he was hidden in a subcellar in Antwerp while the house above him was battered to pieces by the German siege guns that Mr. Weigle received the most thrilling part of his whole experience. Together with D. H. de Meister, the Dutch vice consul, and E. E. Hunt, correspondent of the New York World, he had been invited to stay at a house rented at 74 Rue du Péage by Donald C. Thompson, the Kansas photographer.

Awakened by "Booms."

"It was a little after 10 o'clock when I fell asleep," Mr. Weigle writes. "At 12 o'clock I was awakened by the most horrifying shots I ever have heard. Four loud 'booms' followed in rapid succession. They were accompanied by the crumbling of buildings, the breaking of hundreds of panes of window glass, of general disorder that seemed only comparable to an earthquake. The entire house quivered like a leaf in the wind.

"I jumped out of the bed in a flash and dashed for the stairway that led downstairs. Almost flying down from the third floor came the Dutch vice consul in his pajamas. He was shaking from head to foot, scared almost to the point of insanity. Together we bounded down to the first floor, where we met Thompson and Hunt running toward the basement.

"We looked the basement over hurriedly. Thompson pointed to a small subcellar where coal had been stored. He ran toward it and opened the door. It was more a hole than anything else. It was about 8 feet long, 4 feet wide, and only 4 feet high.

Apples and Vichy Water—Food!

"We ran upstairs and got three mattresses. These we planked against the door with some boards to hold them. Before we locked ourselves in this subcellar we took in a supply of apples and French vichy water, which we found in the basement, because we did not know how long we would be prisoners and needed food.

"I cannot describe to you thrillingly enough the misery of that scene in the subcellar. Three of us would lie on the floor while one sat on the box at the blocked door. We could not stand up. We were jammed in. There we were cramped up in a small subcellar, with a dim candlelight to make the scene more desolate. The next thing that happened was the falling of a mass of débris which we knew represented the top of our building crumbling in. It followed immediately after a volley of shots. We could hear bricks and other material pounding on the door of our subcellar.

Shell Hits House.

"Pieces of the débris forced their way through the door and imbedded themselves in the mattresses. We did not dare to get out. We waited and waited. The hours passed slowly. We watched as the minutes passed. Suddenly at 3:30 in the afternoon a shell struck our house with a deadly crash. The entire building crumbled. Débris poured in. The dust and smoke from the burning matter above were suffocating. The air was clouded with smoke. We felt sure that we would smother or burn to death if we did not get out. We decided to get out instead of being burned alive.

"First we talked the matter over carefully and decided to pull down the mattresses, open the door, and go out one by one. We planned to leave fifty feet apart, so that the shells could not strike us all down together. I was to leave first, Hunt second, Thompson third, and the vice consul last. We agreed that if one was wounded the others were to pick him up and carry him to safety. Our plans arranged, we pulled down the mattresses and the battered door fell in. To our astonishment the clear sky greeted us from above. The entire house was in ruins and was burning."

DENIES BAR TO NURSES' PAY

Judge Windes Refuses Injunction to Prevnt Payment of Claim on County.

Judge Windes yesterday denied a petition for an injunction to restrain the county board from paying the demands of the Illinois Training School for Nurses for pay for furnishing nurses to the county hospital and other county institutions. The suit was brought by Elmer Johnson, as a taxpayer, and alleged that the county was acting without authority in attempting to make the payment.

PEORIA TRANSCRIPT SELLS.

Fred Stowe, Editor, and A. E. Stevens Said to Have Bought Out H. E. Chubbuck.

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 5.—Announcement was made today of the sale of the Transcript, a morning newspaper, to A. E. Stevens of Chicago and Fred Stowe of Peoria. Stevens is connected with an advertising association and Stowe is editor of the Transcript. H. E. Chubbuck, vice president of the Illinois Traction company, has been credited with holding the majority of stock in the Transcript.

WANT TO SHOOT INDIANS.

Boys Leave Home and Start West, but Meet Police Delay in Chicago.

Two boys who ran away from Milwaukee "to go west to shoot Indians" were found yesterday at Randolph and North State streets. They are Victor Thust, 15 years old, and Eugene Engman, 14 years old. They are being held for their parents. The boys took their savings from their banks and intended to go west.

JUDGE ASKS IF SHE SLEW MAN

Mrs. Fishbourne Denied Decree After Court Recalls Murder.

ACQUITTED OF CRIME.

Mrs. Blanche Fishbourne appeared before Judge Sullivan in the Superior court yesterday to testify in her suit for divorce against Louis Fishbourne. She said they were married in the summer of 1906, and that Fishbourne deserted her the following April. On the judge's bench lay some Criminal court records.

"When did you kill Patrick T. Murphy?" asked the court, leaning forward.

"That is a peculiar question," replied Mrs. Fishbourne, so low that those in the back of the court could not hear. Her attorney interposed, but the court insisted that the witness answer.

"When did you shoot Murphy?" he asked.

"He died on April 18," replied the witness.

"Were you married to Murphy?"

"No."

Lived with Murphy.

"You had been living with him since you left your husband, had you not?"

"Yes."

"Do you think that shows you to have been a true and affectionate wife, as set forth in your bill, and entitles you to a divorce from Fishbourne?"

The witness made no answer, and the court, turning to her lawyer, asked: "Did you know this?"

"Well, I knew of the case, but I did not know this fact," replied Attorney Harry J. Meyerovitz. The court dismissed the suit for want of equity. Mrs. Fishborne was acquitted some time ago of the murder of Murphy in a house at 2919 West Harrison street. Evidence showed Mrs. Fishbourne objected to a boarder, and had thrown his clothes out of the flat, when a quarrel arose, and Murphy was alleged to have attacked her with a butcher knife.

Wife Up and Left.

Charles H. Chappell of 818 Bowen avenue told Judge Walker his wife, Ida, "just made up her mind to go and wouldn't come back." He was granted a divorce. Judge Walker also granted a divorce to Mrs. Jennie Amelia Backstrom when she testified her husband, Frank Backstrom, objected to her attending an uncle's wedding and beat her. Mrs. Emma Riley said her husband threw a platter of meat at her daughter and shied a sirup can at her. She won a decree.

Mrs. Eleanor Bird of 3818 Forest avenue, who was married to James Bird, an artist, in Carlisle, England, in 1881, was granted a divorce when she testified her husband had been drunk more times than she could remember in the last four or five years.

"He demanded that I ask my mother to give him some money to buy drink with and I refused. Then he said, 'That is what you will get.' I turned around to see what he meant and he hit me in the face and kicked me in the stomach and threatened to kill me."

This recital won a decree for Mrs. A. Carrie Eddy from James R. Eddy, a blacksmith.

Letter Wins His Decree.

Peter C. Brickle of 2611 Eastwood avenue presented a letter received from his wife, Mrs. Margaret Brickle, in Seattle, Wash., last September.

"As for you, Peter," she wrote, "I wish you health and success and happiness, but some time, when I have passed out of your life and some one else has your love and protection, just give one thought to me wandering alone and friendless. Why should I not love you? You are the only one in all my life who ever did anything for me, but don't pity me. If I can't have your love, I don't want your pity. If a divorce will benefit you in any way, you have my consent."

The divorce was granted.

The report of Judge Walker in the Circuit court for the month of November shows that in that month the court disposed of 174 divorce cases and heard more than 300 motions in divorce matters.

BOMBS AND BATTLE ADD TO NEW YORK CRIME EPIDEMIC.

Disaster Prevented at Children's Court by Discovery of Explosive—Police Rout Gangsters.

New York, Dec. 5.—Two bomb plantings and a running revolver fight by gangsters were added today to New York's recent outbreak of dynamitings, street assassinations and inter-gang saloon fights.

Some one planted a bomb under the iron steps of a shop at 24 Union square late last evening. Its explosion did some damage and frightened hundreds who were passing through Union square.

The second bomb was planted at the children's branch of the Bronx court. It was discovered in time to prevent its explosion.

The street battle was staged at Tenth avenue and Thirty-second street. No one was hit, although many shots were fired before police scattered the fighters by use of their own revolvers.

OFFICE OATH ADMINISTERED TO NEW COUNTY BOSSES.

County Clerk Sweitzer Swears in Officials—Judge Scully's Ceremony at His Home.

County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer yesterday said he had virtually completed administering the oath of office to the newly elected officials of Cook county. In each case it was purely a matter of form, the county clerk said, without any frills or ceremonies.

Mr. Sweitzer went to the homes of Judge Thomas F. Scully, elected county judge, and Henry Horner, elected judge of the Probate court, and swore them in. Judge Scully recently had a minor operation performed by an oculist and Mr. Horner has been confined by the grip.

County Commissioners Elect Reinberg, Scott, Ryan, Casperski and Nowak were sworn in yesterday, and others took the oath during the week.

Damon & Pythias
Spectacular Film Production by the UNIVERSAL BEGINS TOMORROW at the Fine Arts Theater
Michigan Boulevard, Near Van Buren St.
Endorsed by the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias and a Million Other Knights in the United States and Canada

Human friendship was far more sublime hundreds of years ago than it is today. Even the terrors of commerce and death had no effect upon it, and the man who was a traitor to his friends was looked upon with even more contempt than he who was a traitor to the State. The former could never be forgiven, while the latter might be excused on the plea of politics.

The story of Damon and Pythias is the most sublime exemplification of human friendship ever given to the world. And while the Knights of Pythias and their families are particularly interested because their order is founded on friendship, this beautiful film should be seen by every man, woman and child in this city, because of the beautiful moral it points and the liberal education it affords in the beauties of man's humanity to man.

Aside from the moral it points, the film is a classic in spectacular grandeur. It is laid in the hills of Greece during the most gorgeous and ceremonious of its days. Thousands of Grecian and Roman warriors engage in it and nothing is left to the imagination in scenic effects, costuming and artistic setting. There are colossal battle scenes, ancient Grecian gardens with their romances and dances, cities are built and destroyed, there are exciting chariot races and other sensational incidents that thrill and enthrall.

The story is beautifully enacted by such Universal stars as Herbert Rawlinson, William Worthington, Anna Little, Cleo Madison and thousands of others trained UNIVERSAL favorites who give to the production the realism and dramatic fire that are necessary to make it notable. It opens at the Fine Arts Theater tomorrow.

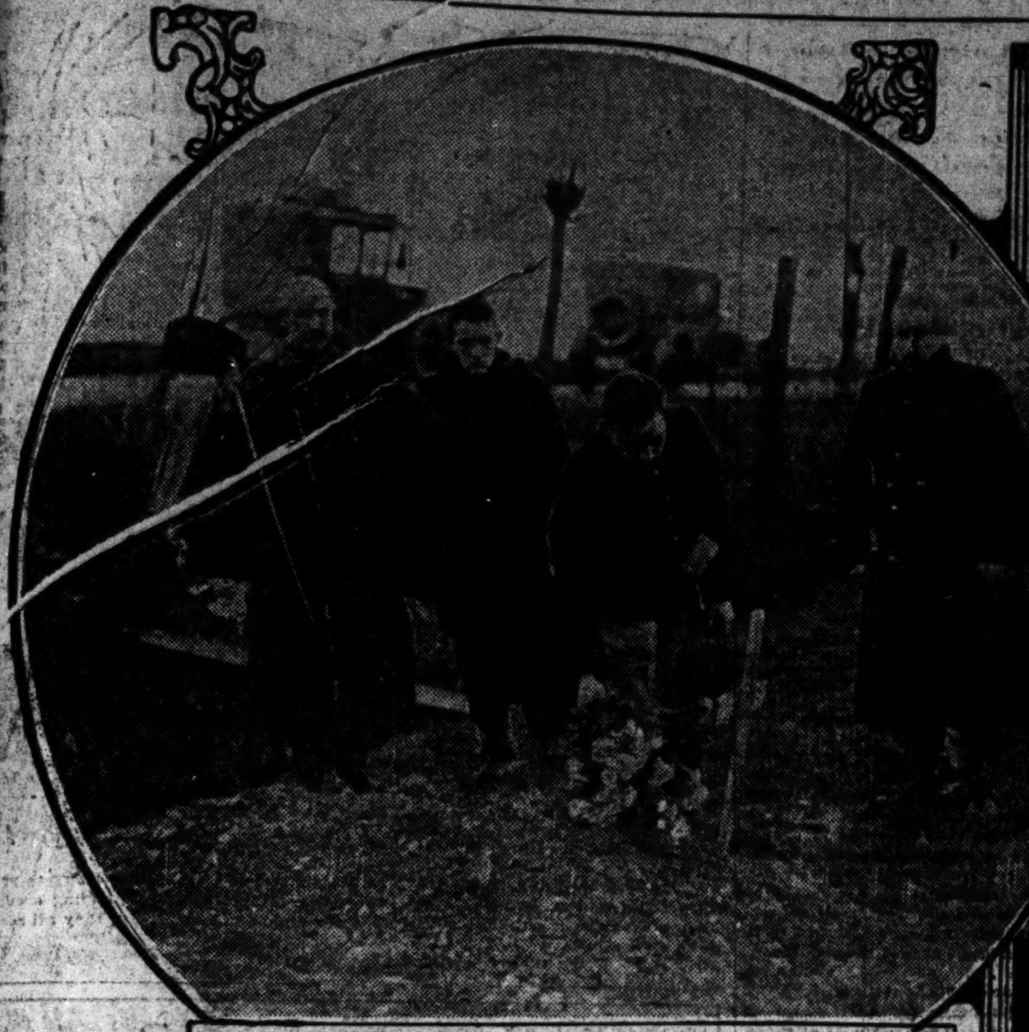
Great War Makes a Graveyard of All Europe.



THE GRAVE OF AN OFFICER—A Belgian major is placing flowers on the grave of one of his lieutenants to whom he had spoken sharply. At the time the young man replied: "Major, I will do better." The next day he met death in battle.

GRAVE OF SIXTEEN GERMAN OFFICERS—These men all fell in the fierce fighting at Charleroi, Belgium, before the Kaiser's army had reached the French frontier in their first invasion of France. Each man's helmet was placed on the common grave and a cross and tablet erected to mark the spot. Their men planted evergreens and flowers and erected a fence about the plot.

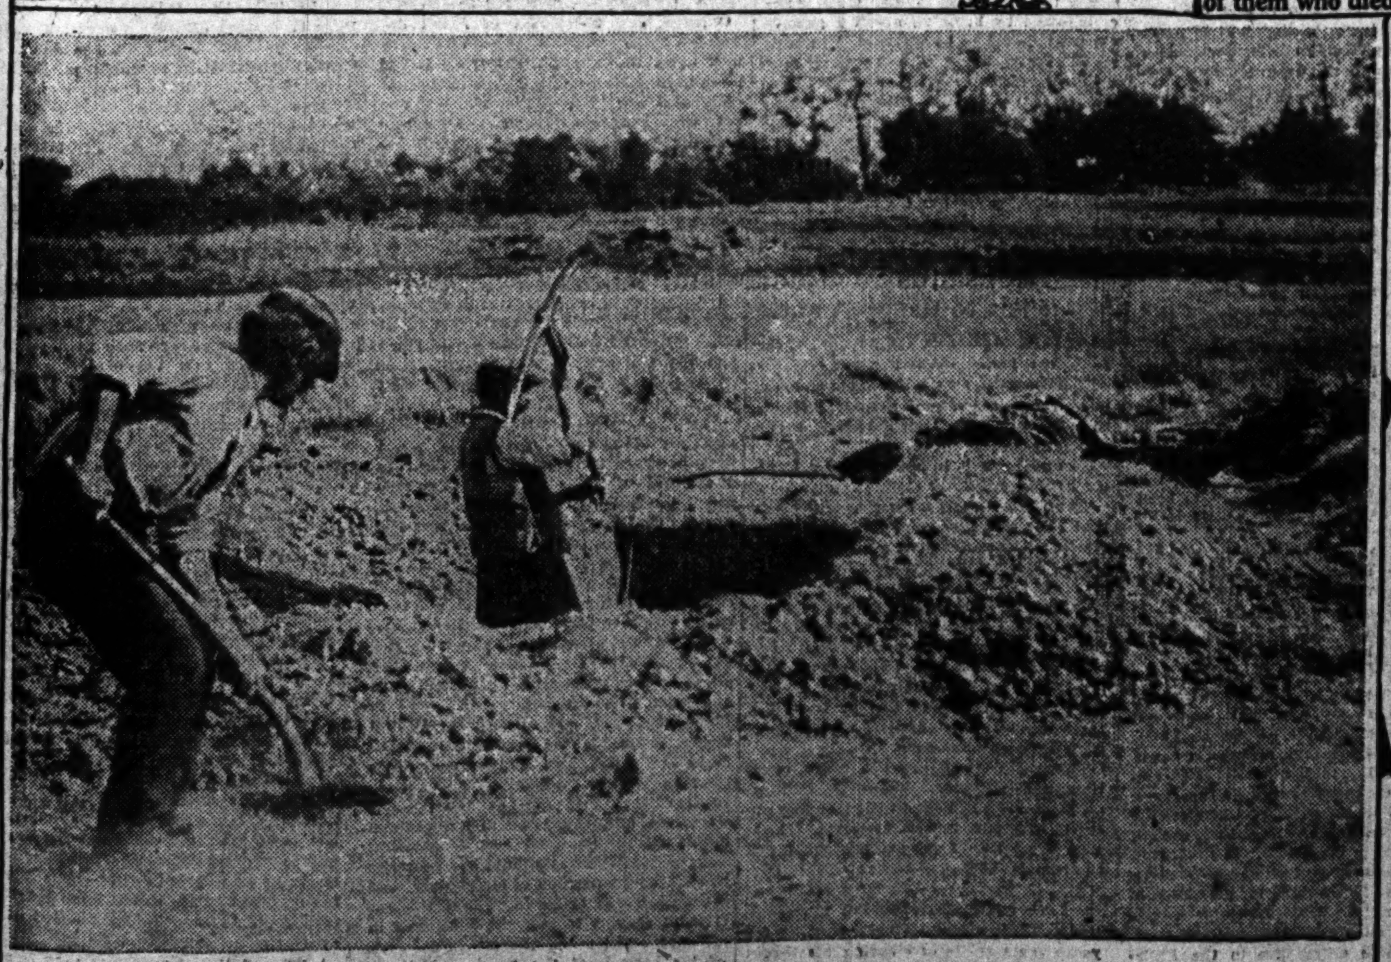
GERMAN SOLDIERS AT A FRENCH OFFICER'S FUNERAL—This victim of the war was wounded when captured and died in a German field hospital. He was carried to his grave by a party of German soldiers and a German field chaplain is shown reading the burial services over his grave.



GERMAN DEAD ON BATTLEFIELD OF THE MARNE.

French peasants called from the harvest are preparing graves for the dead left behind by the Kaiser's forces in the fighting along the Marne. This photograph was taken on the battlefield at Meaux, the fight in which the allies checked the German advance on Paris.

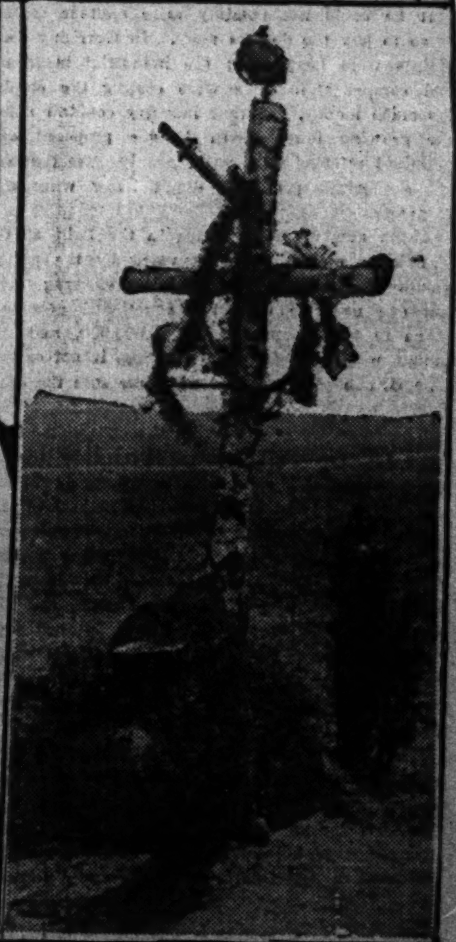
THE GRAVE OF PRINCE MAX OF HESSE—Prince Max was one of the first of the Prussian royal family to lose his life in the war. His grave in a small Belgian cemetery is marked by a cross and star.



GERMAN OFFICER'S GRAVE IN EAST PRUSSIA—This crude cross marks the last resting place of one of the kaiser's officers who fell in the terrific battle between the Germans and the Russians near Hohenstein. His comrades have placed his helmet upon the cross and fastened a wreath to it with a saber bayonet.

FOR THOSE WHO HAVE CARFARE.

Now that the thrifty members of this community are proving themselves so warm to the relation of distant and impersonal misery, is it too much to expect that ere long they will be in the mood to relieve some of the discomforts of the well-to-do?

Shall they not, after the cessation of the current carnival of charity, turn to the amelioration of conditions which interfere with the joy of life of the provident who have hitherto somewhat neglected themselves in their unselfish endeavors for the destitute?

Already there is a movement to increase the probability that the employed will not be deprived of their pay envelopes by the assiduous footpad; and the ever-vigilant conservators of the city's conduct are seeing to it that simultaneous drink and dance shall not endanger us in our café moments. But other less picturesque troubles suggest themselves to the attention of the beneficent when they shall have rendered less cruel the plight of the penniless and the imperiled.

The victims of Mr. Busby's railways, where every rear platform is a slum, are candidates for sympathy and succor. They should inspire the noble impulse that generous minds can feel. A portion of the energy and enthusiasm devoted now to gentler deeds of mercy might build a subway to mitigate the woes of those who have car fare. A fund could be raised to provide a substitute for the incredible shack through which the solvent though supine commuters of the Illinois Central precariously filter at Randolph street. Doubtful odors still arise from the slaughter houses to smite the nostrils of the pecunious and the impecunious alike, and those unsalubrious fumes are not tempered by any organized charity.

The streets are still unkempt and the atmosphere likewise. Electrification of the railroad terminals awaits the impetus of a public uprising, and the boulevard link is yet a cobbled hog-wallow, annoying the automobilists. Critics of this center have intimated that it lacks the urban spirit; that, populated extensively by persons of rural or small town genesis, it fails to realize the proper functions of a metropolis. Electric lights and trolley cars, it has been said, are to its inhabitants sufficient manifestation that it is a modern and progressive city. That sneer may be discounted, however, by the evidence of the busy benevolences of the more fortunate of our citizens. They have been too much engrossed in helping others to find time to help themselves.

THINKING DESTRUCTIVELY IN BILLIONS.

Not many months ago the finance ministers of Europe were, as they admitted, at their wits' end trying to find new sources of revenue for constructive and reformatory purposes. When the British medical profession struck against the social insurance act, because the compensation offered the doctors for their services thereunder was deemed too low, Lloyd-George earnestly protested that he could not possibly raise another million or so to pay the doctors more. In Germany complaints were heard that the industrial insurance and compensation laws were costing the empire too much money, and that industry couldn't stand the growing burden. In France proposed and promised reforms were postponed because the taxing authorities positively didn't know what else to assess.

Think now of these things in the light of the war loans and war credits voted by the parliaments of Europe! The German reichstag, with but one negative vote, has sanctioned new war loans to the amount of $1,250,000,000, and this money will be needed in the spring, if not earlier. The British parliament voted a like sum the other day.

The countries at war, with the exception of the little fellows who are being financed by the big brothers, are all emphatically "thinking imperially," thinking not in millions but in billions, and thinking of these for destructive purposes only. The London Statist, in a stoical if not cheerful editorial, tells the British that the war is costing them a billion and a half per annum, and that they will have to pay indefinitely interest on a new war debt of about $5,000,000,000. It thinks, however, that the money can be raised without much difficulty on fairly moderate terms—say 5 per cent.

Well, perhaps it can. But these staggering totals are not likely to be dropped from the sky. Hoarders may become investors to a certain extent, but the greater part of the money must be diverted from industry, enterprise, commerce, and constructive social reform. The wealth and capital burned, wasted, destroyed, cannot be used in further production, in extensions and improvements. The loss is irreparable. The loss is a world loss. Every nation is suffering and will continue to suffer from it. And the infinite pity, the tragedy, the bitterness of it is that the tremendous and almost inconceivable losses in life, health, vigor, and treasure are entailed not by a war for principles, for human rights, for progress, for essential interests, but by a war which even Dr. Dernburg, the able exponent of the German view, describes as "unnecessary, stupid, and uncalled for." Must such a war really go on for years? Is there no chance for the still small voice of sanity and common sense in Europe?

ROMANCE AND WAR.

Comfortable folk in this comfortable land, accepting the war news each morning with a slight sense of boredom, complain that "romance" has been taken out of soldiering. Men now burrow like moles, wallow in mud, and are killed as are miners in a mine explosion. The instruments of destruction are out of sight, the masses of men are so enormous that the individual, who is necessary to romance, has lost not only importance but identity; nothing is presented to the eye or to the imagination but serpentine writhings on or under the ground. This can be horrible, but it cannot be romantic, in the opinion of comfortable folk who desire to take other folks' wars romantically.

If by romance, a word which has traveled so far from home that it would not know its parents, is meant pictorial effects, the complainants may be right. In the east, in Poland, Galicia, and East Prussia, whence little news comes, there may be a sweep, dash, and contact of masses which would thrill the pictorial sense as much as it would horrify the humane; but in the west, where war has been described and photographed, it lacks pageantry.

It is business, the business of range finding, the business of entrenching, the business of the commissary, the business of transportation. Romance, seeking something to fill the eye, asks for dragoons charging the cannon's mouth; cuirassiers accepting the challenge of the massed regiment. Pickett's charge at Gettysburg, the Light Brigade at Balaklava, the cuirassiers at Waterloo, satisfied romance.

Romance is for stay at home enjoyment and it is best satisfied with ancient vintages. There is nothing romantic, in the sense we are accepting the word, in the business of battle. There may be pageantry in the preparations for one. Until the business begins there may be pictorial grandeur. The primitive picture sense of men may be pleased, their auricular delight in percussion may be satisfied by the drums, their eyes filled by the spectacle of heroism marching to its supreme effort. But there never was a battlefield which was any more romantic than the stockyards.

Battlefields, whether filled with the slit diaphragms of Roman short sword days, with the split skulls and lopped off arms of long sword days, or with the bodies of men bullet punctured or torn by shrapnel, are realities as hideous as the worst conception of hell.

They become romantic when the realism has been forgotten. There may be pageantry in the return of the conqueror but there was none in the fashion of his victory.

In a truer sense of romance this is the only romantic war. It is the first one which has not "bound itself to verisimilitude." A German taube sailing over Paris to drop a bomb and a mocking note to the Parisians has no relation to anything we ever knew as reality in warfare; a British aeroplane penetrating 130 miles into Germany, hidden in the clouds and seeking for important manufacturing works that it might destroy, has no such relation; a submarine hunting in the channel for a British dreadnaught is not among our verisimilitudes as yet.

An aeroplane, crippled, falls into the sea and its crew is taken off by a submarine arising out of the sea; a torpedo boat destroyer, itself destroyed by an unseen force, has its crew rescued by a ship coming up from underneath the waves.

Here in reality we go back to the unreal days of the god from the machine. Destruction comes from unseen forces. The god throws a bolt and the hero drops. The invisible death threatens or strikes. The Paris of the Iliad lives again to be snatched out of danger.

Romance and war never were companions until the war lost its reality, but this war, in many of its aspects, has yet to acquire a reality which we can accept or understand.

CHICAGO AND THE EVANGELIST.

For years Billy Sunday considered the metropolitan field not unworthy but unfitted for his evangelistic endeavors. He circled all around Chicago, New York, etc., inviting theaters wherein he might assault the devil and all his works, not because he regarded Chicagoans as past redemption and not because he had given New York over to the golden calf but because even such an evangelist as Sunday feared that he would be lost in the din of noises.

When Mr. Sunday enters a town he dominates it. If it be a city of 75,000 or 100,000 population he tosses it into the caldron of his wrath and stirs it around until iniquity is conscious of its impending doom.

The thought that a great city might not be so handled has been with him, and he held for years to the policy of hitting the wicked where they were gathered less numerously. Mr. Sunday in these fields of his selection has been the colloquially rhetorical torch to set against the temples of the unrighteous. He has burned them down and the ruins stood before the contrite citizens as evidence of a regenerating power.

Sunday's power is curious and evident. He can enter a city of 50,000 inhabitants and make every inhabitant conscious of his presence. The clergy does not unanimously support him. He grieves many of the judicious, he being highly dramatized. The good he does is subjected to analysis and there are doubters. But the compelling fervor is unquestioned.

Mr. Sunday has open to him the opportunity to enter Chicago. He has experimented, we believe, in Philadelphia recently. The metropolitan abodes of men may seem less austere in their wrongdoing now than before and more open to conviction as to error. Apparently Mr. Sunday has been encouraged, and Chicago has the prospect of a new experience.

NATIONALITY AND ART.

[From the New York Post.]

Mark Hambourg's talents as a pianist are apparently better known than his family and place of origin. In the King's Bench division the other day Mr. Hambourg vindicated himself from the atrocious charge of being a German, and obtained a verdict of £500 from the Daily Mail, which called him one. In court Mr. Hambourg showed that he was born in Russia of Russian parents and grandparents, that his citizenship was British, and that his artistic inspirations are mainly Slav.

Thus is shown that in the clash of arms one law at least still insists on being heard, and this is England's admirable libel law, which insists that people shall pay for the luxury of calling other people names. The Daily Mail could not plead justification, though it might have pleaded ignorance. It assumed that, because Hamburg is a city blockaded by the British fleet Mr. Mark Hambourg must be a German. The verdict in his favor spares the eminent pianist the trouble of changing his name to Mark Petrograd in self defense.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

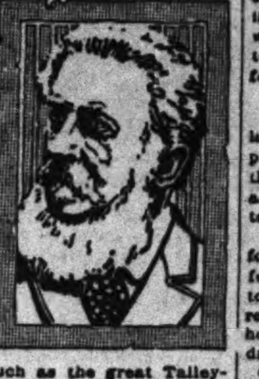
WERE it not for the fact that the present war is monopolizing popular interest some attention undoubtedly would have been given to the split which has lately taken place between the Freemasons on the one side and the labor element and the Socialists on the other in Italy and France, and, indeed, throughout Latin Europe. Up till a year ago the Freemasons controlled the labor and Socialist elements. But these have now broken away from Freemasonry; and the Socialists of Italy, in the national congress which they have just held at Ancona, have decided that Freemasons should be expelled from their party.

The labor organizations of Italy have adopted an identical course with regard to Freemasonry; and so, too, have the General Confederation of Labor in France and the Socialist factions.

Italy has sustained a great loss through the death of the late Marquis Visconti-Venosta, who was the principal representative of King Victor Emmanuel at the international congress of Algeciras, concerning Morocco, in 1906. He was, indeed, far and away the most distinguished looking and important figure at that gathering of statesmen and diplomatists from all parts of the world.



He was almost a giant in stature, with a mighty main of snow white hair and beard. His manners were of the most courtly ancient régime type, and his diplomatic tact was such as the great Talleyrand might have envied.

Married to the daughter of the gifted Marquis Alfieri, he became thereby the nephew as well as the favorite disciple of Cavour. Indeed, he was, more than any other man, the political heir and successor of Cavour, the creator of United Italy. The late King Victor Emmanuel, his son, the murdered King Humbert, and his grandson, the present ruler of Italy, all recognized him as such and deferred to his counsel in great affairs of state more than they did to that of any one else.

It was to Visconti-Venosta that was due the action of Italy in refraining from association with France in the latter's war with Germany in 1870. The late King Victor Emmanuel was for taking up arms in behalf of his former ally of Magenta and of Solferino and for declaring war against Germany.

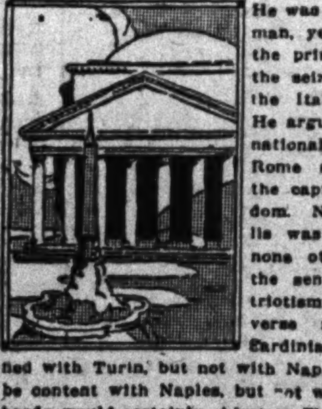
Many of his officers urged such a course and there is no doubt that it would have commanded the favor of the Italian people. Had that policy been adopted the result of the war as between France and Germany would probably not have been materially altered from what it actually was, but the subsequent history of Italy would surely have been far different and less favorable.

It was Visconti-Venosta who dissuaded the king from it, and in so doing he saved Italy from a disastrous blunder. He was not inimical to France. On the contrary, all his sympathies were with that nation and against Germany. But he saw that Germany was sure to win in that struggle, and he reckoned it best for his country to refrain from identifying itself with the losing side. So, too, he deemed it wise for Italy to cultivate friendly relations with the victor and to make sure of the friendship of that nation which was to be the leading military power on the continent for years.

The late King Victor Emmanuel himself is the authority for these facts. For when he paid his first visit to old Emperor William at Berlin he was accompanied by the marquis, then minister of foreign affairs, and as he presented him to the kaiser he remarked, "This is the man who prevented me from declaring war against you."

While he therefore favored the triple alliance in its origin, he developed a pronounced aversion thereto when he saw the extent to which Premier Crispi permitted himself and Italy to be dominated by the Berlin government, and at the international congress of Algeciras in 1906 he, regardless of Italy's alliance with the kaiser, favored the French, the English, and the Spanish cause rather than the views of Germany, creating great indignation at Berlin thereby.

In America the marquis will be chiefly remembered as the arbiter for the settlement of the tiresome Bering sea controversy between the United States and Great Britain.



He was a deeply religious man, yet he was one of the principal authors of the seizure of Rome by the Italian government. He argued that it was a national necessity that Rome should be made the capital of the kingdom. No other metropolis was practicable and none other appealed to the sentiments and patriotism of all the diverse races of Italy. Sardinia might be satisfied with Turin, but not with Naples; Sicily might be content with Naples, but not with Turin; Lombardy would certainly object to Florence and insist upon Milan.

It was a case where his piety came into conflict with his patriotism, and in later years he became imbued with the idea that the atmosphere of Rome was dangerous to his family by reason of the rôle which he had played in transferring its sovereignty from the papacy to the Italian crown. A favorite daughter succumbed there to a sudden and virulent attack of diphtheria.

When next he returned to Rome, as minister of foreign affairs, one of his sons died of appendicitis; and on the third occasion of his taking office his eldest son became so seriously ill that he insisted upon resigning and upon withdrawing from the Eternal city, moved thereto by a superstitious dread for the safety of those dear to him.

Belonging to one of the oldest houses of Lombardy, he at the age of 19 took a leading part in the insurrection of Lombardy against Austrian domination and did his share in the heavy fighting in and around Milan in 1848.

Eleven years later, as King Victor Emmanuel's commissioner, he was associated with Garibaldi and his force of volunteers in the war against Austria, and in 1863 became for the first time minister of foreign affairs, a portfolio which he was to hold in no less than six subsequent cabinets.

He was one of the half dozen nonroyal knights of the Italian Order of the Annunciation, and as such an honorary cousin of his sovereign, as well as in every sense of the word the grand old man of Italy.

How to Keep Well.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH THE TONSILS?

AT the back of the mouth are the great crossroads. Here come together four great highways and two narrow paths. The highways are the nose, the mouth, the larynx, and the esophagus. The narrow paths are the ducts leading to the middle ears.

Near the crossroads is a group of lymph glands, known as the tonsils and the adenoids. These masses, of small size in babies under 2, enlarge and remain large from the third to the twentieth year. After the twentieth year of life the tonsils are less frequently found large.

It is at the crossroads that infections are most liable to locate. The infection may be only a sore throat; it may be a follicular tonsilitis, a diphtheria, or any one of several other varieties of infection.

Whenever an infection locates at the crossroads the chance is that the tonsils or adenoids will be inflamed. When the infection has passed, the other tissues will become normal in a short time. The tonsils and adenoids will remain large for a longer time.

In children after a few attacks the enlargement persists for years. In the reports of school inspectors enlargement of the tonsils and adenoids ranks second among the defects reported. Defective teeth easily occupy first place.

In New York City in 1911 the inspectors found 135,843 children with marked defects in their teeth, while hypertrophied tonsils came second with 84,639 children reported as defective. The proportions hold true in a general way in the hundreds of cities having school inspection.

Children with adenoids and enlarged tonsils in lesser measure are prone to all sorts of infection. They are frequently sick; they are heavy, dull, and listless; they breathe through their mouths; they become lantern-jawed; they sleep fitfully, dream much, and are restless at night.

Gulick and Ayres measured one method by which tonsils and adenoids do harm. They took large groups of school children and studied their school records. They found that the percentage of bright children with physical defects was small. The percentage of dull children without defects was small. They analyzed the school history of the children with defects and came to the following conclusion:

The percentage of loss in progress of the average child with bad teeth was 6; with defective breathing, 7; with hypertrophied tonsils, 9; with adenoids, 14; with enlarged glands, 15. In other words, the average child with adenoids only progressed six-sevenths as rapidly as the normal child.

They figured the loss in another way. To make the eight grades an average normal child required eight years. The average time required for children with bad teeth was 8.5 years; defective breathing, 8.6 years; hypertrophied tonsils, 8.7 years; adenoids, 9.1 years; enlarged glands, 9.2 years.

The average child with enlarged glands either wastes a year and two-tenths in getting through the grades or quits and gives up his chance to get an education.

A dozen years ago it was the common belief that enlargement of the tonsils in grown people was of no consequence. It is now known that a great many infections get into the system through the tonsils. It is certain that articular rheumatism and muscular rheumatism are due to infection. Often the infection has entered through the tonsils.

A large percentage of the heart disease and some of the Bright's disease are the result of infection through the tonsils. A good many cases of thyroid enlargement are due to infection entering at the same portal.

In some of these cases the tonsils are permanently enlarged. In others there are recurring attacks of follicular tonsilitis. In some, every now and then, the throat is raw and there are fugitive pains throughout the body, but on inspection nothing can be seen to be wrong with the tonsils. Maybe, deeper in some, there are white, foul smelling, cheesy masses in the tonsil crypts.

In addition to the acute rheumatisms there is a group of chronic joint troubles due to tonsil absorption. Some of these are called rheumatoid arthritis.

Thus we see that, even though the tonsils normally begin to shrink at 10 years of age and by 20 are quite inconspicuous from the standpoint of a producer of disease, they remain of importance until the end of life.

Most of us know the importance of the tonsil diseases during childhood. We have just read Dr. Gulick's forcible presentation of the inefficiency of children caused by tonsils and adenoids.

What we do not know so well is that the tonsil infections of adult life are even more hazardous and are much more important in bringing about inefficiency. Many of the creaky jointed, stiff-backed, lame and halt can properly charge their inefficiency and incapacity to their tonsils.

What's the remedy?

The remedy usually proposed is to cut them out. Experience shows that the people decline to take the remedy. They have an idea that the remedy is worse than the disease.

Dr. Comroe tells us that in 1912 the school inspectors in Philadelphia reported that 37,000 Philadelphia children had enlarged tonsils and adenoids in need of attention, and that in the same year 30 per cent of the 825,000 New York school children were in need of the same service.

In Newmayer's experience, when an inspector has examined a child, found the need of treatment, and reported that need to the principals and parents, he will fail to have his recommendations carried out in much more than half the cases. If there are school nurses, the percentage will be smaller than if the schools are not so equipped.

Newmayer's percentage of corrected defects ranged from 13.9 in the case of adenoids and 18.4 in the case of tonsils, to 25.8 in the case of defective vision.

In Cornell's experience in the Philadelphia schools, where there are school nurses, it was possible to get 55 per cent of the tonsils and adenoid cases attended to.

Gulick and Ayres summarized the report from a large number of cities as follows: In American cities the percentage of defects corrected ranged from 11 to 50. In England the range was from 29 to 70 per cent, the average being around 50 per cent. In every case the percentage of cases of tonsils and adenoids treated was the lowest, or about the lowest, on the list.

It is customary now for physicians to advise their patients to have their tonsils cared for. The cases of acute rheumatism, chronic rheumatism, gout, lumbago, sciatica, and rheumatoid arthritis are told to have their tonsils put in order.

People with rheumatic sore throat, with raw throats, with albumin in the urine, with goiter, and with a score of other diseases are told that they are suffering from bacterial invasions and that the microorganisms are securing entrance through the teeth, nose, or throat. The advice to have the tonsils treated follows in the great majority of the cases.

This advice is interpreted as meaning that the tonsils should be taken out. Some of the patients act upon the advice and have their tonsils taken out. More of them disregard the advice. Many people keep away entirely, because they know, or think they know, what the advice will be. I dare say that the percentage of grownups who are disregarding the advice to have their tonsils attended to is larger than in the case of the children.

There is no doubt about the advice being good. The children who are directed to have their tonsils and adenoids attended to should follow the advice given. By failing to do so they put a severe strain on the school funds, and they make trouble for themselves, both immediately and in the years to come.

The adults who are advised to have their tonsils attended to make a mistake in not taking the advice. Maybe the result of their failure is that they go hobbling through life, crippled by rheumatism. Maybe their widows collect from the insurance companies a few years ahead of time.

Why is the advice unheeded? The answer is the same, whether the question applies to the children or the adults. The remedy is too radical, too painful, and too expensive for the inconvenience and harm and danger to remove which it is advised. That is the opinion of the patients of the radicalism of the remedy on the one hand and of the degree of the danger on the other.

Some of them may know of certain scientific reasons for not removing tonsils, such as the mild character of diphtheria, when limited to the tonsils; the relative harmlessness of bacteria and debris in the crypts of the tonsils, the minute structure of the tonsils, the ductless gland function of the tonsils.

However, generally speaking, these facts do not enter into the decisions. The average person knows nothing of them and cares less. He is not enough disturbed about this condition to decide to undergo a procedure which he dreads so much; that is all there is to it. If taking care of the tonsils means removal of the tonsils, the majority of those advised will reject this advice.

Is there a better procedure? Yes. Removal of the tonsils is the second best thing to do. There are emergencies in which there is not the time nor the opportunity to do anything else. In these cases the tonsils must come out. There are cases in which the tonsils are so badly diseased that they must come out. In these two groups of cases removal of the tonsils is the best course to pursue; the procedure moves from second to first place.

For the people advised to have their tonsils attended to who do not belong in one of these two groups the best procedure is to have the tonsils treated locally. There are instruments now in use for cleaning the tonsils. Some people notice that every little while round white cheesy balls appear in the mouth. These have been squeezed out of the tonsils by the muscles of the pharynx.

It is possible to remove white cheesy débris from the tonsils of many people who have never noticed that their tonsils contained débris. To clean the crypts of tonsils as the teeth are cleaned is one object of treatment.

The other and, according to some authorities, the more important object of treatment, is to massage the tonsils. When the tonsils are large, soft, and boggy the resistance is low. Good is accomplished by bringing about a passive congestion—a Bier hyperæmia. The massaged tonsils fill up with the varieties of cells which Metchnikoff and Wright have shown to have great power to destroy microörganisms.

In the medical profession there is a strong opinion against the slaughter of the tonsils. MacKenzie wrote an article on the subject which should have done much good, but it was so misquoted and misused that its efficacy was lost.

Jonathan Wright, one of the ablest men doing throat work, argues for more conservatism in the removal of tonsils.

Dr. Comroe says in the Journal of the American Medical Association:

"The normal tonsils have physiologic, chemical, and phonetic functions which should not be indiscriminately eradicated."

Dr. Southworth, in discussing Dr. Comroe's paper, said:

"This paper is an indication of the fact that time is training us on this question of the slaughter of the tonsils."

Dr. Zahorsky spoke to the same effect.

Those people who are advised to have their tonsils attended to should follow the advice. Some of them should have their tonsils removed. For most of them it is better to have their tonsils removed than to do nothing. But at that, for them removal of the tonsils is the second best thing to have done.

Treatment of the tonsils takes more time and patience. There is nothing quick or dramatic about it. It is monotonous, unpleasant, and tiresome. Those who are without persistence must fall back on operation.

TROUBLE IN THROAT.

M. L. A. writes: "My son, aged 9 years, gets spells of clearing his throat and will keep it up at intervals of every half a minute or so for hours. Could this be caused by nervousness, or perhaps worms, or do you think his throat is affected?"

REPLY.

You will probably find some local condition requiring attention. It may be an elongated soft palate or adenoids.

Nervousness may be a contributing but not the principal cause.

A READER.

In answer to what can be done when a peddler is caught giving short weight, and also regarding a butcher who has a scale that is not correct, would say that the purchaser should have a witness, retain the commodity that is short in weight, and call a police officer to place him under arrest. The butcher should be reported to this department so that we can try him out. If the complainant will let this department know the name, license number, or description of the peddler, and the time that he usually is around the neighborhood, we will be glad to send out a couple of inspectors and try to apprehend him.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If a man votes next door to his place of business and takes thirty minutes to perform his duty, shall his employer be obliged to give him two hours off, and also pay him for the full two hours? My interpretation of the law pertaining to the time taken from work by an employé in which to vote is that only as much time as is actually required shall be paid for, and not the full two hours.

INTERESTED.

The provision of the law to which you refer provides that a man upon giving proper notice to his employer and having the employer fix the time, may be absent for a period of two hours between the opening and the closing of the polls for the purpose of voting. We do not construe the law to require the employé to return within a less time than two hours in the situation which you mention.

It probably will be necessary to institute a suit called partition in order to sell this property. Such a suit should be handled by an attorney. The statutes of Illinois have provisions in regard to partition suits and likewise as to administration of estates. In addition there are numerous text books on these subjects. A DEFENSELESS NATION.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I congratulate THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE upon the splendid editorials which have been published from time to time on the question of "National Defense." The American people should heed the warnings that you have been sounding and not put off until tomorrow the precautionary preparation for preserving the peace and prosperity of the nation and provide adequate protection for the lives and property of our people.

The first requirement is a greater navy—one that will afford ample protection to our extensive coast line. Our army must be expanded to meet the requirements of a first line of defense which will safeguard the industries and farm lands which produce our commercial articles of trade.

The expansion of our army and navy must be made along sane lines, plans must be perfected to insure the balancing of the units which compose the army and navy, battleships, cruisers, scout ships, torpedo boat destroyers, submarines, and coal colliers in proper proportion to the uses and needs of the service. Cavalry, artillery, coast artillery, infantry, signal corps, aero corps, hospital corps, and marines, properly balanced and thoroughly equipped, drawing our lesson from the European struggle, which shows the necessity for great numbers of field guns and rapid fire batteries.

The national guard of the United States, which is the second line of defense and constitutes the reserves of this country, should be organized upon a more substantial basis than at the present time, the administration in the various states should be taken out of politics, state constabularies should be organized to assume the burden of strike duty, and the citizen soldier be made to devote his term of service to perfecting himself in military science and the use of the arms of his branch of the service. Military training and rifle practice should be introduced into the instruction course of our high schools and displace some of the fads of our present day theorists.

Our army of invasion was sent to Santiago and Manila equipped with Krag rifles of thirty caliber and forty-five caliber, Springfield rifles, with black powder; also the Lee rifles of twenty-five caliber for the navy, few pieces of artillery and using black powder; our transports were freighters rented on contract from foreign nations. Today we are but little further advanced. Funston in sailing for Vera Cruz used up all our available transports, five in number, and made over ocean liners of venerable age, which are spared by an indulgent Lord from a well earned rest on the ocean's sandy bottom. The artillery, horses, and hospital equipment were forced to wait for a second expedition for the lack of ships, and this in transporting 5,000 men.

This country has produced the aeroplane, and other nations of the earth now outstrip us in the number and efficiency of this useful engine of war. Fulton's steamboat idea passed into the hands of strangers who now excel on the seas. Ericson's monitor, Holland's submarine, and Gathmann's gun have been converted to the use of our rival nations.

JOHN V. CLINNIN,
Major First Infantry, Illinois National guard.

A HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY.

Chicago, Dec. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I note your editorial, "Will Wilson Repeat?" I trust for the sake of an impoverished country that Wilson will be relegated to the background. The dire effects of his and his party's legislation cannot be covered up by this, for them, timely war. The tariff bill is the crime of the century. It has changed a prosperous country in times of crop abundance into a place of want and distress.

What Mr. Wilson means by "the new freedom" is unfathomable. His policies mean "the new slavery where an industrious man is unable to make a living." The tariff law supposed to raise revenue has brought a huge deficit. Supposed to reduce the cost of living, it has increased it; supposed to promote prosperity, it has brought adversity, closed our manufacturing plants, and brought misery and desolation in every direction.

I wonder if the president ever thinks of the many discouraged men and women who have committed suicide because their living was taken from them. Many had their homes partly paid for and these wretched Democratic times made it impossible to keep up the payments. I think the president and his incompetent party responsible before God for these hundreds of deaths.

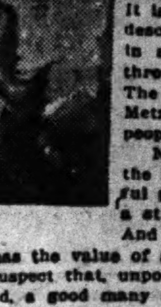
"LA DEBACLE" by Robert Herrick

The French nation has risen in character since 1870, says Mr. Herrick, in recalling Zola's novel.



CERTAIN words cannot be fully translated from one language to another. Zola's great picture of the Franco-Prussian war refuses to be described accurately by any one English term. Collapsed? Yes, but a collapse that has long been preparing in the moral fiber of the people. Rout? More than that because national, not military. Disaster? Too vague. It is better to let the French word stand as the one fitly descriptive term for the national calamity of 1870, when in a few short weeks the Germans put their swords through the French defense and found it to be pasteboard. The state had become demoralized under the third empire. Metz and Sedan were steps in the "débacle" of the whole people that ended in the fall of Paris and the commune.

No wonder that Zola's novel was not popular with the French at the time it appeared. It set forth a dreadful picture of incompetence and weakness in high places, a stupid, fruitless sacrifice of men, of national disgrace. And Zola was close to the affair, so close that his novel today has the value of a good newspaper record of the chief events.

I suspect that, unpopular and bitter as "La Débacle" was when it first appeared, a good many copies have been sold to Frenchmen since 1870 and some of its manifold lessons laid to heart. These last months the interest in the story has been greatly revived both in Europe and over here.

It seemed for a time as if there were to be a repetition oh a grander scale of Zola's mournful epic, as if indeed the kaiser had deliberately planned his onslaught so that he might celebrate Sedan day by again delivering a crushing defeat to the French on the anniversary of his grandfather's victory, and on the same field where the elder William with Von Moltke's aid drew his celebrated iron ring about the misled French armies of 1870—might impose again harsh terms on his defeated foe and sweep on victoriously to Paris to collect a colossal indemnity. For now as then, the French had been caught "unprepared." What forces they may have had near the Belgian frontier were plainly inadequate to withstand the German hammer, their allies were not yet ready in any numbers, and so the world waited those August days in suspense while the French fell back across Belgium, their forts blown to pieces, over the field of Sedan, back towards the defenses of Paris.

It looked then as if it were to be another 1870, a three months' war, the kaiser dining in Paris with his general staff and dictating there his terms. Another débacle of the proud nation.

But it was not to be. There was doubtless much confusion and misdirected effort among the French those first weeks, like the futile excursion into Alsace and Lorraine after their stolen patrimony, leaving the northern armies too weak. But they saw their error, straightened out—and held together. They fell back in an orderly retreat that showed perhaps the best strategy of the war, undemoralizzed. The long line finally held, as we all know, is holding today with no sign of break along its 300 miles of front.

For the French nation that achievement in itself must have almost the virtue of a victory. They are not the French of 1870—they have proved it. They can retreat before an irresistible foe without losing their morale and hold them at last. More, they could push the foe back many miles toward the frontier. If Zola lived today he would be preparing his notes for a companion epic to the "Débacle," with a different note, another finish.

We know little of what has been going on at headquarters in this war, probably shall never know the whole story of those first weeks when the French were bending like a reed before the invaders. But we can see that the temper of the French nation is different from what it was in 1870. They took their reverse calmly, strongly, like men. There was no vain empress in Paris driving a sick and vacillating emperor with his troops into the death trap of Sedan because she feared a revolt of her people if the army should fall back on the capital, without attempting to aid Bazaine. It has not been that way under the republic.

So whatever may have been the mistakes, the lack of preparation, however the end may come finally, the French have no cause for shame, rather pride. They have fought like gallant men for their country, with an unbroken spirit. And the country as a whole met the crisis thrust upon it in an utterly sober spirit quite different from 1870, and has shown a marvelous strength and steadiness under the trying tactics of retreat and defense which are so much more difficult than the tactics of aggression. The French might well read Zola's masterpiece now and be proud that within forty-four years they have risen as a nation from the depth of humiliation to the present height of character.

The prelude to "La Débacle" is the final scene of Nana. There from the hotel room where the prodigal prostitute lay dying she could hear the soldiers' bands as they passed on their way to the war, that France which she and her kind had done so much to debauch under the third empire gayly marching out to their débacle. As always with Zola, Nana was no mere woman character: she was the symbol of corruption on whom the youth of France had wasted itself in riot. When the hour struck which France in her overconfidence had invited, she was physically and morally unprepared, and there followed inevitably the bitter drama of incompetency that Zola was to relate.

He takes up the thread with the soldiers of the One Hundred and Sixth infantry, who are first hurried toward Strassburg by forced marches, then held in suspense while rumors run that the Germans have crossed the Rhine and are nearly on them, then hurriedly drawn back in disorder to Chalons without having seen a single enemy, so inefficient was their leadership. Hungry, tired, demoralized, defeated before going into battle, marched hither and thither by its incompetent officers, and above all starved, the army is finally led out to the death trap of Sedan, there to fight one of the most futile battles of all history, when every man in the ranks knew that he was being slaughtered to "save the face" of some one. For one long mournful summer's day they must stand and be murdered by the Germany artillery. For such is war to the common soldier.

Zola thought he was a realist. We know now that he was a poet—almost a romantic one at that—with a cosmic sense of things. The real subject of "La Débacle" is war—brutal, bloody, incompetent, vain, idiotic war—and the story that runs through its 700 pages is negligible. The human figures are mere mouthpieces of the facts of war, of the battle lines and the country, almost as dumb and will-less as the cannon and the horses. These human voices come and go as they are needed to give articulate interpretation to the drama of war, to animate it with its victims; but their little fates are gathered up in the general fate of the conflict, which in this case is a débacle. It is a great agonizing poem on war.

And it is astonishing how close the thing is in detail to what we are allowed to hear from the battle fields of the present war. One might more profitably read "La Débacle" and Tolstoi's "War and Peace," if he wants to realize what war means, than study the fragmentary and fictitious dispatches in the newspapers.

The game of war has grown bigger in its units since 1870, as everything has grown bigger. There were no forty-two centimeter guns then, no aeroplanes, or dirigibles. But there was the same intricate tactics in placing large bodies of men in the field, involving many blunders, the same dependence upon the commissariat. From the persistent stories that have come from the French battlefields of the present war, even the magnificent German war machine has not solved the problem of feeding and supplying its fighters at the front. Soldiers are still sent into battle or held in trenches half starved, weakened, maddened by the strain—desperate for food and sleep. Yet the bodies of the soldiers are still indispensable to victory.

"La Débacle" is told from the point of view of the private in the ranks, of the men who are supposed to fight like a machine without knowing what is being done with them or why. Generals and their staffs gallop futilely back and forth along the lines, issue contradictory orders, are wounded or replaced. Even the sick emperor roams about in his chariot like a ghost, incumbering the roads with his elaborate retinue. [All this the French have now dispensed with.] But the abiding figures are those of the Corporal Jean and his comrades in arms, Maurice, and their company, gathered from all sorts of occupations and positions in society.

"It's simple enough," says Chouteau, a poor laborer from Montmartre. "If Badinguet and Bismarck have a quarrel, let them settle it between themselves with their fists, without calling in hundreds of thousands of men who don't even know each other and have no desire to fight one another."

The soldiers laugh and the orator, turning to a pious peasant, says, "Don't you think so, you who believe in the good God? He has forbidden you to fight, your good God. Then, monkey, why are you here?" And the pious peasant, who has asked somebody, "Who is that man Bismarck?" says to Chouteau, "Gosh, I'm not here for my pleasure, sure. The gens d'arme came for me."

Then the talkative one sums up: "If we knew what's good for us, we'd skip as soon as they let us out of this car, and leave that pig Badinguet and his crowd of two penny generals to have their scrap with the dirty Prussians."

One suspects that similar ideas are being exchanged on many a troop train today by the poor fellows who are being carted they know not where, to fight battles they know nothing of, merely having been told it was all "for the defense of the fatherland."

Chouteau, who was a rascal, no doubt, anticipated the Socialist, who one of these days will have the courage to refuse to take up arms against his brother across the frontier.

So the soldiers are dragged back and forth, and at last, exhausted, starving, spiritless, are set down at Sedan in the muddle the generals have made for them, to be shot at for a day or captured at the end and herded for a week or more on an island with nothing to eat. Zola describes it all—the fearful expectancy of attack through the dark night, the first booming of the cannon in the morning mists, then the extended battle line revealed by the sun, the eternal waiting under fire, with its grueling experiences to the untried soldier, the constant falling of comrades, the annihilation of whole companies and batteries, the whistling of shells through forest trees, and finally the charge, defeat, rout, the débacle accomplished.

Also he describes the hospital where major operations are performed without ceremony, the wounded and dying alone on the battlefield—all the death, destruction, and filth of the affair. At the end when the terms have been made the riderless horses of the cavalry, maddened by hunger, charge back and forth over the field of the dead, like demons from hell visiting the scene of mankind's riot.

Zola paints the destruction of homes, of the happiness of innocent little people like the Weiss, of lovers and fathers and mothers and children. There is the village of Bazailles which is utterly destroyed by the enraged Germans because a few brave men have undertaken to defend themselves from the invaders in a house. How often that must have been repeated in Belgium these last months! In a word, if one wishes to realize the horrible details of war, its utter senselessness, its ironic folly, read "La Débacle."

At the end Zola says, after the storm has swept over his country leaving her desolate, "Jean strode out into the future to the large and hard job of making over all France." So after this war the little men, the privates, who do the work and fight the battles, must step out with as brave hearts as possible to make over all Europe!

IRISH DENOUNCE THE 'MAILED FIST' AT BIG MEETING

Thousands in Glasgow Applaud War on German Militarism.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.

[FOREIGN LETTER TO THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Nov. 28.—All party feeling has been splendidly repressed since the war began, but certain tendencies must exhibit themselves with regard to the events of the day. For instance, there is a small but vehement and convinced party in the country which advocates military conscription—perhaps in a mild and small form, but, anyhow, compulsion instead of the present entirely voluntary system. When, therefore, there is any slackening in the big onrush of recruiting, these people immediately begin to utter jeremiads, and they exaggerate into the need or the accident of the moment something which makes a permanent lack of spirit in the country.

As a matter of fact, recruiting has gone on splendidly all through, except when now and then, from one cause or another, there was an arrest. For instance, the war office found itself incapable of housing, feeding, or, indeed, arming the vast Niagara tide of recruits that came in immediately after the publication of the first list of casualties and raised the standard of height.

This checked the recruiting. But when all the arrangements had been completed for receiving the recruits, the standard was again lowered. There was a pause, for men who have been turned down require some time to present themselves again.

No Allowance for Difficulties.

This little interval brought out exaggeration and wails, and again compulsion was urged as the only possible relief. But the pause has passed, recruiting is going on again, and the voice of conscription will remain silent until some other accidental interruption of the tide of recruiting is brought about.

Similarly, the still irreconcilable group in the north of Ireland has been campaigning against the Irish Nationalists and have repeated so often that Ireland is not doing its duty that it has got many people to believe it.

No allowance was made for John E. Redmond's difficulties; for the great wave of depression and suspicion which passed over Ireland during the ridiculous delay in putting the home rule bill on the statute book, and for the fierce and, it is believed in Ireland, German-subsidized campaign in which a few rags have been preaching, and which that discredited demagogue, James Larkin, has been encouraging, in the hope of getting back some of the ground his insane strike took from him, and Mr. Redmond is overcoming all these difficulties, and an Irish brigade will go from Ireland in due time.

Fervent for War.

However, what makes me especially angry with this campaign of disparagement is the extraordinary and almost incredible enthusiasm and unity of the Irish among whom I dwell—namely: the Irish in Great Britain. I have been going up and down the country a good deal within the last few weeks, and everywhere I meet the same boundless fervor for the war, the same unanimity, the same story of splendid accessions of men of Irish birth or of Irish blood to the fighting forces.

In two or three centers they have, of course, their score or so of Sinn Feiners; generally, as I have said, led by the Irishmen who are employed in the government service, and at the same time are shocked at the poor Irish soldier who takes his shilling a day.

Really these people count so little with their units as against tens of thousands of the Irishmen of the other way of thinking that I feel I am guilty of exaggerating their miserable impotence by alluding to them at all.

Many Irish in Glasgow.

Of all the experiences I have had that which confronted me in Glasgow was the most impressive and moving. Glasgow is a great Irish as well as a great Scotch city.

I should not be surprised if the Irish in that city were at least 250,000. They come largely from the north of Ireland for the good reason that the north of Ireland is nearer to Scotland than the south, and that after the famine even the little difference in time and money was sufficient to direct those refugees from famine and from plague to Scotland as the nearest and the cheapest refuge.

These Irishmen have spread out to the mining centers by which Glasgow is surrounded. They fill the mines, and there are mining villages in which it is difficult to say whether the population is not Irish altogether and Scotch not at all.

In these villages the recruiting sergeant has been extraordinarily successful. There were villages in which every house sent at least one of its members to the new army.

In order to meet the continuous campaign against Ireland to which I have alluded we asked that lists be prepared of the Irishmen who had gone to the fighting line; and it is clear that 30,000 men of either Irish birth or of Irish blood already have been enrolled.

Largest Hall Engaged.

Still, it was with some misgiving that I started for an Irish meeting in Glasgow. The organizers had taken St. Andrew's hall, the largest hall in Glasgow; it can seat 4,500 people; another thousand can manage to scrape in on condition of standing throughout the proceedings.

The day chosen was a Sunday afternoon, and there is always the danger of a Sunday in winter in Glasgow being rainy, as indeed it was on this occasion.

I feared that this was too ambitious an undertaking, and that I might have to confront that most distressing of all audiences, a small body in a big hall and yawning rows of empty seats.

You will understand, then, the delight and relief with which I found myself in the presence of one of the largest audiences that ever I addressed. Not only was every seat taken, but there were crowds everywhere standing, and hundreds outside vainly pleaded for admission.

Never did I see a meeting in a state of more inflammable emotion. Every denunciation of Prussian militarism was received with fierce and universal cheering. If it had been a meeting of ultra jingo Tories it could not have been more vehement in its support of the war.

Of course Belgium made a special appeal; when you mention Belgium now to any Irishman, he sees red. If there were any possibility of these Irishmen forgetting Belgium, that chance was destroyed by the presence of several Belgians on the platform. Some of them were well dressed; some of them were poor peasant women with their thick hair uncovered by hat or bonnet. Some of them had their arms in slings.

The meeting had been going on for some time, when a Belgian soldier slipped into an obscure seat. By some telepathy the meeting realized who he was. At once the whole audience jumped to its feet; they shouted at him to go to the platform, where they all could see him. Modestly, shyly, reluctantly, the soldier went to the platform. Again the audience rose to its feet.

It was a curious contrast then. This man, smiling, but self-controlled, with his hand to his cap in salute, and standing upright, and this audience almost frenzied with excitement, cheering, waving handkerchiefs, shouting some word of admiration and affection to this representative of the gallant little sister nation.

National Anthems Played.

There is a fine organ in the hall, and this organ at a certain moment in the meeting started to play the national anthems of all the allies. The Belgian hymn was cheered, but, of course, the wildest enthusiasm came, as it always does, when the organ struck up that intoxicating French warcry which Rouget de Lisle bequeathed to France for all time. The audience remained standing all through.

Then came "Scots Wha Hae" in compliment to the land in which we were meeting. Then there rang out what has become the national anthem of Ireland, "God Save Ireland," the repetition of the words which Capt. O'Meagher Condon uttered from the dock at Manchester from which three of his comrades went to the scaffold, and which ever since has been adopted as the Irish warcry.

WAR CUTS INTO ARISTOCRACY OF GERMANY

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—War is wiping out Germany's aristocracy. This is a striking social result of her unprecedented struggle against seven enemy states. The corps and regiments of which the fatherland is proudest; the corps which in Frederick's time made feudal Prussia, and which make feudal Prussia today, are being swept into the abyss.

The tragedy is outwardly most visible at Berlin, where the "Herr Leutnant" is the traditional hero of the sentimental pig-tailed "Backfisch." The Bavarian journalist Lachmann, himself a reserve officer writes: "So terrifically has our military aristocracy dwindled that after the war we shall have a new, democratically officered army like that of France."

Totaling up sixty daily lists of killed and wounded shows that the ten regiments which count as "smartest" lost on an average half their officers. In peace time these regiments have a total of 130 lieutenants. Of the lieutenants only seventy-eight survive. The reserve officers taken into these regiments have lost 40 per cent.

Four of the regiments have lost their colonels, and two of them have lost two-thirds of their captains. Many officers are only slightly wounded. They will return to the front. But as the war goes on few of the original officers will be left.

"Two years hence," writes Maj. Lachmann, "the army will be commanded by promoted noncoms. These men will excel, because they will have had practice in fighting, which will replace theoretical training. But the aristocrat with leadership in his blood will have disappeared."

Every aristocratic name is in the list of killed and wounded. Among famous military and political names are Bismarck, Moltke, Buelow, Bluecher, Bredow, Kleist, and Stein. All the lost officers of these names are kinsmen of heroes of past wars or politics. In the northern provinces all the men of several families have perished.

Worst are conditions in the west of Brandenburg, Mark, and in Pomerania, both old bulwarks of Hohenzollern power. Fourteen princes belonging to some twenty-three reigning families are dead or wounded. There are still a hundred of these princes at the front. The losses of the reigning families are exaggerated. Every day foreign telegrams come to Berlin recording the deaths of German princes who do not exist. Most are described as "cousins of the kaiser."

In addition to his sons, Wilhelm II. has nine cousins and nephews at the front. Six are regimental officers. All these undergo the same risks as do other officers of the line.

Descriptions of fighting in east and west show that officers willfully expose themselves. Many perish through not taking shelter in trenches; many more through taking risks with the object of inspiriting their men. A story is told by the wounded linesman Seydel of the recent fight between Roulers and Ecloo which shows the spirit in the officers.

The Germans, says Seydel, occupied a double row of trenches flanked on the right by a copse and on the left by a stream which they made difficult to pass by stringing barbed wire along the banks. The French could not attack the trenches in front, as here also was barbed wire. Behind the wire was a row of pits called by the soldiers "die kleine Hoelle," or "Little Hell." The trench was shelled for seven hours, and five officers perished. The loss in men was only three.

In another instance in the eastern theater of war three German officers found themselves on the Russian side. The Russians did not fire on them. They sent cavalry from behind a wood with the design of capturing the Germans. The German shrapnel caught the cavalry column, wiped half of it out, and sent the rest racing back.

The Germans remained untouched for an hour, during which a terrific artillery duel was fought across the Vistula. In the end the German artillery withdrew. Russian horsemen came back and invited the Germans to surrender. One of the engineers did surrender. The staff officer and the other engineer drew their swords, rushed on the Russian cavalry, and were hacked to pieces.

German reports give Russian officers credit for equal courage. The Russian officers are stated nearly always to have behaved well. One redeeming feature of the war is that the accusations of cowardice, brutality, and treachery which fly from Europe to America and around the world are mostly the inventions of stay at home civilians. Between the fighting men a far more chivalrous spirit obtains. With the noncommmissioned ranks this spirit is weakened by weeks of waiting in trenches carpeted with blood and mud.

The officers on both sides are all right. Many officers report kindly and chivalrous treatment from the Russians and even from the French (though the Franco-German opposition is much fiercer than the Russo-German). Sometimes the concern of inimical officers for one another transcends the consideration they show to their own comrades.

This happened with the Seventy-sixth infantry regiment, which gets its men from Hamburg and bears the title "the Hamburger Geese." A battalion of the "Hamburger Geese" was entrenched for a week at Matchonow, a townlet southwest of Warsaw, near the Warsaw-Kalisch-Lodz railroad. The Russians were entrenched a mile in front.

The battle consisted in making approaches and sniping. Within two days the trenches were brought to within 300 yards. Russians and Germans began to exchange visits. When the trenches got to within 200 yards the Germans sniped so successfully that the visits had to cease.

This bored the "Hamburger Geese." They sent a message asking on what terms the Russians would renew the old friendly relations. A Russian officer promised to visit the German trench on condition that he was not made prisoner. An hour later there sat in the trench a gigantic, very hungry Russ who devoured vast quantities of "kalter Aufschnitt" and drank schnapps. Schnapps, he said, he had not tasted since the beginning of the war. The schnapps went to his head and he fell asleep.

In vain the "Hamburger Geese" tried to awaken him. They had promised not to make him prisoner and that gave him a claim to their protection. They reasoned that if he was not back by nightfall he would be suspected of desertion or even of treason. The big Russ was a Baltic province native with a German name, and that would intensify suspicion. The "Geese" decided to carry him back to his trench.

As they had no right to risk their men's lives, the officers decided to do the work themselves. They slung the tipsy Russian in a hammock, swung the hammock on two sticks and intrusted it to two lieutenants. As the lieutenants moved forward there was a volley. A bullet cut the hammock rope and the gigantic Russian came down with a flop. This woke him. He drew his sword and slashed one lieutenant on the arm.

The other lieutenant disarmed him. Even this did not induce the Germans to break their promise not to make the Russian a prisoner. They threw him on the ground, and sat on him. For two hours in the darkness the Russians and Germans in the trenches exchanged volleys over the officers' heads.

At midnight a Russian officer carrying a white flag in the glare of an electric projector came out of the trenches. He found the three men lying on the ground. The big Russian was handed back to his comrades, and the Germans got back to their trench.

Two days later the big Russian was killed in an assault on the German trench. The Germans found a book on his body printed in Cyrillic characters, and on the fly-leaf a Russian address which they could not read. They cut out the address, pasted it on the book, and sent the book back. The address, they learned, was that of the dead Russian's mother.

Some German officers have been in French or Russian captivity and have got out of it.

War Poems Written by Mikado and Wife.

TOKIO, Dec. 5.—The art of verse making is still considered a polite accomplishment in Japan and the educated classes are proud to achieve some facility in it.

The emperor and empress cultivate the art of poetry, and their verses take a modern turn. Following are three or four war poems which have just been written by the emperor and empress. The translation and versification are by D. Miyake and Philip Henry Dodge.

BY THE EMPEROR.

If life for country's sake men give,
How shall dependent loved ones live?

The fortress hard to take!
Alas, the children, wives,
Set mourning for the sake
Of those who give their lives.

As monuments sublime war trophies stand.
Their cost? The lives of men throughout the land.

BY THE EMPRESS.

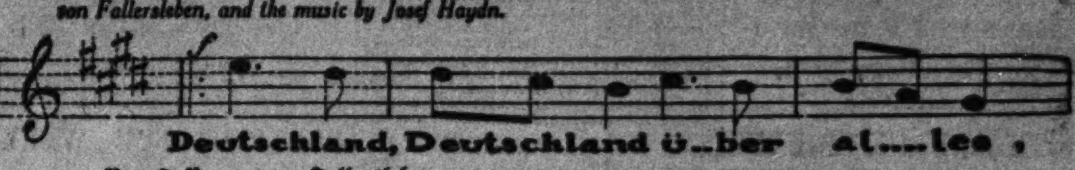
See, skilled of hand and brave of heart,
Kind women into service press,
From home and little ones apart,
The soldier's ills to heal and bless.

The widowed ones, how shall they spend their years?
Their keepsakes, soldiers' letters stained with tears.

The late emperor wrote over 30,000 poems.

All Germans Are Singing It at Home and at the Front.

This beautiful song is the favorite of the Germans who are fighting on the firing line and the Germans who are waiting at home. The following translation was made for The Tribune by Margarete Munsterberg, daughter of Prof. Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard. The poem was written by Hoffmann von Fallersleben, and the music by Josef Haydn.



Von Hoffmann von Fallersleben.

Deutſchland, Deutſchland über alles,
Ueber alles in der Welt,
Wenn es ſtets zu Schutz und Trutze
Brüderlich zuſammen hält,
Von der Maas bis an die Memel,
Von der Etſch bis an den Belt:
Deutſchland, Deutſchland über alles,
Ueber alles in der Welt!

Deutſche Frauen, deutſche Treue,
Deutſcher Wein und deutſcher Sang
Sollen in der Welt behalten
Ihren alten ſchönen Klang,
Uns zu edler Tat begeiſtern
Unſer ganzes Leben lang —
Deutſche Frauen, deutſche Treue,
Deutſcher Wein und deutſcher Sang!

Einigkeit und Recht und Freiheit
Für das deutſche Vaterland!
Darnach laßt uns alle ſtreben
Brüderlich mit Herz und Hand!
Einigkeit und Recht und Freiheit
Sind des Glückes Unterpfand —
Blüh im Glanze dieſes Glückes,
Blühe, deutſches Vaterland!

German land, above all others,
Dear above all other lands,
That, a faithful host of brothers,
Evermore united stands,
That, from Maas to farthest Memel
And from Etch to Belt expands:
German land above all others,
Dear above all other lands!

German faith and German women,
German wine and German song
In the world shall keep the beauties
That of old to them belong,
Still to noble deeds inspiring
They shall always make us strong—
German faith and German women,
German wine and German song!

Union, right and freedom ever
For the German fatherland!
So, with brotherly endeavor,
Let us strive with heart and hand!
For a bliss that wavers never
Union, right and freedom stand—
In this glory bloom forever,
Bloom, my German fatherland!

Society Women Adopt Wounded French Soldiers.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Paris has hit upon a new greeting. When one woman meets another in the street she does not ask any of the inane questions that heretofore had such a great vogue. She straightway gets down to business and asks:

"Have you adopted a wounded soldier?"

This habit of "adopting" wounded soldiers has become widespread among wealthy society women here. Much of it is done through the military hospital of Val-de-Grace. After securing the necessary permit from the military authorities these women pay a visit to the great wards where hundreds of the wounded soldiers lie. They chat and laugh with the men until they come upon one whose personality is especially pleasing or whose circumstances are especially appealing. Arrangements are soon made by which the soldier is transferred to the care and responsibility of the interested woman.

This responsibility does not include the duties of nursing. In a strictly medical sense the men are still under the care of a doctor.

STOCK EXCHANGE NOT TO OPEN YET

Committee of Five Announces Its Plans Have Not Been Completed.

GOTHAM BANK FIGURES

It was officially announced yesterday by the committee of five of the New York stock exchange that plans had not yet been consummated for a reopening. Regardless of general knowledge that important banking interests do not yet favor trading on the exchange, announcements continue to be made in positive terms that the exchange is ready to reopen. Such statements have been appearing during the last four weeks, and apparently the only way of accounting for them is the rivalry of two news bureaus, each anxious to beat the other in predicting or asserting arrangements for reopening. A positive announcement of this character was wired from New York on Friday.

Statement of Committee.

A prompt denial was made this morning in the following official statement:

"The plans of the committee of five to resume dealings in stocks on the floor of the exchange have not yet been consummated. No meeting of the board of governors has been called and none will be called until a plan is perfected."

Meanwhile the committee representing the Consolidated stock exchange has conferred with representatives of the large exchange and with the banks and an agreement has been reached that both exchanges open at the same time. Cooperation of the banks and exchanges is deemed essential at this time.

Weekly Bank Statement.

The New York Clearing House association issued the weekly bank statement yesterday much in the form that obtained before July 30. The surplus reserve is now shown to be $119,465,663. This is a decrease of $11,710,460 from previous week. The banks are retiring the emergency notes secured by commercial paper, and this may account for the continued loss in cash to the subtreasury, since receipts of cash from the interior have been greatly in excess of the shipments. The figures:

Prairie Oil and Gas.

Prairie Oil and Gas company stock has been unusually strong for the last few days, following the action of the Ohio Oil company in separating from its pipe line and producing business. It is considered likely that the Prairie will follow suit, in which case the shareholders will receive a big stock dividend. The Ohio action was taken following the decision in the United States Supreme court ruling that all pipe lines are common carriers.

The $1,170,000 of Southern Pacific equipment trust 4½ per cent equipment certificates, series C, are dated Dec. 1 and mature in ten equal installments from Dec. 1, 1915, to Dec. 1, 1924, inclusive. They are redeemable on any interest date on or after Dec. 1, 1919, at 102½ on ninety days' notice.

Begins Clearing Checks.

The New York federal reserve bank will receive checks drawn on other federal reserve banks at par and immediate credit, which virtually means free collection.

The New York federal reserve bank and the clearing house have entered into an agreement that whenever the reserve bank designates items as par collections the clearing house will conform its discretionary list to such changes. In such cases checks on federal reserve banks will only be received at par when paid to the local federal reserve bank.

The clearing house committee has notified all members of an amendment providing that the discretionary list shall include "all items (whether such items are collected through the federal reserve bank in New York or otherwise), which the federal reserve bank in New York shall have notified the manager of the New York Clearing House association it will receive from its members for immediate credit at par."

Total National Banks, 7,584.

Twenty-one formal applications for conversion of state banks, or reorganization of state or private banks, were filed in Washington during the month of November and six formal applications to organize national banks were made. Twelve applications were approved, seven of these being for conversion of state banks or reorganization of state or private banks.

Six banks with a total capital of $597,500 were authorized to begin business during the same month. Of this number two with a capital of $62,500 had individual capital of less than $50,000 and four with a capital of $535,000 had individual capital of $50,000 or over.

The total number of national banks organized on Nov. 30, 1914, was 10,658, of which 3,074 have discontinued, leaving 7,584 banks, with an authorized capital of $1,074,675 and circulation outstanding, secured by United States bonds $740,500,821, and by other securities $270,078,286. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding is $1,111,999,076, including $101,420,019 covered by lawful money deposited with the United States treasurer on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which have reduced their circulation.

Tax Notes Rise in Value.

There has been a steady decline in municipal tax notes of Massachusetts cities and towns since the 6 per cent high water mark set in August at the outbreak of the European war. The competition has been so keen recently that practically every issue goes at a lower rate than the one just preceding, and the strength in municipal loans has been as strong as that in long time city bonds.

Before the war, tax exempt city notes were sold at under 3.80 per cent discount—November maturity. In August a few sales were negotiated at 6 per cent discount. Since then there has been a progressive decline, culminating in a sale last Wednesday of 3.73 per cent for a small amount coming due next April, after tax day. The general transactions in July were at less than 4 per cent discount, so that now the market is about the same as before the beginning of the war.

The following table, giving the rates of fifteen actual transactions, sketches the course of rates during the last five months for tax anticipation notes of Massachusetts cities and towns:

STOCKS FIRMER, BONDS HEAVIER

One Exception in Latter at New York Is Rise in Rock Islands.

PROGRESS FOR WEEK.

New York, Dec. 5.—Bonds and stocks moved contrarily today; the former evincing greater heaviness, while the list of stock prices issued by the exchange after the close of the session indicated a firmer tendency.

The only pronounced exception to the downward tendency in bonds was again furnished by the several Rock Island issues, which rose from 1 to 3 points, the latter measuring the gain in the collateral 4s.

Dealings in bonds, while relatively larger in volume than on the two preceding days, involved a smaller number of issues, many of the speculative bonds being unquoted. There were no lots of more than moderate size and the average transaction was in two to five bonds.

Broader Inquiry for Stocks.

Bid and asked prices of stocks indicated not only a rising tendency but a broader inquiry, more stocks being added to the already formidable list. Today's business in stocks, while not disclosed was reported to show an increase for the two hours over the same period of the early days of the week.

Contrary to reports, the special committee in charge of the stock exchange today announced that plans to effect a resumption of open dealings in stocks had not yet gone beyond the tentative stage. Pending more definite developments, which may be assumed to include the attitude of the London exchange, there will be no departure from existing regulations.

German Exchange Stronger.

The only feature to foreign exchange was the increased strength of reichsmarks, which rose ⅛ cent over yesterday's quotation. The movement again lacked explanation, other than the belief that it represented further selling of our securities by Germany.

This week's bank statement was especially interesting in that it was the first full and complete showing made since the beginning of the war and the first comprehensive report of its kind since the new federal reserve system became operative. Actual cash loss of $10,775,000 was much under general estimates, while the loan expansion of about $22,500,000 was ascribed to various syndicate operations.

Review of the Week.

Developments during the week indicated steady progress toward the resumption of normal conditions in security markets.

The trading of the week demonstrated that a substantial demand existed here at prices above the minimum fixed for the protection of collateral and bank loans. Recovery of prices on the exchange was considered a logical outcome of the movement recently shown in the unauthorized outside market.

The course of the money market, with call loans down to 3½ per cent, added to the cheerful outlook in the monetary situation, time loans and renewal showing proportionate ease. England's war loan, issued on a 4 per cent basis, went to a premium over the issue price. The rate Germany will have to pay, compared with the 5 per cent of the first war issue, remains to be seen. Anxiety was allayed by the market's acceptance of these huge issues.

Closing: Mercantile paper, 4½@5. Sterling exchange, weak; sixty day bills, 4.8525; for cables, 4.8785; for demand, 4.8725. Bar silver, 49⅝c.

Strength of Railway Bonds.

Attention to a few general principles of bond investment will save the investor in railway securities from most of the pitfalls which are placed before him.

The real basis of the security of railway bonds is not in the first cost of the railroads or in the inventoried values now being listed by the interstate commerce commission. It is in the fact that the railway is a necessity of modern civilization—just as much a necessity as a wagon road. Whatever the law may do in the way of keeping down rates and increasing taxes, the railroads must continue to operate. If they are forced into bankruptcy, receivers will operate them temporarily, but in the end they must be given some permanent status, and when that time comes the people holding the first mortgage on a road are bound to have first consideration.

The statement that the railway is a necessity does not mean that all existing railways are necessary. It is obvious that if all the trunk lines between Chicago and New York ceased to operate a large part of the business of this whole region would have to be reorganized or would stop altogether. But a railway connecting some coal mine with a trunk line is necessary only so long as the mine produces and sells coal. Once the mine is exhausted the railway becomes of less value than junk. Junk would represent real value, for it could be sold. But the law might prevent the sale of the rails and ties, and it might compel the owners of the railway to operate it at a loss.

The investor in railway bonds should see that the bonds are the obligation of a railway whose existence is a necessity, whose usefulness and earning power cannot be destroyed by the exhausting of a mine or a forest or by the collapse of a few boom towns. The fact that a railway has heavy steel rails, broken stone ballast, and block signals is of no value or significance to the investor unless there are freight and passengers to be transported over it and unless there is a prospect that this traffic will not decrease.

In the earlier days of railroading many costly railways were built "beginning nowhere and ending nowhere," and some of them went into bankruptcy. A few railways of this sort have been built more recently. Let the investor shun the securities of all such.

Escanaba Traction Company.

O. H., Escanaba, Mich.—The gross and net earnings of the Escanaba Traction company have shown an increase every year since the company was organized in 1909, but the interest charge has increased somewhat faster, so that last year the net earnings were only 170 per cent of the interest, according to Moody's manual. There are outstanding $365,000 serial first mortgage bonds of an authorized issue of $600,000, but no more can be issued unless the net earnings for the previous year are twice the interest on bonds outstanding and on those to be issued. A sinking fund of $10,000 a year is required to redeem these bonds, putting them in a strong position. There is also a $200,000 second mortgage issue outstanding. These latter bonds are less conservative. The company has $500,000 capital stock.

Two Corporations.

E. A. L.—The Northwestern States Portland Cement company of Mason City, Ia., owns 520 acres of limestone and shale and has a plant of 5,000 barrels of cement daily capacity. There are outstanding $1,750,000 7 per cent preferred stock and $1,750,000 common. The preferred dividends have been paid in full, according to Moody's manual. A bond issue of $400,000, due Feb. 1 last, was paid. An inquiry to the company whether this loan was refunded has brought no reply.

The Schulze Baking company has been engaged since 1893 in the manufacture and sale of bread in Chicago, Kansas City, and Cincinnati. It has outstanding $5,000,000 capital stock and $600,000 bonds. In selling this bond issue the company reported that its net earnings in 1913 were "more than four times the amount of the interest requirements."

Brief Answers to Correspondents.

F. S. P.—The public utility bonds of Hamilton, Ont., probably will not be affected by the outcome of the war, except so far as that result may affect all securities through its result on money markets.

Hog receipts of 10,000 head sold on an uneven market, but averaged 5c lower for the day. Opening purchases by eastern shippers were made at 5@10c higher prices than were obtainable Friday, but a reaction forced values to a 10@15c lower level before the close. Hogs in the quarantine division opened steady to 10c lower and closed 10@25c off from Friday's figures. Shippers paid up to $7.40 for prime light and lightweight butcher hogs, while $7.25 was the best price obtained in the quarantine section. Sales were made over an unusually wide range of prices, the bulk being at $6.65@7.25.

Final quotations showed a little rally from the low point of early in the week, but remained 50c lower than a week ago, and, with the exception of last Thursday, were the lowest made since March, 1912. The average price this week was posted at $7.00, against $7.50 last week. Receipts of hogs this week were placed at 228,600 head, and exceeded arrivals of any previous week since December, 1908. The expectancy is for a run of 200,000 the coming week.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 800; Swift & Co., 500; Sulzberger & Sons, 1,200; Morris & Co., 1,500; Anglo-American, 800; Boyd-Lunham, 300; Roberts & Oake, 300; Western Packing Co., 300; Miller & Hart, 500; Independent Packing Co., 100; Brennan Packing Co., 700; butchers, 500; shippers, 4,000; total, 12,500; left over, 500.

CATTLE.

Cattle receipts at Chicago this week were of normal volume for the season of the year, but trading conditions were not and prices suffered, closing 10@25c lower than a week ago for beef steers. Arrivals were 47,000 head, compared with actual receipts of 25,348 a week ago and 51,891 a year ago. A large proportion of the receipts was handled in the quarantine division and had to be disposed for local slaughter only. In the free section, the fact that small shippers buying for slaughter houses not under government supervision were barred from the trade deprived the market of an important support and enabled interested buyers to subdue the upward tendency of values. Cows and heifers closed lower with steers, while calves sold at the cheapest prices reported in a long time, showing net losses of 75c@$1.00 for the week.

Cattle at six western markets for the week 152,000, against 128,600 the preceding week, 128,400 a year ago and 188,900 two years ago. Total for 1914 to date 6,162,000, against 6,942,000 the same period in 1913.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb receipts this week were nearly double those of the preceding week and within 6,000 head of arrivals for the corresponding week last year. The trade was hampered by quarantine restrictions and the market during most of the period was in a congested condition, although making spasmodic recoveries. Final values were at the low point, with lambs largely 60@75c lower than a week ago, while sheep showed a decline of 25c and yearlings were off 50c. Closing sales were made at $8.50@8.85 for the best lambs, outside prices being paid by butchers and shippers, while packers filled their orders at $8.50 and lower. Sheep closed at $6.25 for the best wethers, as compared with $6.50 a week ago, while yearlings were quotable up to $7.50, against $8.00 last week. The supply of sheep and lambs in sight for future marketings is not large, however, and the trade expects to show more stability.

WHEAT MARKET HAS FIRM TONE

Higher Cables and Liberal Clearances Increase Buying Demand.

CORN RECEIPTS HEAVY.

Prices for wheat made small advances yesterday notwithstanding a generally bearish local sentiment. The trade was not large at any time, but cables were firmer, and advices from the other side were less bearish in regard to the Argentine crop. While it is conceded there will be a lot of wheat for export from the South American country, the high ocean freights are working in favor of the American seller, and reported sales of new Plate wheat figure out a little higher than American No. 2 hard wheat according to a New York report.

December was relatively a little firmer, net gains for the day being ¼@⅜c to ½c higher, the December leading. Cash prices were steady relatively in all markets, but sales here were not heavy, about 160,000 bu, mostly for export. Country offerings were reported moderate.

Country Stocks Smaller.

Some reports from the northwest indicate country elevator stocks in the three states are only 15,000,000 bu compared to 40,000,000 bu a year ago. Receipts at Duluth are falling off, but Minneapolis receipts are liberal, the two points having 674 cars, against 603 cars a year ago. Primary receipts continue liberal, 11,475,000 bu for the week, against 13,075,000 bu the previous week and 7,903,000 bu a year ago.

Liverpool was strong, ½d up for futures and 1@1½d up for spot wheat. Italy was reported a big buyer of Plate wheat, but reports were undoubtedly exaggerated. Clearances for the day were 974,000 bu wheat and flour. Late Argentine cables said rains had done some damage in Buenos Aires province. Generally conditions in Argentina are favorable. The conditions in India are generally favorable.

Primary Receipts Large.

Total primary receipts of wheat for the season to date have been about 92,000,000 bu more than a year ago. The total United States and Canadian visible is 89,000,000 bu, or about 11,000,000 bu more than a year ago. Duluth stocks decreased 1,563,000 bu for the week, and after the loadings were completed yesterday at Fort William and Port Arthur stocks at those points were estimated at 2,500,000 bu. Cancellations of wheat receipts for shipment from Chicago at Chicago the last week were 1,142,000 bu.

The weather map showed dry conditions still prevailing over the greater part of the winter wheat belt, but there were indications of cloudy and more unsettled weather in Nebraska and Kansas. Armour sold wheat early, but was a buyer later. Rankin, Keusch-Schwartz, Wagner, Chapin, McKenna-Rodgers, and Bartlett-Frazier were good buyers.

Corn Prices Little Changed.

Corn prices were but little changed. At the start there was a little bulge, but offerings were fair on the advances. The big increase in stocks at Chicago with the indifferent shipping demand is checking the buying of corn, and the market does not show much snap. Prices for spot corn were about steady and there were sales of 130,000 bu, including a little for export. Liverpool was firm, due to the firmness in Argentine markets. Cables were ⅝d up for futures and ½d higher for spot.

Receipts were 565 cars with 581 cars expected tomorrow. Western receipts for the week were 12,145,000 bu, compared to 5,306,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were small at 77,000 bu. Weather conditions generally continue favorable for the marketing of corn and the mild weather is making it possible to economize in feeding operations on the farm.

Oats Trade Is Slow.

Oats trade was slow, with the December strong. Resting prices were unchanged to ⅜c higher. Cash sales were small at 105,000 bu, and there was only a moderate demand. Offerings from the country were light. Receipts were 268 cars, with 178 cars inspected yesterday. Receipts in the west were 954,000 bu and for the week were 6,815,000 bu, against 3,956,000 bu a year ago.

Hog Products Lose Upturn.

Provisions opened a little higher, but sold off later. The trade was not large and packers were credited with selling products, while the demand was less urgent than it has been the last few days. Receipts of hogs were 12,000 and prices at the yards were 5@10c up. The estimate for tomorrow was 35,000 and 200,000 are expected this week. Receipts in the west for the week were 784,800, against 591,000 the previous week and 612,000 a year ago. Liverpool prices were 6d lower for meats and 1s up for lard.

RYE DEMAND ACTIVE.

Rye met with a good demand at firm prices, with No. 2 selling at $1.10@1.10½, and closing at $1.11 nominal. No. 3 sold at $1.08½ to arrive and $1 10 was bid for spot. No. 4 sold at $1.08@1.08½. Export sales were 10,000 bu. Receipts, 20 cars.

Barley was steady, with malting 63@67c, feed 60c, and screenings 60@61c. Receipts, 50 cars.

Timothy seed was steady at $4.55@5.00 for cash. Clover seed was unchanged at $10.00@14.00 for cash.

Duluth flax closed ¼@⅜c higher, with cash on track $1.50, December $1.49, and May $1.51⅛. Receipts, 15 cars. Minneapolis was ¼c higher at $1.47½@1.50½ for cash on track. Receipts, 40 cars. Winnipeg was steady to ½c higher, with December $1.25¾ and May $1.31⅛. Receipts, 6 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

It is regarded as extremely likely C. H. Canby will be elected to succeed himself as president of the board of trade. It is not expected there will be any opposition, and there has been no effort to bring out any other candidates. Mr. Canby has given quite general satisfaction as the chief executive officer of the board, and the general sentiment appears to be his active work in conducting the affairs of the board deserves hearty indorsement. He has given a great deal of his time to the work connected with the position during a period when the trade affairs on the board demanded the greatest attention to his own business. Mr. Canby has signified his willingness to again accept the position if the nomination is tendered him.

The Kansas board of agriculture has a particularly accurate way of estimating the crop areas in the state, and where there is a discrepancy between the state and government figures on acreage the trade is inclined to assume the Kansas state figures are the most correct. The estimates are made up, according to Secretary Mohler, from assessors' returns. The assessors account for the entire area of each farm after a house to house canvass. The accuracy of the reports are sworn to by the assessors. From this it will be seen that the returns should be as nearly correct as it is possible to make them.

The flour being shipped by the contributors to the board of trade Belgian fund is being sent in specially marked cotton bags. The bags are marked at the top to "The American consul for noncombatants from funds secured through the agency of the Chicago board of trade." The bags are also expressly marked "War Relief Donation." Much stress is being laid on the markings so there will be no danger of confiscation. All the bags have to be marked in a similar manner except the different names of the mills whose flour is being shipped.

The shipping demand for wheat was moderate yesterday, as usual on Saturday. Offerings were moderate and prices were steady relative to the futures. At Kansas City exporters were again after the wheat, paying somewhat higher prices. At Minneapolis premiums were fully maintained, the choice No. 1 northern selling at May price to a little over. Duluth continues to ship wheat freely. Country offerings were light here yesterday. Sales here were 150,000 bu for export and 10,000 bu to mills.

"High ocean freights and war risks on Argentine shipments are an effectual barrier to business in their new crop of wheat, as they are asking more than double our present gulf rates to carry wheat from Argentine to Liverpool," said W. H. Perrine & Co. "This means the United States is without competition for the next two months."

Total primary receipts of wheat for the season to date have been about 92,000,000 bu more than a year ago, while the visible is only about 12,000,000 bu larger than at the same time last year. The total American and Canadian visible supply is now about 89,000,000 bu, compared to 78,000,000 bu a year ago.

Minneapolis wired: "Our receipts are large, due to the fact that some of the line houses where corn is moving are holding this grain and shipping wheat. Corn is in such fine condition that it is a safe carry; in fact, it is so fine that Chicago has inspected some of it as old corn."

Cash corn prices were about steady and the demand was moderate. Oats were about ½c higher relatively, best three whites being about 1c over the December. Offerings were not heavy. Sales were 130,000 bu corn and 105,000 bu oats.

Chicago has received 10,576,000 bu corn the last two weeks and shipments have been 3,384,000 bu. Last year for the same two weeks receipts were 2,042,00 bu and shipments were 1,229,000 bu.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 116 cars; corn, 581 cars; oats, 178 cars; rye, 20 cars; barley, 50 cars; hogs, 35,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 200,000 head.

Clement-Curtis had a Buenos Aires cable that heavy thunderstorms have done some damage. In Santa Fe harvest prospects are normal and cutting will begin next week.

Ned Brown of Minneapolis wired Lake that country elevator stocks of wheat in the three northwest states were 15,000,000 bu, against 40,000,000 bu a year ago.

It is estimated there will be 2,500,000 bu wheat left in Fort William and Port Arthur after they get through loading tonight.

Italy was reported a big buyer of Argentine wheat, but cable advices as to the amounts were regarded as much exaggerated.

Receipts of 1,142,000 bu wheat in store were canceled for shipment the last week, indicating liberal shipments from here.

Duluth stocks decreased 1,563,000 bu for the week.

BUMPERCROPS ARE CERTAIN, AS PRESENT FOR AMERICA.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—"Uncle Sam" is assured a bumper Christmas present from American farmers. Reports reaching the department of agriculture declare the harvest review of Christmas time will show a total crop yield nearly 10 per cent larger than last year.

The preliminary estimates of crop production, according to the department, indicate this year that the aggregate per acre yield of all crops will be about 9.4 per cent larger than last year's and about 2.3 per cent larger than the ten year average.

The total production of corn this year is expected to be about 10.6 per cent larger than last year's total production; the wheat crop, 16.8 per cent larger; potatoes, 22.6 per cent; apples, 78 per cent; buckwheat, 23.1 per cent, and hay, 7 per cent larger.

The preliminary estimates for the larger crops for 1914 are: Corn, 2,705,692,000 bushels; oats, 1,139,741,000 bushels; cotton, 7,341,000,000 pounds; wheat, 763,380,000 bushels; tobacco, 982,715,000 pounds.

EATS ROSES FOR DINNER; GOAT STARTS TROUBLE.

Atlanta, Dec. 5.—Red roses and their appeal to the appetite of an angora goat have kicked up a neighborhood row which the police have been called in to arbitrate.

The roses bud on the lawn of John Cunningham's home, 33 Colquitt avenue. The goat, the property of a neighbor, is supposed to browse in a nearby pasture, but, according to Cunningham, this is a mere supposition.

He complains that the goat has developed an appetite for the flowers, which results in the mastication of six or seven roses a day. An officer who investigated issued orders that hereafter the goat must confine his meals to his own grass and tin cans.

FEDERAL BANKS RESTRICT LOANS

Reports for Week Show Bulk of Discounts Mature Within 30 Days.

TAKE ADVICE OF BOARD

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—The consolidated statement of the condition of the twelve federal reserve banks, with the close of business on Dec. 4, made public today by the federal reserve board, shows little difference from that of a week ago.

A statement accompanying the report of condition points out that the banks apparently are observing the board's recommendations that a large percentage of the paper discounted be of not longer maturity than thirty days. The statement says:

"Cash holdings and deposits show small changes as compared with the previous week, while gold holdings show an increase of about $3,000,000, largely offset by reduction in other cash holdings. Rediscounts amount in round figures to $10,000,000, and transactions are reported by all twelve of the banks. The increase over the previous week thus indicated is nearly $2,500,000.

Short Terms Discounts Rule.

"More than 75 per cent of the paper discounted with the reserve banks matures within thirty days, while New York, Chicago, and St. Louis rank in the order stated as regards rediscount business. The aggregate amount of capital shown is slightly different from that reported last week as a result of adjustments which have been necessary in the capital account of several of the member banks.

"In this week's statement report is made for the first time of the net amount of federal reserve notes in circulation. The item differs from that reported under the same heading last week, because it shows the net liability of federal reserve banks after deducting from the gross amount in circulation the amount in gold or other lawful money deposited by reserve banks with federal reserve agents to retire outstanding notes.

Increase in Federal Notes.

"A memorandum is shown on the statement indicating the difference between the gross and net amounts of notes in circulation. The increase during the last week in federal reserve notes in circulation is $2,405,000, but the net increase in bank liability in such notes is only $1,250,000, owing to the depositing of lawful money to retire notes."

LIKES THE JAIL BOARD; ASKS PRISON SENTENCE.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 5.—With the memory of the Thanksgiving dinner served in the city prison still fresh in her mind, Kitty Wilson, charged with vagrancy, appeared before Police Judge Sullivan.

"What about this charge, Kitty?" asked the judge.

"I'm guilty, your honor," she said.

"I don't like to send you to the county jail for thirty days," the judge said. "I feel disposed to grant you probation if you'll promise to behave yourself in the future."

Kitty's face appeared gloomy. "Make it thirty days, your honor, please," she said.

"Why do you want to go to jail?" queried Judge Sullivan in surprise.

"Well, you honor, I'll be in plenty of time for the big Christmas dinner out there, and if it's half as good as the Thanksgiving one I had upstairs, everything will be lovely."

"Thirty days goes," said the magistrate, and Kitty was led away smiling.

TRAILED BY FACE POWDER; PERFUME BETRAYS WOMAN

New York, Dec. 5.—Trailing her by a strong odor of face powder, Policeman Edgar H. Burrell of Lakeville arrested Miss Sophia Betters at Ludingtonville. She was accused of robbing the Lakeville summer cottage of Homer Bateman, where she worked for a while as a governess. Among the articles taken from the cottage was a jar of highly perfumed pink powder. Discovery of a side comb cast suspicion on Miss Betters, and when Burrell went to her home he struck the scent of the powder.

TRIES TO KILL SELF; 73 YEARS ENOUGH FOR HIM

Easterner Balks at the Prospect of Living to Be 100.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 5.—Told by several physicians that, barring accidents, he would no doubt live to celebrate his one hundredth birthday, Meyer Singer, 73 years old, attempted suicide by slashing himself several times in the abdomen with a potato knife. Surgeons in the Pennsylvania hospital believe the aged man will obtain his wish to die.

Reaching old age and unable to find work to occupy his mind, the man became moody and constantly prayed that he would die. Several weeks ago he started to visit physicians and inquire their opinion concerning his chances of dying soon. He would explain that his mother passed away quietly in her 102d year, and that her father almost reached the century milestone.

The physician would invariably make a searching examination and pronounce him sound and healthy. Upon his arrival home he would complain to his wife that every doctor he saw could find nothing wrong with him and that all predicted he would live to be a hundred.

His family tried to console him, assuring him that there was no need for him to work and that they all loved him. He would shake his head, however, and repeat that he was getting old and nobody wanted him.

KANSAS MISSIONARY ONLY WHITE MAN IN TIBET.

Hutchinson, Kas., Dec. 5.—Word has been received here of the safe arrival in the "forbidden land" of Tibet of Dr. A. L. Shelton and family.

Dr. Shelton left Hutchinson shortly after the first of the year to resume work as a missionary in Tibet. He and the members of his party are the only missionaries in that land, and it is probable that they are the only white people within the borders of Tibet.

Some nine years ago Dr. Shelton succeeded in entering Tibet by way of the Chinese frontier. Until that time, with the single exception of the military invasion of Col. Younghusband's troops, no white men had been allowed to enter Tibetan territory.

Dr. Shelton, who had located at Batang, on Chinese soil, saved the lives of some prominent Tibetans by his medical skill. He was gradually allowed to enter the "forbidden land" and for seven years he and his wife remained in Tibet, the sole white residents of the kingdom.

Two children were born to them while they remained there.

WOULD WED TO PROTECT WOMAN 89 YEARS OLD.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 5.—George A. Nelson, 30, former president of the Dorchester Bachelors' club, is prepared to defy the courts and the police in his effort to marry Miss Frances M. Wilson, 89, of 60 Russell street, Charlestown, whenever the aged woman is ready to accept him.

"I am not in love with Miss Wilson nor with her money," he declared; "but if she wants me, although just now she says she doesn't, I'll marry her, and the police won't stop me."

Nelson was refused a license to marry Miss Wilson when he applied for it at the city registry office, on the ground that a woman of that age was not competent to make a marriage agreement. Miss Wilson is reputed to be worth $80,000.

"My idea in marrying her," Nelson said, "was to protect her and see that she was properly provided for in her old age."

CONVICTS PLACED ON INDIANA PENAL FARM.

Greencastle, Ind., Dec. 5.—For the first time in the history of Indiana, criminals are being cared for outside of prison walls on the new penal farm near here. Twenty-four convicts from Michigan City have been put to work erecting buildings. Only convicts with excellent records will be eligible to life on the state farm, where there will be only one or two guards.

KRUPPS' BABY IS TERROR TO FOE

Trench Howitzer Shell Is Slow Traveler but a Deadly Device.

GUN ITSELF IS LIGHT.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Krupps' baby howitzer—minewurfer it is called by the Germans—is the latest terror the allied armies are called upon to face in the trenches, and its novelty, its comparative simplicity, and its destructiveness attest to the completeness of the German fighting equipment.

The huge howitzers with which the Germans battered down the strongest Belgian forts were for a time the most talked of feature of the German artillery, but now that Col. E. D. Ewinton, the British "eye-witness" with the expeditionary force, has drawn attention to this trench howitzer the British press is describing it.

Continues Flight Alone.

The uniqueness of the little howitzer lies in the fact that though its caliber is less than three inches, it throws a shell whose diameter is more than a foot, weighing with its charge of high explosive nearly 200 pounds. This is done by the simple expedient of attaching a small "adapter" to the shell, while the shell itself rests on the mouth of the gun in a sort of a cup.

The "adapter" is a metal bar, which fits perfectly into the bore of the gun. Being expelled, it takes with it the shell, which promptly separates itself and continues its flight alone, to fall in a trench where its explosion demolishes earthworks so arduously prepared by the allies.

To visualize how it leaves the howitzer one has but to imagine a small boy placing a cherry with a pin thrust in it over the mouth of a blow gun. The "minewurfer's shell is the cherry; the "adapter" the pin.

It's Slow, but Deadly.

The velocity of the shell is low, only 230 feet per second. The lowest elevation from which it is fired is 45 degrees, an angle at which the shell travels 550 yards. Eighty degrees is the highest angle at which it may be fired—an elevation used when trenches are only 190 yards apart.

Traveling slowly toward a trench with the annoying leisure of a lobbed tennis ball, the course of the shell may be plainly followed. Men can dodge it, but its explosive interior works havoc with the trench. This is all that is expected of it.

Though accounts from the allied front have given no circumstantial accounts of what it has done as a destructive agent, its effect can be surmised when one is reminded that four pounds of dynamite is considered sufficient to demolish breastworks from two to three feet in thickness.

The weight of the gun itself is only 130 pounds, and its mounting weighs thirty pounds less. It is attached, however, to a heavy bed, or platform, weighing nearly 1,000 pounds. Yet with the whole properly wheeled two men can readily transport it short distances under normal conditions.

SOCIETY WOMAN CAN LIVE ON $20,000 A YEAR.

New York, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Blanche W. Heye, who a year ago sued George W. Heye, millionaire banker, for divorce, asked for $50,000 yearly alimony. When awarded only $20,000 a year for herself and children she insisted it would be utterly impossible to live on that amount without getting into debt. Mrs. Heye now declares that not only can a society woman live well on $20,000 a year but she can save money besides.

BACHELOR GIRL BREAKS NEWS OF TROTH AT PARTY.

Coatesville, Pa., Dec. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Harris of Drumpelier announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sara, to John B. Lerch under unusual circumstances. Miss Harris was entertaining the Bachelor Maids, her society of girls, at a thimble party, and when refreshments were served each guest received a souvenir message in which the engagement was made known.

"HOGRICULTURE" TAKEN UP BY JEWISH FARMERS.

New York, Dec. 5.—Pig raising is on the increase among the Jewish farmers in the eastern section of the United States, according to J. W. Pincus, secretary of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America, which is holding its annual convention here. This became known when delegates began making comparisons.

"No more boarders for me," said a Sullivan county farmer. "Success in farming lies in hogriculture; that's pig raising, and I will continue to follow the example of other members who are prospering in meeting the demand of the pork market."

The majority of the members of the federation in New York state, Mr. Pincus said, were in the pork raising business, and the number promised to increase.

The sixth annual report shows that there are about 6,000 Jewish farmers in the United States, 1,000 of whom are in this state. All are prospering. There are thirteen farmers' associations, with sixty-three branches in eleven states. Their aim is to help the Jewish farmer by coöperative methods.

Coöperation is advocated for transporting produce to local markets. It is planned to have a federation stand at the New York City open markets.

PRESIDENT

$10,000⁰⁰ For a Photoplay!

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS will be paid to the man, woman or child submitting an idea for a photoplay serial story according to conditions below! No experience is necessary. This sensational offer is made by special arrangement between the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation and The Chicago Tribune. Read this announcement and ACT AT ONCE!

TEN Thousand Dollars—a fortune—is offered by the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation and The Chicago Tribune for a photoplay serial story! This is a straightforward offer, without any strings or qualifications. It is made by two great American institutions—the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation and The Chicago Tribune. We are seeking a big idea for a new photoplay serial story and offer $10,000.00 to the person who can create it. The $10,000.00 is now on deposit at the Fort Dearborn National Bank of Chicago.

Everybody Is Eligible

Everybody is eligible to this prize. It doesn't matter WHO you are, or whether you have ever written a photoplay or any kind of a play before—you are eligible to earn this $10,000.00.

The only persons barred from this offer are those who are connected either directly or indirectly with the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation or The Chicago Tribune.

You who have longed to write a novel or a play—you who have sought a chance to secure recognition for your efforts—this is YOUR opportunity!

Photoplay to Be Produced by Two Greatest Film Companies

The accepted photoplay in this $10,000 prize offer will be produced by two of the greatest American Film Companies—the Thanhouser Film Corporation (studios at New Rochelle, N. Y.) and the American Film Manufacturing Co. (studios at Chicago, Illinois, and Santa Barbara, California).

CONDITIONS:

$10,000.00 to be paid to the man, woman or child sending in the best idea for a photoplay serial story according to the decision of selected competent judges.

Manuscripts need not be in scenario form, nor technically correct. Simply an idea is wanted—a basic plot—which can be adapted to a photoplay serial to appear at the motion picture theaters in weekly episodes of two reels each, while the novelized version of the photoplay is to appear simultaneously in serial form in the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Only an idea is necessary—an experienced scenario writer will be provided to write the accepted story in scenario form to take care of mechanical effects, and an experienced writer will be provided to write the accepted story in novelized form for the newspapers; but all credit for the creation of the photoplay and story will be given the original author of the accepted idea. The inexperienced person has as good an opportunity as the professional.

Manuscripts must not be less than 1,000 words—no limit to maximum number of words; should consist of thorough outline of plot and sub-plots, suggestions as to characters, time play takes place, geographical locations, etc.

Manuscripts may be submitted in pencil, pen and ink, or typewriting—writing on one side of paper only. Manuscript must bear no evidence of the author's name or address, but must be numbered; a corresponding number and the title should be written on a slip of paper with the name and address of the author, and should be sent with the manuscript.

All manuscripts must be original—they must not be based on any photoplay that has been shown, or any drama or comedy that has appeared on the stage or in book form. The author must be the originator and the manuscript must be original.

No one connected directly or indirectly with the principals of this offer—The Chicago Tribune or the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation—is eligible. Offer is open to all others.

It is suggested that manuscripts include a series of climaxes each of which will be adaptable to a two-reel episode, with a master plot running throughout the story, resulting in a grand dramatic climax.

The elements of a great photoplay serial are: Love, adventure, mystery, thrills, child interest, characters of today, human interest, scenes from everyday life.

Don't be governed by any play or plot you have seen or read. Depend upon your originality. No experience is necessary. The crudest manuscript may contain the idea that will be accepted.

You may use the very simplest form. It is not the form we want, but the idea. A new idea written in a simple form like the following will be acceptable:

"John Smith is a young village doctor, but has little practise. He returns home one night to find his wife sick in bed. He tries to find out what is the matter with her, but cannot. At last, in desperation, he telephones long distance for Samuel Jones, a wealthy city physician, formerly a rival suitor for Mrs. Smith's hand, etc., etc."

Now, that form is simple enough, isn't it? Get the right idea and write it as simply as that, and you may earn the $10,000.00.

The accepted photoplay will be produced by two of America's greatest film companies—the Thanhouser Film Corporation and the American Film Manufacturing Company—in studios at New Rochelle, New York, Chicago, Ill., and Santa Barbara, California, and will be shown at theaters throughout the world.

All manuscripts must be sent to Scenario Department of The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Illinois, and must be in The Tribune office not later than midnight, January 17th, 1915. No manuscript will be returned. All manuscripts to be sent at the sender's risk.

All manuscripts beside the one that earns the $10,000.00 reward may be accepted by the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation for production by its allied companies, and paid for at the regular market prices. Offers will be submitted for them, which can be accepted or rejected by the authors.

The name of the man, woman or child who earns the $10,000.00 reward will be announced in Episode No. 1 of the story and photoplay. Photographs of the winner and his or her home environment will appear in Episode No. 1.

The greatest plays of the last ten years have come from the minds of previously unknown persons. It is the purpose of this plan to discover someone who can write a great photoplay, and to reward the creator with $10,000.00 for the task.

This offer is absolutely bona fide, and is made by special arrangement between the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation of New York City and The Chicago Tribune.

Open to any MAN, WOMAN or CHILD not connected directly or indirectly with the principals.

All manuscripts must reach office of Chicago Tribune by midnight, January 17th, 1915. Address,

SCENARIO DEPT.,
Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

The prize photoplay will be shown at motion picture theaters throughout the world—in two-reel episodes each week. The novelized version of the photoplay will appear in serial form in The Chicago Sunday Tribune and many other leading metropolitan newspapers. Thus, the author will be given an opportunity to present his views in the broadest possible manner. It is estimated that nearly seventy-five million people in AMERICA alone will read the story and see the photoplay.

Why We Make This Offer

We realize that the best plays written in the last ten years have come from previously unknown persons. Eugene Walter, who wrote "Paid in Full," "Fine Feathers," etc., was unknown until his first play was produced. Mr. Reizenstein, whose first play, "On Trial," has captured all New York, is only 22 years of age and had never before been heard of. Consequently, we make this offer to obtain from somebody, somewhere, the big idea we are seeking for a photoplay serial story. We offer $10,000 for the best manuscript; and we make the conditions so liberal that any man, woman or child can try. This, we believe, is the broadest and greatest offer ever made for a photoplay manuscript.

Don't Delay! This Offer Expires at Midnight, Jan. 17th.

Read the conditions carefully. Note the suggestions. See what must be done. Then write your photoplay story just as you want to write—as you feel you want your thoughts expressed—and send your manuscript to the SCENARIO DEPT., Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill. Remember, this offer expires at midnight, January 17th, 1915. Your manuscript must be in the office of The Chicago Tribune not later than that date.

STYLE ON SLAB RAISES POINT ON DELIVERY

Are Southpaws as Effective as Right Hand Pitchers?

IDEA IS DISCUSSED.

WOULD YOU RATHER HAVE Right handers—Walter Johnson, Joe Wood, Bill James, and Grover Alexander, OR Left handers—"Dutch" Leonard, Ray Collins, Harry Sallee, and Nap Rucker?

BY I. E. SANBORN.

If you were manager of a major league team and had the chance to take your pick of all the major league pitchers provided you chose four right handers or four left handers, which would you prefer—a quartet of southpaws or one composed entirely of northpaws?

Just by way of illustration, if you had to make the choice between a slab staff composed of Walter Johnson of the Senators, Joe Wood of the Red Sox, Bill James of the Braves, and Grover Alexander of the Phillies, and another staff made up of Leonard and Collins of the Red Sox, Sallee of the Cardinals, and Rucker of the Brooklyns, which would you prefer?

This is not saying that the four right handers named are the best of their kind in the game today, or that the four southpaws mentioned would constitute the best quartet of that persuasion that could be selected. That's wholly a matter of opinion, and there are a great many opinions in the world of baseball.

Choice May Not Please All.

Some fans or managers might prefer Mathewson or Bender, old as they are, to any of the right handed hurlers named. Big Ed Walsh has been quite some slabman and a lot of people still believe he can come back. There are a few other northpaws of note, such as Dubuc of Detroit, Tesreau of the Giants, Scott and Cicotte of the White Sox, Cheney of the Cubs, Keating of the Yankees, Rudolph of the Braves, Shawkey of the Athletics, Adams of Pittsburgh, and others too numerous to mention.

There doubtless are a lot of people who would prefer Plank or Vaughn, old as they are, or Marquard or Russell, erratic as they are, to some of the left handed pitchers included in the foregoing quartet. Then there are Coveleskie of Detroit, Gregg of the Red Sox, Benton of Cincinnati, Allen of Brooklyn, Tyler of the Braves, and a few other southpawe whose names have been carved into baseball history pretty permanently, and still are in their prime.

Fans Differ on Question.

But there isn t a manager in the land who would refuse to accept either of the quartets we first selected, provided they could get them at any cost within reason. The argument is whether a staff composed entirely of left handers would be as effective in a pennant race as one made up entirely of right handers. To make it more concrete, would four Johnsons be better than four Leonards, provided their defensive or offensive support were equal?

We have asked quite a few people whose opinions were worth it, and they differed considerably. Some of them preferred the right handers and others the southpaws, and a few declared it would not make much difference, because a good pitcher is a good pitcher, irrespective of which side of his anatomy does the mechanical work. Admitting that brains count for more than mere skill in pitching the point still is interesting and the writer inclines to the belief that four left handed pitchers on one team would prove more effective than four right handers on the same team as the major leagues are made up today.

That opinion is based largely on the fact so many of the leading players in regular positions bat left handed, and there is no doubt that a good southpaw can bother a left handed swatsman more than an equally good right hander can.

Batting Stars Hit Left Handed.

Take the batting averages of the American and National leagues for the last two or three seasons, and you will find that the majority of the regulars who bat up near the top each year are left handed in handling the stick. In four years there have been selected by a nonpartisan jury eight players who were considered the best in their respective leagues. These eight winners of the Chalmers trophy were Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Walter Johnson, and Eddie Collins, in the American league, and Frank Schulte, Larry Doyle, Jake Daubert, and John Evers, in the National league.

Seven of those eight "best players" bat left handed. The only right handed batsman picked for the trophy was Johnson, a pitcher, and the only pitcher to gain that honor. He was selected for his defensive ability alone. The others were chosen chiefly for their offensive strength, although none of them is a weak defensive player, of course. Last week we offered an all-star team based on the composite vote of the trophy commission for four years. It turned out to be composed of left handed batsmen, except at shortstop.

Southpaws Should Be Better.

Taking into consideration the fact that the backbone of so many teams is composed of left handed batsmen—Detroit and the Athletics are examples—it seems reasonable to think that a quartet of left handers would prove more effective under existing conditions than any four right handers would be. The question naturally pops out at once, If that is true why don't

Bill to Steve.

BY RING W. LARDNER.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Steve: I rec'd your letter & note what you says a bout you being hard up & why dont I pay you back what I borrowed off of you & I thot you was a friend of mine Steve & wouldent never pull nothing as cheap like that because you know I would of payed you long a go had I of been able. Dont worry a bout your money Steve you will get it O K only I wisht you hadent of said nothing a bout it because I thot you was a pal of mine & if your a scared you wont get your money & if you want to ack that way a bout it I will dig it up some wheres & send it to you by return male because I got plenty of good frends here where I can get the money off of them any time I want it & they would leave me have there shirt if I ask them for it thats how strong I am a round here so why should you worry a bout your money. But I will tell you what it is I am up against Steve & you will see where I cant save up no money for a wile yet until I get strat-end a round because it costs a hole lot more to live here Steve then down home espeshaly when a mans got to dress up all the wile & spend money which I got to do on acct. the little girl.

I guess I all ready told you what was it Im getting off of the girls old man for trying to sell his beer for him & its beer that you couldent get no body to take for a gift even if they was dieing of thist & they wasent nothing else to drink. any way he gives me $25.00 dollars per wk. & may be that sounds like a hole lot of money to you because its over twict as much is your geting but it aint no amt. of money at all for me because I got to dress good & take the girl a round to differunt places all the wile. Besides paying for my landery & my bord bill & where I sleep at & hare cuts shaves & so 4th. Heres what I spend evry wk. & you can see I aint saveing no money.

Loging	$2.50
Bord	$5.00
Meals	$5.00

AMERICAN NET MEN ARE PICKED AMONG 1914 STARS.

The first ten lawn tennis players of the world as arranged by A. W. Mavrogordato, a member of the English Davis cup team of 1914, includes but two American racquet wielders. Australasia has two; British isles, three; Germany, two, and France, one. This country has the honor of leading the list, for Maurice E. McLoughlin is placed in position No. 1 with A. F. Wilding and N. E. Brookes of Australasia tied for second place. R. Norris Williams, the other American named, is given fifth place, being ranked by McLoughlin, Wilding, Brookes, and Otto Froitzheim of Germany. The order of ranking, based on Mavrogordato's opinion of the merits of the players, is as follows:

1.—M. E. McLoughlin [America].
N. E. Brookes [Australasia].
2.—A. F. Wilding [Australasia].
4.—O. Froitzheim [Germany].
5.—R. N. Williams [America].
6.—J. C. Parke [British Isles].
7.—A. H. Lowe [British Isles].
8.—F. G. Lowe [British Isles].
9.—R. Kleinschoth [Germany].
10.—M. Decugis [France].

ALL-AMERICAN TEAM CHOSEN BY ECKERSALL

Maulbetsch Only Western Man to Gain Place on Star Eleven.

CRIMSON GETS THREE.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Picking an All-American football team this season is a much easier task than in former years. Despite the large number of elevens to be considered, the complicated offensive formations used by the various teams, and the hundred and one defensive styles used by coaches all over the United States, the writer has been able to select eleven men from this vast army of contestants who stand heads and shoulders above the rest of the field.

Before going into detail in regard to these honorary selections, it is necessary to say a few words about Capt. Brickley of the victorious Harvard eleven, who underwent an operation for appendicitis early in the season. This affliction kept him out of all the important games, although he got into the Yale struggle long enough to kick a goal after a touchdown. If Brickley had been in the game all season there would be no doubt as to his being placed on this selection. He was a member of the All-American teams in 1912 and 1913, and it is with regret that he cannot be honored this year.

Three Harvard Men Honored.

Despite the fact that Harvard had an evenly balanced team, only three Crimson warriors are placed on the honorary first eleven, because there were players on other teams who, if they had had the same support, would have been shining lights.

One western player has been awarded a berth on the first eleven and five westerners have been placed on the second team. The men selected from the west have performed above the average, and their stellar work is worthy of the highest commendation. Too much attention has been given eastern players in the past, and it is with an honest and impartial endeavor that an attempt is made by the writer for the first time to select two All-American teams.

Whitney Chosen Full Back.

Whitney of Dartmouth is chosen to play full back and is made captain of the first eleven. Although Whitney occupied a half back position most of the season, the Dartmouth style of play is such that the half backs are called upon to do just as much line plunging as the full backs. Such tactics are made possible by shift plays. The captain of the Hanover eleven has been a tower of strength, offensively and defensively all year.

Because of his effective work against Harvard, Maulbetsch of Michigan is placed at left half back. Playing his first year against big elevens, the Wolverine has been a heavy ground gainer. He amazed eastern critics by the way he tore through the strong Crimson line and off the tackles, while his work in other contests was just as spectacular. Although Maulbetsch did not weigh more than 155 pounds, he was just as effective as a man pounds heavier. He picked holes with amazing quickness and was the one player on the Michigan team who made ground when distance was needed.

Mahan Great Half Back.

No one will dispute Mahan's right to the other back position. After Brickley had been removed from the game the brunt of Harvard's ground gaining attempts fell to Mahan. He was a factor in deciding the Princeton and Yale games, while his work in other contests was above reproach. Like Maulbetsch, he was a strong defensive player.

Hardwick of Harvard and Merrillat of the Army are given the end berths. Each has been a strong cog in his respective machine. The work of Merrillat in the Navy game was a scintillating feature. Both covered punts to perfection and each was strong on defense.

The tackle positions are awarded Ballin of Princeton and Talbott of Yale. There is no disputing the right of the former to the position, but the latter, supported by a weak team, did not show to as good advantage as last year. Trumbull of Harvard played great football all season.

Pennock and Spears Guards.

Pennock of Harvard and Spears of Dartmouth should be almost unanimous choices for the guard positions. Both are heavy, active players, who have allowed few gains to be made through them all year. Aside from taking care of their own work, each has helped on the wings when end runs were attempted and both have made tackles when going down under punts. They have given invaluable assistance to the center when the latter was called upon to make hard passes, and each mixed in plays no matter in which part of the field the ball rested.

The pivot position is awarded to McEwan of the Army. He has been a tower of strength offensively and defensively to the soldier eleven, and next to Merrillat his playing was the striking feature of the Navy game.

FOUL GIVES GIBBONS BOUT.

Hudson, Wis., Dec. 5.—Mike Gibbons was returned a winner over Bob Moha in the second round of their scheduled ten round bout here last night, when Referee George Duffy disqualified the "Cave Man" for fouling. Twice in the second round Moha apparently deliberately fouled Gibbons. Referee Duffy and Commissioner William Hart of Eau Claire concurred that the Milwaukee boxer had fouled.

VOTE DOWN RULE FOR TWO SPORTS

Conference Athletic Heads Leave Matter Up to Each School.

Conference athletics will not be burdened with the two sport rule unless voted for by the individual colleges, according to a decision reached yesterday at a meeting of representatives of the "Big Nine" colleges in the Auditorium. It was the consensus of opinion of the representatives that the rule which would prohibit an athlete from participating in more than two sports was a matter for each college to decide.

"In other words," said T. F. Moran of Purdue, "we voted in favor of home rule. Any college which believes that participation in all sports interferes with the studies of the athlete may pass the two sport rule. Otherwise we were in favor of freedom for the athlete."

The idea of giving football players numbers so they may be distinguished while in play was recommended at the meeting. The plan, however, also was left to "home rule."

J. F. A. Pyre of Wisconsin was elected chairman and T. F. Moran of Purdue was made secretary at the election held at the meeting

The representatives present were J. F. A. Pyre, T. F. Moran, G. A. Goodenough, of Illinois; C. J. Sembawer of Indiana, Albion W. Small of Chicago, W. V. Pooley of Northwestern, James Paige of Minnesota, T. E. French of Ohio, and W. J. Titus of Iowa.

The conference representatives decided the places of the annual indoor track and tank meet and the outdoor track and field meet at their session in the afternoon. The indoor events will be held at Evanston March 19 and 20. The track and swimming championship events will cover two days. The annual championship track and field meet was awarded to the University of Illinois, to be held on the grounds of the new armory June 5. The tennis matches will be held in March at the University of Chicago.

After a joint session with the conference alumni's association the "Big Nine" delegates voted to appropriate $2,000 yearly, the sum to be used in purchasing one medal for each of the schools, to be awarded to the senior each year nominated by the faculty for the highest athletic and scholarship honors.

GIANTS WILL GO LIMIT TO STOP RUBE MARQUARD.

New York, Dec. 5.—The New York National league club will go slow in its efforts to prevent "Rube" Marquard from playing with John M. Ward's Brooklyn Federals. Tentative plans to carry the fight into the highest courts were to be laid today by the Giants' officials.

One of the first steps will be to lay Marquard's contract with the Giants before the best lawyer in the country to learn exactly to what extent the paper holds the big southpaw.

According to these temporary plans the Giants' attorneys will not go into court before the first of the year, and they may wait until the opening of the season and start the legal fight by asking for an injunction restraining Marquard from playing in Brooklyn. Similar injunctions will be asked to keep the latest jumper from appearing in any Federal league city.

Martin to Captain Gallaudet.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—Ashland Martin of Kentucky was elected today captain of the Gallaudet college football team of 1915. He has been a member of the team for three years and has alternated at guard and tackle.

POKER
by
DRURY UNDERWOOD

His barn burned down
And his horse went lame
And he lost nine cows
In a poker game.

THE designing reader will see that the involved topic has nothing to do with barns, horses, or cows. True, in these surroundings it might deal with horses of pedigree, but the narrative—briefly introduced—concerns poker.

Poker, in the estimation of the unworldly, is the U-9 of card games. It is, and it isn't. It might be, but it "ain't." The fiction writer can enlarge upon the chance hand where the game guy, sitting in as age man, raises before the draw on an immature flush or passes a pat hand blind.

This is reconcilable, because many of us many times have played 5 cent limit on the top of a trunk on clerks' salaries and have scrambled for an actual nickel put in the pot when the checks ran out. Poker was the first peek-in in young lives in the great game of bluff.

As a means of winning or losing money poker is not a determined factor today—at least in commercial gambling, where you buy stacks and try to outluck the man who sells you the chips. Nor was it ever comparable with the layout game of faro for spectacular play that might be watched.

A canvass of old time "gams," recently made, brought out the fact that none of them had ever played short cards to any great extent except in what are curiously termed whist clubs. These subsist on the rakeoff for showing two pairs or better, and while the sums wagered at times are fairly stiff, the winnings or losings are rarely sensational.

The "gams," professionally consulted, admitted that there undoubtedly has been high play at poker, but that mainly it has been in the hands of clubmen or those who engaged a room in a hotel and went to it for a forty-eight hour session beginning on a bath night. In public games—public as implied when faro and roulette flourished in Clark street—there was no room for poker, and its outlet was in minor spots with tables where the limit was $1 or $2.

Without making the topic engaging by knocking it, the subject of poker is peculiarly American. We had an American minister in London under President Grant—he was not an ambassador then—who was the author of a book on poker rules. The British were made to order for him and for the rules, justifying the statement that poker is peculiarly American.

One Englishman—Richard Proctor, the astronomer—became so much interested in poker that he compiled a table of logarithms on the chances of play. After having applied long study he could tell you offhand your chances of getting a third king in a four, five, or six hand game.

Those sturdy odds might deter the warrior who is $90 to the bad at 6 o'clock in the morning and with his collar off, but they were not determined for any such purpose. Astronomers have to be demons in mathematics, and one or two of them have been known to calculate the weight of the moon as a kind of an early morning exercise gallop intellectually.

This was Proctor. He sat in in a modest game, his noble mind crowded with figures as to his opportunities. An American drew one card to three of a kind, and Proctor never forgave him. He regarded this subterfuge as something out of line with scientific card play. Enough to outgeneral your opponent, but why deceive him?

It is narrated that in the original game of poker there was no draw. Hence, you may occasionally hear poker referred to by antiquarians as draw poker. Proctor might have been timid about gambling in this game without his logarithms, but yet might have been as well off. It was a cutthroat game and as a concession came the two varieties of draw and stud, the latter with the one card peek.

You can figure from Mississippi river steamboat literature the excitement when one colonel bet a thousand bales of cotton and another saw his thousand bales and raised him a couple of cotton pickers. Also we had in fancy the games of the far west when a player nursed four spades before the draw and bet a ranch on getting the fifth—this without any Proctor to tell him the hideous chances against him.

Another gamester saw the ranch and raised him 2,000 steers. Great stuff for fiction and live enough for friendly discussion right now.

In the recollection of the majority there is a series of well drawn and well illuminated sketches illustrating poker in Washington (with a Chinese diplomat setting in), in Chicago (with one of our old top boot wealthy men as a player), and in Darktown with the hot sport hugely raising the crafty elder.

Irvin Cobb in commenting upon the last picture ventured the opinion that poker is as nearly African as American in its appeal if you consider it upon a national basis. For, even in a "friendly" game you watch your neighbor.

Poker is a game of distrust. You do not think for a minute that the man next to you is going to crimp a card for a purpose, but you know such things have been done. Who will disregard the advantage that may go with an exposed card? The small things count.

Whether the limit is two bits or the ceiling, the trained player usually hugs his hand so that he has to back away on the hind legs of his chair to see for himself alone what the fortunes of the deck may be.

Thus Cobb talked in support of his theory and told a story in character. Four Kentucky negroes were to play and one of them approached another in advance to frame a conspiracy. He was a card shark, according to his own statement, and could deal from the top or bottom with equal facility.

With him the usual pack was a plaything and it was a trifle to stack it. However, he needed another to make the play natural and plentiful. With four good hands out, there should be a booster who knew that he held the master cards and could keep raising accordingly.

The scheme as proposed was that the dealer was to pass out to the first player four jacks, to the next four queens, and to the third four kings. Number three was the darkey who was to bring home the bacon. The dealer in his advance statement did not say whether he would be in the pot or not—causing that distrust referred to. The unwilling conspirator reviewed the possibilities for a killing and pondered.

"Fine," he said, after reflection, "but with the fo' kings can't you give me a confidential ace?"

Poker has passed in trolley car communities somewhat in the favor of bridge and "rummy." Its stories will never run out, however, for (being typically American) it is not always played twice alike—with all due regard to Richard Proctor and his logarithms.

MISSISSIPPI BIRDS WIN COCKING MAIN AT MEMPHIS.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Shelton and Allen of Port Gibson, representing the state of Mississippi, won first in a big cocking main held near here which ended today. Nine southern states were represented, but four entered in the main tournament. Kentucky was second and Tennessee and Louisiana tied for third place. The affair was kept as private as possible, and those interested would give out no information. It is not known how many fights Mississippi won. It was stated to be the biggest main held since one several years ago at Monroe, La., which was raided by the authorities.

ST. JOHN'S WINS FROM DE PAUL BY SAFETY, 8-6

Easterners Gain Victory on Fumbled Ball in Last Period.

LOCALS START WELL.

BY PREP.

St. John's preparator school of Danvers, Mass., crowned a year of eastern victories over the west by defeating De Paul academy of Chicago, 8 to 6, at the White Sox ball park yesterday. The contest without a doubt was the most stubbornly contested of the year.

After playing the superior game in the first period, De Paul weakened, and in a series of rushes during the third quarter lost the advantage gained by a touchdown previously made in the same period. With the score tied, as neither was successful on the punt out after touchdown, St. John's came back with renewed confidence. A punting duel followed. St. John's was more fortunate, as it had the wind. The exchanges forced De Paul closer to its goal. A loss followed an unsuccessful end run. Then the locals were forced to punt again.

Fumble Loses the Game.

Standing behind his own goal Grundman received the ball, fumbled, then fell on the oval two yards back of the line. Speedy use of his brains might have averted the safety, but apparently he seemed bewildered. During the confusion two St. John players pounced upon him for the two points. Thereafter it was in favor of the invaders. When the game closed they were threatening to score another touchdown.

Miller was the only player injured, and he left the game with a badly sprained wrist.

Defensively the contest was brilliantly fought, but offensively each team proved weak, especially on forward passes, only three going through complete in nearly twenty trials. The wind no doubt was the disturbing element.

De Paul Strong at Start.

The opening quarter was played between the twenty yard lines, with De Paul having a slight advantage, as it made five first downs to St. John's four. Only one forward pass was attempted, and this was intercepted by Kearns of De Paul, who returned the ball thirty yards. A line plunge and Grundman's end run added ten yards just before the quarter closed with De Paul in possession of the ball on St. John's thirty-two yards line.

The half closed with neither scoring, but again De Paul showed to advantage, gaining first down twice, while St. John's failed to make its ten yards out of four consecutive attempts. De Paul attempted the forward pass game, but three times the ball was grounded. Near the middle of the period De Paul worked the ball to the eighteen yard line, where, from a fake place kick formation a forward pass was attempted. The ball missed the receiver by a foot, going to St. John's on a touchback.

The Chicago boys tackled fiercely and their line was impenetrable. Five times the Bay state team was thrown for losses from three to ten yards, forcing the visitors to punt three times. Kearns featured offensively with three gains, the longest being nine yards.

Each Score in the Third.

One touchdown with no goal gave each team six points when the third quarter was concluded. Raab received St. John's kickoff and returned twenty yards. Five consecutive line plunges netted twelve yards and then Keegan completed the first successful forward pass, gaining fifteen yards. Kearns skirted left end for nine yards. Raab failed to gain on a try at center. Manley plunged through left tackle for the necessary yard to make De Paul's touchdown. The kickout after touchdown failed.

The easterners came back strong, tying the score. Smith on the first play after the kickoff hit left end for twelve yards, then followed with fifteen more on a forward pass. De Paul then intercepted the ball on a forward pass, but lost the ball on a fumble on the next play. Six yards through left tackle and Smith's twelve yard run around right end gained the touchdown. McCarthy failed to kick goal.

Punts Help St. John's to Win.

St. Johns forged ahead near the close of the fourth period following a successful exchange of punts. Neither team was able to gain consecutively and as a result both were forced to kick. With the wind strong in favor of the easterners they gained repeatedly with each exchange. On the last punt preceding the safety which won the game De Paul was downed on its thirteen yard line. A five yard loss then placed the ball on the eight yard line. Grundman elected to punt, fumbled, and was downed behind his own goal line. The play in the remainder of this period was all in favor of St. Johns. When the half ended the ball was in possession of the Danvers team on De Paul's eight yard line.

COBB WITH .368 TOPS AMERICAN FOR NINTH YEAR

Collins Second, Twenty-four Points Behind; Fournier Leads Locals.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

After completing his ninth season as a major league regular Ty Cobb, the Detroit star, seems certain of establishing the greatest batting career in baseball. The averages given out officially yesterday by the American league show Cobb out in front, twenty-four points ahead of his nearest competitor with a mark of .368.

In the nine years during which he has been a regular on the Tigers Cobb has been the real leader in hitting each season. Once, in 1910, Joe Jackson topped him by two points, but the latter came into the league in time to play only twenty games. Once Dode Criss of the St. Louis club beat him out. That was in 1908, but Criss appeared in only forty games and nearly always only as a pinch hitter.

Cob's Lowest Mark .320.

Cobb's lowest mark in the nine years was made in 1906, his first season as a regular, when he hit .320, but still he led them all. His highest mark was in 1911, when he slammed the ball for an average of .420. In the following year he went through with a mark of .410. The records show him below the .300 mark only once in the American league, and that was in 1905, when he joined Detroit in time to get into forty-one games. In those games his average was only .240, but it was before he held a regular position on the team.

Cobb still is a young man, his age being only 28, and indications are that he will be good for eight or ten years to come. If he continues to swat the ball for the next eight years as he has in the last eight, he will establish a life mark that will eclipse all others since the game began.

Eddie Collins Second.

The nearest man to the great Tyrus this season was Eddie Collins of the champion Athletics, with a mark of .344. Tris Speaker of Boston and Joe Jackson of Cleveland were tied for third honors with .338.

One of the reasons why the White Sox landed in the second division was visible in the averages, for they showed only one man in the .300 hitting class, that being the young Frenchman, Jack Fournier, who finished with the proud mark of .311. Bobby Roth, who joined the team in time to play thirty-four games, was second among the locals with .294, and "Shano" Collins and Ray Schalk were up in the strong class with marks of .274 and .270 respectively.

Weaver Fails with Stick.

None of the other Sox players displayed any batting prowess, even Capt. Weaver, who led the team the previous season, falling down to .246. Blackburne, the regular second baseman, landed only .222 and Breton, who played at third longer than any other man, was down to .212. Demmitt and Bodie, who did most of the outfielding with Collins, reached marks of .258 and .229, respectively.

The Athletics led in team batting by many points, their average being .272. Detroit was second with .258, while the Sox were down in seventh place, only New York being below them, with an average of .239.

Maisel Chief Base Stealer.

Little Fritz Maisel of the Yankees outclasses all others in base stealing, his total for 149 games being 74, regardless of the fact that his batting average was only .239. The averages show that he drew seventy-six bases on balls. Ownie Bush of the Tigers proved to be the leading walter with a total of 112 walks, while Eddie Collins drew 97 and Tris Speaker 77.

Frank Baker of the Athletics and Sam Crawford of the Tigers were tied for the honor of hitting home runs, each having eight to his credit.

MAJOR LEAGUE TEAMS PICK TRAINING CAMPS FOR 1915.

Although the echoes of the world's series are just dying away, the magnates, managers, and players are already planning for the 1915 campaign. Regardless of the possibility of sensational changes in ownership and circuit, arrangements for the spring training trip of a number of the clubs have already been made. The Chicago Nationals will work out the winter stiffness at Tampa, Fla., beginning on March 1; the St. Louis Nationals have selected Hot Wells, Tex., as their spring camp, and the New York Nationals will return to Marlin, Tex., for the third season.

The Boston Nationals, champions of the baseball universe, have decided to prepare for the 1915 pennant race at Hot Springs, Ark., and will have company in the Boston Americans and some of the Pittsburgh Nationals, for a time at least. The Pirates will spend a portion of the time at Dawson Springs, Ky., while the Detroit Americans are scheduled to return to Gulfport, Miss., reporting late in February.

The Philadelphia Nationals are expected to limber up at St. Petersburg, Fla., and the other clubs have either signed renewals for their former camps or are selecting new training quarters.

CENTRAL'S PLAYERS GO UP.

A BOTTLED DELIGHT

Club Cocktails

THERE is a vast difference between a mild degree of pleasure and a full degree of delight.

The difference between the bartender's guess-work—quite frequently palate-rebelling mixture—and the smooth, mellow, pleasurable cocktail, is embodied in every bottle of CLUB COCKTAILS—unvarying, always the same choice liquors, always the same identical gratifying flavor.

Measured to the drop, aged in wood, blended of fine, matured liquors. Made in ten varieties, each a bottle of delight.

THREE A. A. CLUBS SUCCEED IN 1914

Two Others Break Even on the Season, While Three Towns Lose Money.

President T. M. Chivington of the American association, who is back at league headquarters after his wedding trip, asserts that three clubs showed a balance on the sunny side of the cash ledger for the season of 1914; that two clubs broke even or better; that two more clubs found the red ink figures in the wrong column, but not discouragingly large considering the year, and that the eighth city, St. Paul, undoubtedly was a heavy loser.

While willing to go thus far in a general statement, Prexy Chivington refuses to step any farther into details—if he knows—as to the amounts which should be credited or debited to the eight clubs composing the association circuit.

A. A. Magnates Optimistic.

In marked contrast to the attitude of several weeks ago, the association magnates, including Chivington, are putting on a cheerful front and have joined the national class in optimism. Perhaps the reports which have radiated from the headquarters of organized ball that the Feds are on the shoals have something to do with this seeing of silver lined clouds, although the major minors assert not.

Recurring to the original classification of financial winners and losers, Milwaukee, Louisville and Columbus are named as the fortunate trio which accumulated coin in a bad season. It used to be fashionable to refer to Milwaukee as a bad baseball city, but even in those days of slander Prexy Tom argued that the Brewer fans would respond if given a winner. This argument seems to be borne out by the attendance during the régime of Harry Clark's champions.

Louisville was a pennant possibility for the greater part of the season and the interest aroused came during the months when the baseball fan takes his favorite team most seriously and likes to dream of baseball pennants. Columbus also was up in the running and in addition is known as a good baseball city.

Coming now to the cities which broke even or better. Cleveland responds in this class, which possibly may cause surprise. The Napettes started most dismally, but later developed a winning streak which caused a rubbing of eyes not only in Cleveland but all around the circuit. This surprise was happily reflected at the turnstile. Moreover, the overhead expense was low because the Nap park was used.

Even Break at Minneapolis.

The Cantillons at Minneapolis are credited with breaking even. This would seem some break, especially as Twin City fans had become accustomed to the pennant, much as had the American league fans of Philadelphia. A town surfeited with winners usually gives a cold reception to its slumping heroes, so if Brother Mike and Brother Joe got an even break Minneapolis deserves much credit.

Kansas City lost money, and so did Indianapolis and St. Paul. Owner Tebeau asserts his deficit was not heavy, but Magnate McGill of the Indians mourns for about $40,000, according to his own estimate. To account for this figure President Chivington thinks park improvements and purchased players were included. Anyway, the money is gone. St. Paul's losses have been estimated as high as $50,000. They were high enough so the syndicate of business men is stuttering before exercising its option to purchase Owner Lennon's stock.

In commenting on the outlook for 1915 President Chivington says:

"The American association is as well fortified for another year of warfare, if such it proves to be, as any league in the country. We are not worrying about the Feds, however, but trying to strengthen our teams and fulfill our purpose of giving clean, wholesome amusement. Our clubs are amply financed by men of means, most of whom have independent fortunes outside of their baseball investments.

"As a matter of fact it is doubtful whether the Feds hurt us much in the matter of attendance except so far as the presence of a third league unsettled conditions and hurt baseball in general. Both our Indianapolis and Kansas City clubs were affected more by their positions in the race than by independent league opposition. We anticipate a prosperous season, with affairs satisfactorily adjusting themselves in St. Paul, where a change is reported as likely to occur."

Baseball Accidents for Season of 1914.

THIRTY-FIVE deaths and 918 injuries have been caused by baseball during the year 1914, according to records kept by J. R. Vickery, 1204 Wabash avenue, who has made a study of the effect of the national pastime on the life and health of young America. The list of fatalities follows:

CHINESE ATHLETES COMING.

D. W. Walker of the Anglo-Chinese college at Tientsin has written the Amateur Athletic union in New York to inquire if a team composed of Chinese and belonging to the Pekin A. A. would be welcomed for the championship of the organization next year. He was informed that all nations will be eligible to compete at the events during the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco next year.

GEORGE SUTTON FINDS A SPRING

Billiard Player Discovers Water That Keeps Him in Health.

ON FARM IN MICHIGAN.

George Sutton, one of the world's most famous billiard players, doesn't claim to have found the fountain of perpetual youth. He wasn't even looking for it, nor is he in any present need of it. But he is the possessor of a wonderful substitute.

Recently Sutton purchased a farm near Hartford, Mich., and the farm had a spring on it, but Sutton was more interested in the land than the spring. It was a long time before the billiard champion discovered that the water of the spring possessed rare mineral properties. His attention was first called to this fact because the stock on the farm refused to drink the water. This led to an investigation and then an analysis. The result proved that the waters of the spring were rich in minerals and wonderful in health producing powers.

Started as "Pool" Star.

Before becoming a billiard player, George Sutton had won many honors on the pool table. For a number of years he held various titles at the pocket billiard game, and it was his belief in his versatility as an expert with the cue that induced him to try billiards. His success was almost immediate, and he soon afterward succeeding in holding the titles in both the 18-1 and 18-2 styles of the game.

On account of ill health he was compelled to abandon billiards, and for two years his physical condition alarmed his friends. He attributes his recovery to a long rest and the use of the waters of the spring on his Michigan farm. In fact, he says that it is the drinking of this water which now keeps him in condition as a billiard player.

Sutton was the first to give the water a thorough test. Of course he did this after being assured by his physician that the water could not possibly have any injurious effects upon the system. Now he never drinks anything but water from his wonderful spring. To this fact he attributes his remarkable state of health.

Boosts His Spring.

"There is no water in all the world like it," said Sutton the other day. "The doctors tell me that it is superior to the famous springs of Germany, similar to the celebrated waters at Olympia, Ky., but wholly different from the springs of southern Indiana. I have found it an admirable means for reducing weight without the slightest ill effects, and since I have been using it the improvement in my health has been hardly less than marvelous. When away from home I have arranged to have the water shipped to me, so that I am never without it."

Sutton belongs to the older class of cue experts, and is a member of the Champion Billiard Players' league. He will be seen in exhibition games and championship matches in this city during the season, when he will meet the other members of the league.

COURTNEY FAVORS CHANGE IN LENGTH OF THE RACES.

Coach Charles E. Courtney of the Cornell university oarsmen, who has just celebrated his 65th birthday and who is serving his thirtieth year as rowing instructor at Ithaca, favors reducing the annual Poughkeepsie classic races from four to three miles. Members of the Cornell faculty also favor the change and the matter will be taken up by the Intercollegiate Rowing association at its next meeting.

STEWART FOOTBALL CAPTAIN

Jacksonville, Ill., Dec. 5.—Fred Stewart has been elected captain of the 1915 football team of Illinois college. Stewart played quarter back on this year's team.

Motorcycle Notes.

Peoria, Ill., is planning to leave nothing undone to land the 1915 convention of the Federation of American Motorcyclists.

Frank J. Patrick, a rural mail carrier of Utica, S. D., says that he averages 12,000 miles a year on his motorcycle.

Fort Wayne, Ind., has joined the ranks of cities using motorcycles in their police department.

The Canadian government has ordered 500 American motorcycles to equip the dispatch riders of the troops they are raising to send to England.

President A. B. Coffman of the Federation of American Motorcyclists is making a business trip to the west coast and will visit many of the motorcycle clubs in the cities en route.

With his wife and 4 year old daughter riding in a side car, J. H. Needham of Bristow, Ia., has just completed a 600 mile motorcycle trip through Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

S. C. Boggs, engineer for the deaf and blind institute of St. Augustine, Fla., has just returned from a 1,000 mile motorcycle trip to his home at Seneca, S. C.

Lieut. Commander Max. B. Horton of the English submarines is an enthusiastic motorcyclist. In times of peace he spends much time on the two wheeler.

Joe Esler of Quincy, Ill., the motorcycle globe trotter, has not given up the 50,000 mile world tour which he had planned for this fall, but expects to start out as soon as the European troubles are settled.

A campaign to increase the membership to 500 is being waged by the Portland [Ore.] Motorcycle club. The club now has 220 live members, but it is the hope that by New Year's day this will be raised to 500.

CHARLEY MORIN TAKES CUE LEAD

Charley Morin, who is representing Weeghman's rooms in the Interstate Three Cushion league, advanced to first place by taking three of the first games he played on his first trip away from home. John Kling, who was not in action, remains in second position, while young Ellis of Cleveland is third. Jess Lean of Flenner's rooms lost the game he played against Morin and fell to sixth place.

Pierre Maupome, the Mexican expert, who is representing Allinger's rooms in Philadelphia, set a new record for high run for the league, getting nine in his match at Philadelphia with Ed Helm of Cleveland. Morin also tied the low game record with fifty-one innings. The next local game will be between Morin and Lean, who play at Weeghman's rooms tomorrow night. Standing:

TITLE IN BASKETBALL NOW ILLINOIS' AMBITION.

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Illinois, with the conference championships in football, track, and baseball at its belt, is looking enviously at basketball now. With the Illini quintet that finished second last season intact and with plenty of new material, it seems likely Coach Jones will make the strongest kind of a bid for first in the "Big Nine" race.

This is Coach Ralph Jones' third season at Illinois. His first year with the Illini, with indifferent material, made a fair showing. Last year, despite prospects that were far from brilliant, Jones made a race for the championship and finished runnerup. Now his admirers believe he will turn the trick. The schedule follows:

Dec. 9—Arkansas Aggies at Illinois.
Jan. 11—Indiana at Illinois.
Jan. 16—Purdue at Illinois.
Jan. 23—Ohio State at Illinois.
Jan. 26—Indiana at Bloomington.
Feb. 8—Wisconsin at Illinois.
Feb. 13—Wisconsin at Madison.
Feb. 15—Minnesota at Minneapolis.
Feb. 23—Chicago at Illinois.
Feb. 27—Purdue at Lafayette.
March 1—Ohio at Columbus.
March 6—Chicago at Chicago.
March 8—Minnesota at Illinois.

TITLE GIVEN TO VANNEMAN.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 5.—Edgar Vanneman, center of the Illinois Normal university football team this year, has been elected captain for 1915.

RIGHT AND LEFT HANDERS RATED

Sanborn Talks of Relative Power of Two Kinds of Slab Workers.

the managers grab all left handers? The answer is that there aren't so many good southpaws as there are right handed pitchers, and a second rate left hander is worse than the same grade of northpaw, because so much more erratic.

The good left handed pitcher must necessarily be able to field his position, and he has a big advantage over the right hander when there are men on bases because he can hold them closer to their stations. This is particularly true of first base and is not true of third base. But the slabman who can hold runners on first so close that his catcher can nail all except the wisest or speediest of them going to second has a lot on the pitcher who cannot help his backstop flag the stealers at second. There is little need of holding runners on third except occasionally.

Might Develop Batting Eyes.

It probably is true that by the end of a playing season the left handed batsmen would have learned to swat left handed curves as fluently as they can hit right handed offerings if they saw nothing else. At least they would hit the southpaw stuff as readily as right handed batsmen smash right handed delivery. The chief reason assigned for the effectiveness of the average left hander against southpaw batsmen is unfamiliarity. The swatters don't see as many left handed curves in a month or a season as they do right handed benders. If the proportion should be reversed it is the opinion of baseball men that right handed pitchers would become more effective with the same amount of ability than they can be now, because batsmen today are so accustomed to facing men who work with their north wings.

Here's another guess: If all the major league pitchers should learn to work left handed this winter the leading hitters next season would be right handed batsmen, and a lot of lads who stand on the first base side of home plate would switch before the season ended.

The Automobile Problem

It Is Solved by the Beautiful, Strong Allen 34

"Hello, Billy, old man. How's the boy?"

"Fine and dandy. How are you?"

"If I felt any better I'd have to take something for it. Bought that automobile yet?"

"No. I've decided not to get one."

"What's the matter? No bad investment, I hope."

"No, it isn't that; but I've made up my mind that I don't care to get a car till I can find one that I'll not be ashamed to ride in."

A Friendly Tip.

"Say, have you seen this new ALLEN 34?"

"No."

"Well, go and look at it. If you want a real automobile without waiting to pay a fancy price, there's the car for you."

"What does it cost?"

"Only $895."

"Oh, I've looked at a lot of cars around that price, but I haven't seen any yet that I'd care to have. I don't want my friends to look back with pity at me after they have driven past in their big, swift cars."

"When you drive out in an ALLEN 34 your friends are not going to go past in their big, expensive cars. The ALLEN 34 is equipped with an ALLEN motor which develops 37 horsepower. The car is just the right weight for the motor, and you get strength, speed, durability and safety. It's a combination that can't be beaten."

A Dark Suspicion.

"All that's very interesting, but I suppose the car is a homely thing that looks cheap."

"That's the wonderful part of it. It's as fine a looking car as you will see anywhere. The ALLENS say it puts you in the automobile aristocracy, and they are right. It's an aristocratic looking car with beautiful lines, all the latest improvements that you will find in the most expensive automobiles, plenty of room for five passengers—a car that's good enough in every way for any man who appreciates what is fine and beautiful and durable."

"You talk as if you were getting a commission on this car."

Here is the Answer.

"No, I'm not. I'm talking as I do because I'm a friend of yours. Send to the ALLEN MOTOR COMPANY of Fostoria, Ohio, for their booklet, 'Automobile Elimination.' The ALLENS have solved the big automobile problem."

"What do you mean by the automobile problem?"

"I mean that the man who wants a car which is not needlessly extravagant in price has up to this time been held back because he doesn't want to drive a wash-boiler on wheels. The ALLEN 34 combines elegance with speed, strength, safety, durability and economy."

EXPERT LAUDS FOOTBALL OF MIDDLE WEST

Patterson Claims All-Western Team One of Best in Recent Years.

BY E. C. PATTERSON.

[In Collier's for Dec. 12.]

Western football has put another fine year to its credit—a year of exceptional interest and keen rivalry—a year of growth and development and of clean sportsmanship throughout.

Out of all the rivalries of the season, Coach Zuppke's alert Illinois eleven came marching through its schedule as undefeated champion of the west with one of the most consistent machines the western game has known for many, many years. Illinois not only won every game played, but each victory was established in clean cut, decisive fashion by good scores, leaving no doubt at the finish that the better team had established its supremacy.

Alert and Consistent Line.

The swift rise of Illinois to the top of the field was due to several factors. The team had an alert and consistent, but not an especially powerful line. The backfield was good, but above the ordinary in only two positions, with Pogue, a star halfback, and Clark, a fine field general, at quarter. Pogue, in fact, was the only outstanding star of the Illinois lineup, but the readiness and aggressiveness of the entire eleven deserves high praise, for each man entered into the spirit of machine play and each man did his full share of the work—and did it well.

But, after all, the greatest amount of credit for the Illinois canter down the championship way must be given to Coach Zuppke. This versatile instructor took charge two years ago when the football fortunes of Illinois were certainly not at the highest. He not only knew football, but he was a great believer in the open game, and above all this he had the confidence and respect of his men.

Illinois Best at Open Game.

The results show, for at the end of his second campaign he had the best eleven in the west—an eleven that had mastered the open game better than any rival and one that was better grounded in rudimentary play. Zuppke soon developed an attack that carried power through the line and speed outside of the tackle and around the ends. It was an attack that Chicago, Wisconsin, and Minnesota failed to stop, for it came both fast and hard and was always alert for any opening that might yawn at any time.

Briefly, Zuppke had the knack of harnessing the individual into a machine—and into a machine that had both force and versatility. He is to be congratulated on his rapid rise to power and his ability within two years to crush the conference big three who have ruled the conference so long in turn.

Gophers in Second Place.

Minnesota must be placed second below Illinois. Coach Williams at the season's start had only raw, inexperienced material to work with. The only outlook was decidedly blue. Yet by good coaching he whipped this material into a very fair machine—good enough to beat both Wisconsin and Chicago, and to finish the year with only one defeat, and that from the unbeaten conference title winner. Minnesota's followers certainly had much to be proud of when the complete record of their team was considered and the big improvement noted in game after game.

With the rise of Illinois the two big disappointments were Michigan and Chicago, generally among the strongest. At the start of the season Coach Stagg was stricken with rheumatism and so was unable to follow up his men and to put in his full time at the front. Added to this piece of hard luck his material in the main was only mediocre, and injury after injury prevented many of his best men from reaching top form or giving their best work. These injuries forced him into constant changes and robbed him of the value of Dolly Gray, one of his most promising players. So Chicago, after all, was up against an uncanny fate and fortunes of war that were not to be beaten down.

Michigan's Eleven Green.

Michigan's fall was another hard blow to western football hopes, as the Wolverines dropped three of their four eastern games. But Coach Yost had a green eleven in the main, and Galt, one of his star backs, was unable to play through an injury to his knee. Green material plus injuries to Galt, Splawn, and Hughitt cut down Michigan's strength in the early contests, but after the Harvard and Pennsylvania battles a much better showing was expected against Cornell.

Yost's team did exceptionally well against Harvard's powerful lineup, holding the Crimson to one touchdown and rushing the ball through the power of Maulbetsch almost two yards to Harvard's one. But the Cornell defeat came as a hard blow to Yost's expectations. Maulbetsch alone kept Michigan out of a deeper rut.

Notre Dame also fell off badly in her intersectional play, the loss of Dorais and Rockne especially crippling her open game and breaking up her attack. So where Michigan and Notre Dame together won five straight from the east last season, this fall they won only two out of six starts—and these two victories were scored against weak teams. But neither Michigan nor Notre Dame was anything like the best eleven in the west, as the season's record shows.

Wisconsin, with material none too well balanced, did fairly well—as well as could have been expected from what Coach Juneau had to work with. It was a most striking coincidence that the four teams—Minnesota, Chicago, Michigan, and Wisconsin—which as a rule stand at the front of western football, were all well below normal strength.

Good Season for Nebraska.

Nebraska had a fruitful season. Probably its most striking performance was a 24 to 0 victory over the Michigan Aggies, who had held Michigan to a 3 to 0 score the week before. But this Michigan-M. A. C. contest had been a most severe one and had taken a good deal out of both teams. However, Nebraska's win was by such a big margin that no doubt could be entertained of the strength of its eleven.

South Dakota and Iowa also did their share of first class work, showing that football strength and skill were scattered over a wide area through the west and not confined to any one section.

In selecting an all-western eleven this season, there is as usual, a world of good material to pick from.

This is especially true of the back field, where any number of first class players are to be found. But it so happens that for the four backs there are four candidates who stand out well above their mates. Maulbetsch of Michigan and Pogue of Illinois stand alone as half backs.

Other good half backs were Gray of Chicago, Pliska of Notre Dame, Hamilton of Minnesota, and Macomber of Illinois. The last two named are placed upon the second all-western eleven for their consistent work all year.

In selecting a full back I failed to consider either Eichenlaub of Notre Dame or Julian of the Michigan Agricultural college. Both are stars. But they have both played four years, and it is hardly fair to compare three year men with four year players, who have had the advantage of that much added experience. And three years is generally recognized as the limit of play.

So, with these two not considered, Solon of Minnesota, the smashing line plunger, is far beyond all competition.

Clark, the heady Illinois field general, is picked for quarter back to round out the back field. And he is a worthy mate to work with Solon, Maulbetsch, and Pogue.

Hughitt of Michigan, Russell of Chicago and Hightower of Northwestern were all first class men, Russell ranking second to Clark by a narrow margin.

Des Jardien Best at Center.

With an all star backfield of speed, driving power, and general ability selected, the choice of an aggressive line is next in order. There were several good centers in the west—namely, Des Jardien of Chicago, Rosenthal of Minnesota, and Raynsford of Michigan. But of these Des Jardien has the call with something to spare. He was always alert and aggressive, and a star of the first magnitude, although at times slumping a trifle from carrying the added burden of the captaincy. Rosenthal wins second place, with Raynsford close behind.

For guards we have Keeler of Wisconsin, Routh of Purdue, Chapman of Illinois, Stegeman of Chicago, and Bachman of Notre Dame among others.

Routh did exceptional work all the season. He deserves a place beyond any doubt for his many capabilities. Keeler did fine work in Wisconsin's line, and while used at tackle this season, rightfully belongs at guard, where he played two years. So Keeler and Routh are picked.

Long List of Tackles.

The list of good tackles is long—above the western yearly average. Included are Buck of Wisconsin, Halligan of Nebraska, Kirk of Iowa, Townley of Minnesota, McHale of Michigan and Shull of Chicago. Buck, with Keeler, practically did the work of all six men in the Wisconsin line. He was above any tackle in the west, both in offensive and defensive play. He played at loose center on defense, where he was able to range widely and show his speed.

Next to Buck, Halligan of Nebraska comes above Kirk, Townley, and Shull as a fast, strong, and aggressive charger—one not easily boxed or swept out of the play, and a good man at breaking through. There could be no tackle weakness certainly with Buck and Halligan at work.

Graves of Illinois was the best end in the west. Although below normal weight, this young star was of unusual value. He was faster than the proverbial flash, a sure tackler, and a good man at sizing up a play. And withal he was one of the best men in the game at receiving the forward pass.

So both on offense and defense Graves deserves first choice. With Graves must be placed Cherry of Ohio State. Cherry is heavier than Graves, and not quite so fast, but he is a strong, natural end, a hard man to circle or to elude. Huntington of Chicago, Stavrum of Wisconsin, Squier of Illinois, and Gunderson of Iowa are all good and worthy of praise.

This all-western eleven would be one of the best in years—a strong, fast brainy team, capable of meeting almost any game and equally capable of offering a wide variety of attack.

Gossip for Whist Players

An unexpected play by an adversary should always lead a player to search for the motive. The following deal is an example: The hands:

H—J.
C—A, 8, 6, 2.
D—10, 8, 7.

S—A, 10, 4.
H—K, 6, 4.
C—K, J, 9, 4.
D—K, 9, 2.

S—9, 5, 3.
H—8, 3.
C—Q, 7, 5.
D—A, Q, J, 6, 3.

S—Q, 6.
H—A, Q, 10, 9, 7, 5, 2.
C—10, 3.
D—5, 4.

Score, 0—0. East dealt. The bidding:

	1st round.	2d round.
East	1 diamond	pass
South	2 hearts	pass
West	2 no-trump
North	pass

North had the opening lead. The play:

Tricks	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	H J	H 8	H 2	H K
2	D 7	D 3	D 4	D K
3	D 8	D J	D 5	D 9
4	D 10	D A	3 C	D 2
5	6 C	D Q	10 C	H 4
6	2 C	D 6	H 5	4 S
7	8 C	Q C	6 S	4 C

After the seventh trick west realized that one more trick would fulfill his contract and promptly took that trick with the ace of spades, fearing that the opponents would take the next club lead and make the remaining hearts. He should have asked himself why west did not take the queen of clubs and lead a heart, and the obvious answer would have been that east had no heart and that it was safe to take another round of clubs, which would have given west four odd and the game.

Duluth, Minn.—[To the Editor.]—We have had a discussion in our club on several points in auction.

Four hearts is bid and doubled. The adversaries take five tricks, but make one revoke. The declarant takes three tricks as penalty, making game and rubber. Adversaries contend that they should still count the 200 penalty they would have been entitled to if they had retained the five tricks. Partner of declarant, who is scorer, asks declarant which penalty he will take, the 100 points or the three tricks. Is this a proper question and are adversaries entitled to the 200 penalty when declarant takes the three tricks?

When partner of leader against a no trump declaration holds, say, the 4, 3, 2 of his partner's suit should he play from the top down or from the bottom up? Holding a sequence, say, from the deuce to the eight, seven cards, is there any way of showing this long holding? C. N. W.

Ans.—In the first case the adversaries were not entitled to 200 penalty, nor any penalty. The dummy had a right to ask his partner which penalty he would enforce for the revoke.

Holding deuce, trey, and four of partner's suit a player should play the lowest to the first trick and continue playing in that order. With more than three he should play the third best and play up, preserving his lowest cards. With a holding of seven, the adversaries could not have more than two altogether and one lead should certainly disclose the situation.

Marquette, Mich.—[To the Editor.]—At auction bridge the man to my left bid one no trump. It passed all around and I led. All the cards in my hand that could possibly count were the ace, king, and three of hearts; the king, queen, ten, and two of spades. I led the king of hearts to show my only reëntry card and then led my small spade, intending to show my long suit. Please advise me if this play was radically wrong. P. J. O'D.

Answer—The lead of the king of hearts was radically wrong. Such a play is proper only when it is certain that one lead will establish the leader's long suit. For instance, had the leader held the knave of spades in addition to those named he could afford to lead the king of hearts and follow with the king of spades, as he would be certain to have the ace of hearts remaining after his spade suit was established.

Huntington, Ind.—[To the Editor.]—Is it a good or bad rule to use in the game of bridge whist, "Always return your partner's lead"? I contend it entirely depends upon your own hand and the dummy whether you should return the lead or not. Am I right or wrong? Kindly answer through your Sunday's column and oblige N. C.

Answer—It is usually but by no means always good play to return your partner's suit. In many cases it would be silly to do so. The cards in the dummy, the strength shown by your partner, and the desirability of another suit must always be considered.

CLEAR TITLE TO ILLINOIS TEAM

Eckersall Puts Gophers Next and Places Maroon in Tie with Wisconsin.

Conference Football Rating

9—Northwestern.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Represented by an evenly balanced team which was effectively coached, the University of Illinois is entitled without question to the championship of the western conference or "Big Nine" colleges. Minnesota has an equally undisputed claim to second position, while Chicago and Wisconsin are tied for third place in the annual rating.

Starting the season with a nucleus of fourteen players who had won their letters the preceding year, Coach Zuppke at Urbana did not lose any time in whipping the Illini into shape. The eleven was prepared for each succeeding game, and it was taught to play just enough football to win. By this system of development the team was at its best when Wisconsin was met in the final struggle of a successful season.

Illini Strong in Every Way.

The Illini were well versed in all departments of football. The team could play the old game with the same success as the new style, and it had a kicker in Macomber who could boot the ball forty and fifty yards and was dangerous by the field goal route inside of the forty yard mark.

In Half Back Pogue and Quarter Back Clark Illinois was represented by two of the best open field runners in the conference. Each was dangerous as soon as he got started, and both picked holes with surprising quickness. Macomber could run the ends or hit the line, and Full Back Schobinger was always good for the necessary yards to make first down on the fourth attempt.

Generally speaking, the team was one of the most evenly balanced seen in the west in years. It was strong defensively, and even the heavy Minnesota backs were unable to make consistent headway through the Illinois forward wall. The team made the long trip to Minneapolis and decisively defeated the Gophers in the game which virtually gave it the championship.

Gophers Sure of Second Place.

Because of its victories over Wisconsin and Chicago and its defeats of other conference elevens, Minnesota is awarded second place. The Gophers lost only one game, that to Illinois. The Gophers showed gradual improvement, and at the end of the season were a strong aggregation. Considering the green material which Coach Williams had to select from, the eleven made an excellent showing. As most of the regulars will be eligible next season, the Gophers should be a contender for the title now held by Illinois.

Chicago and Wisconsin are placed on an equal rating because they played a scoreless game and each lost two contests during the season. Neither university can be said to have been represented by a strong team, but the Maroons might have made a better showing except for injuries. Half Back Gray and Full Back Flood were hurt in the Wisconsin game and were unable to play their best in the Illinois struggle. Quarter Back Russell was injured in the Illinois contest and was not at his best when Minnesota was met the following Saturday.

Wisconsin had a strong line, but no back field. Few gains were made through the Badger forward wall, but when Wisconsin obtained possession of the oval it could not advance far enough into the enemy's territory to score. Bellows at quarter back was a big help to the team, his kicking being about the strongest offensive play the Badgers could produce.

Iowa Has Bad Breaks.

Iowa had a good team and is placed fifth in the standing. Although defeated by Chicago and Minnesota, the Hawkeyes were a strong aggregation. If the breaks had not been against them they would have made a much better showing. The Maroons and Gophers won from Coach Hawley's team by the margin of one touchdown. In its final game of the season against Nebraska Iowa lost because luck was with the Cornhuskers. Capt. Halligan of the Cornhuskers booted three goals from the field—enough to decide the issue. Iowa lost a touchdown when one of its players dropped a forward pass after he caught the oval back of the goal line.

Purdue, the team which looked like a championship possibility at the beginning of the season, is placed sixth. The Boilermakers played hard, consistent football early in the year, but after the Wisconsin game they began to go backward and never regained their early season form.

Ohio State is given seventh place. The Buckeyes, like Purdue, started the season like champions, but a midseason defeat disorganized the eleven, so it did not play up to standard in the remaining struggles.

Hoosiers Next to Bottom.

Its victory over Northwestern gave Indiana eighth place. With its slow attack, which was easily solved, the Hoosiers failed to make the showing of former years. The team improved as the season advanced and was a much better aggregation when Purdue was met in the final game of the year.

Owing to its failure to win a single conference game Northwestern is the undisputed possessor of the cellar championship. Average material reported to Coach Murphy at the opening of the season, but the team was unable to win a single conference battle. As the players have had a year's experience under Murphy's tutelage, followers of football are hoping for a better record for the Purple next year.

STAR TANK TEAM SEEN AT CHICAGO

Many Veterans Return to Compete in Conference Meets Next Year.

FRESHMEN ARE STRONG

BY MAROON.

One of the best swimming teams that ever plunged into the tank in Bartlett gymnasium will represent the University of Chicago in this winter's schedule of conference meets. The veterans are practicing daily under the direction of Coach White in company with a promising group of new men who will be available for their first varsity competition at the first dual meet in January.

Charles Pavlicek, mainstay of last year's team, and holder of the conference record in the back stroke, will be back for competition. Pavlicek is working for the 40 and 100 yard swims. Lloyd Neff, captain, who shared honors with Pavlicek last year, will be regarded as certain of points in some of his four events, 40 yard, plunge, and 100 and 220 yards.

Veterans on Tank Squad.

Other veteran swimmers are Craig Redmon and George Lyman, plungers last year; William Shirley, manager, and Harry Flood, former I. A. C. swimmer and full back on the 1914 football team, both breast stroke men. James Murdock, a breast stroke man, will be eligible for the varsity. Clarence Olson, a veteran of last year's relay team, and Leslie Parker, one of the relay swimmers, also will be out.

Several stars of last year's freshman tank team will have places with the regulars. Byron Gendreau, back stroke swimmer; Julius Meine, dash and relay, and Ernest Midkiff, relay, are expected to win places.

Water Basketball Popular.

Water basketball has proved popular. Teams from the four undergraduate classes have drawn up a schedule, and play biweekly games. The schedule will last during the quarter. George Gray was elected senior captain, Edward O'Connor, junior; Julius Meine, sophomore, and Walter Earle, the Freshman.

EBBETS FIELD FOR GAMES.

The Brooklyn National league baseball grounds will be utilized for outdoor contests. The Brooklyn Sporting club will erect a temporary structure.

Brief Bits of Sport.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 5.—Martin Mulay, Detroit, defeated Charles Morin, Chicago, 50 to 45, in ninety-three innings, in the three cushion league.

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 5.—W. R. Cullen, Buffalo, defeated E. M. Heim, Cleveland, 50 to 40 in seventy-five innings in the three cushion league.

Joliet, Ill., Dec. 5.—Calvin Demarest defeated George Sutton 300 to 196. Averages and high runs—Demarest, 20, 94; Sutton, 14, 50.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 5.—Harry Kline defeated Walter Cochran, 300 to 183. Average and high runs—Cline, 13-13-34, 46; Cochran, 7 20-34, 64.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 5.—Bennie Allen of Kansas City successfully defended his pocket billiards title, winning the final block of a championship match from James Maturo of Denver, 200 to 134, last night. High runs: Allen, 22; Maturo, 15. Total score: Allen, 600; Maturo, 482.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 5.—The Boston National league baseball club will construct a new park in the Allston district, where a large tract of land was purchased yesterday, according to President James E. Gaffney. The property includes a section of what was formerly the grounds of the Allston Golf club. It is nearly four miles from the center of the city, but is readily accessible by trolley.

PURDUE SEEKS NEW CAPTAIN

Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The election of a Purdue football captain will take place next week, and in all probability the honor will fall to Frank Blocker, tackle, or Pulz, quarter back, each of whom has but one year more to play. Coach Andy Smith is known to be in favor of a lineman for the captaincy in case there is a chance to bestow the honor this way.

Purdue loses only three of this year's regulars by graduation, but the list includes Routh, the great guard, who has won distinction in pratcically every all western team picked by the critics. O'Brien and Cecil are the other regulars who have concluded their careers.

Turner and Stinchfield, ends; Blocker and Borum, tackles; Bishop, center; Pulz, quarter back; Abrell, half back, and Van Aken, full back, are all eligible again.

Dixon, quarter; Eldridge, end; Buechner, guard, and Mason, center, are the leading second string men who will be found on next year's squad. The most promising players on this year's freshman team were Sheridan and McKinley, backs; Keller and Hart, guards; Burns, tackle, and Olmstead, end.

OFFER SALT LAKE GUARANTEE

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 5.—Directors of the Pacific Coast Baseball league have agreed to guarantee $30,000 to Salt Lake City for a fifteen weeks' road trip, if a franchise is placed in that town. Salt Lake City, on the other hand, would guarantee $2,000 per week for home games. General sentiment here is that the Sacramento franchise will be placed at Salt Lake City.

GREAT TOURNEY FOR POLO TEAMS

Games to Be Held by Universal Polo Committee at Exposition.

BUILD A FINE FIELD.

Polo players throughout the United States and those interested in the sport will, in all likelihood, see on the Pacific coast this winter one of the largest if not the largest tournament that has ever been held in this country.

The games, which will be held under the auspices of the Universal polo committee, have the sanction of the American Polo association, and on its executive committee are some of the leading polo men of this country.

Joseph S. Tobin is the chairman and J. Cheever Cowdin, son of John E. Cowdin, now a resident of the Pacific coast, and long a member of the Rockaway Hunt club of Cedarhurst, Long Island, is the vice chairman.

Owing to his wide acquaintance among polo men of the country Mr. Cowdin has already received promises from various polo centers of the United States, Canada, and South America to send teams to compete for the handsome prizes offered for competition.

Build Fine Grounds.

With ample funds, exceptionally fine polo grounds have been built on the exposition grounds at San Francisco, which overlook the Golden Gate and Pacific ocean. These are fast being placed in order for playing.

Generous provisions have been made by the executive committee for the entertaining of the scores of polo men who will visit the coast. The shipment of their various strings of ponies will also be under the supervision and care of the executive committee to and from the coast.

Competing teams will come from St. Louis, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Long Island, and Cooperstown, N. Y. There will also be one or more teams from Canada, Hawaii, and the Argentine. The crack team from Buenos Aires will bring their string of ponies, which, although smaller than those used by Americans, show much speed and handiness.

Davis to Captain Team.

Dwight F. Davis, the former tennis champion of America, will in all likelihood be the captain of the St. Louis team. Fred McLaughlin will represent the Chicago team and Malcolm Stevenson (twice a substitute player on the American international team against England) will captain Cooperstown.

A New Luxury Awaits You in the Eight-Cylinder Cadillac

Yes, a new luxury—so new that you never have experienced it, or anything approaching it, in any other motor car.

This new luxury is no mere matter of upholstery—though Cadillac upholstery is famous for its comfort. This new luxury does not mean merely finer finish, more pleasing lines, or more elegant appointments—though in these things which make for luxury the Cadillac "Eight" is not surpassed by any car at any price.

This new luxury of the Eight-Cylinder Cadillac is more the sensation you enjoy when you ride in it—and the absence of annoyances you have thought unavoidable. Imagine a car so quiet, so smooth, that you cannot detect its source of power. Imagine a car which picks up without jerks or noise, regardless of the lack of skill of the driver.

Imagine a car in which gear changing is practically unnecessary, because on high gear it will run slower than you would care to stroll. Imagine a car that with the most careless handling cannot be made to produce any labor or knock in the engine. And finally imagine an enclosed car in which you cannot hear the dull rumble or hum of machinery.

If you can imagine these things you can get a fair idea of the new luxury that awaits you in the Eight-Cylinder Cadillac. But a ride in the car will show you more, will make you feel and realize these new qualities. Then you'll admit that the Eight-Cylinder Cadillac does offer a new order of luxury—a luxury without which motoring lacks the charms that perfect it.

Cadillac Eight-Cylinder Enclosed Cars

The exclusive motor car for three or four is the Landaulet Coupe. This is a distinctive, practical, all year 'round car. An open car when you desire it, or an enclosed car at a moment's notice. Price $2500 F. O. B. Detroit.

One of the most comfortable cars ever offered is the Sedan Limousine. Ample room for five passengers. The front seats are divided, and are fully upholstered chairs. Price $2800 F. O. B. Detroit.

The Standard Limousine is a seven-passenger car in which the driver's compartment is not enclosed. This car is illustrated above. Both this car and the Berline show discriminating buyers a new standard in interior decoration. $3450 F. O. B. Detroit.

The Berline Limousine is a seven-passenger car with driver's seat fully enclosed. Ample room for three on the extra wide rear seat. Two comfortable upholstered disappearing seats. Window between front and rear compartment may be dropped out of sight. Price $3600 F. O. B. Detroit.

If you want the full worth of your money in an enclosed car buy a Cadillac. No other car at any price can offer you the same advanced design mechanically, nor will more money buy a car of greater outward attractiveness. Cadillac reputation for integrity and fair dealing assures you good value for your money and life-long satisfaction with your purchase.

We have made special arrangements with the Cadillac Motor Car Company factory for quick deliveries of enclosed body cars which enables us to deliver a few more almost immediately.

FAST LEFT HOOK MAY BRING RING TITLE TO WHITE

Chicago Lightweight's Best Blow Travels Only Six Inches to Jaw.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Charley White, the best lightweight that ever has represented Chicago in the fistic game, would not be a contender for the championship—in fact, he wouldn't have amounted to much—were it not for one punch. That punch is a left hook, and all over the country White has grown famous for his exceptional ability in using it. There are other left hookers in pugilism, but White is the star of them all. He has developed the punch to such an extent that it carries the force that scores knockouts.

The accompanying illustrations show White's method of using the blow. One of the features is the fact that the hook itself travels not more than six inches. In that short distance White has been able to place the momentum and steam to send an opponent into dreamland. The Chicago fighter's record is thickly sprinkled with the "K. O." sign, which is ample evidence of this statement, for White seldom has knocked out an opponent with his right hand. White willingly admits that his right hand doesn't amount to much when compared with his left, but Charley fondly refers to that same right as a valuable part of the machinery that wins fights.

White Weak on Jabs.

Although the Chicago boy is "strong" on the left hand, he is far from an expert at using it for purposes other than hooking. When it comes to jabbing, it must be said that there are a lot of fighters who have White beaten half way across the country. His bouts with such ringsters as Willie Ritchie, whom White fought when the former was champion, and with Champion Freddie Welsh recently, demonstrated in the minds of the fans just how much better Ritchie and Welsh are as left jabbers.

When it comes to using his left for straight punching or swinging, White isn't there, and doesn't claim to be. There is too much of a bend in the delivery to make Charley's left good for straight punching. He just naturally found that out long ago when he was a mere novice in the game and when he discovered that he couldn't operate a straight punch with his left with any degree of success he cut out trying and looked for some other way to use his sou paw. With the assistance of Bill O'Connell, the Chicago boxing instructor, who took White in hand when he was a stoop shouldered green kid, White learned a lesson that was valuable and one that he never will forget.

Was Weakling at Start.

O'Connell had the poorest kind of material to work on when he picked up White. The kid was not overset on anything in an athletic way, and his physique was far from the kind of which pugilists are made. But O'Connell, regardless of the handicaps, went to work in the process of molding. The first thing he did was to purchase a pair of shoulder braces to make White straighten up. That done, the ring work began, and with it the punching.

Just as quickly as O'Connell discovered that White could not land a blow in the orthodox way, he set to work to correct his delivery. But he found White was a lot different from most of the boys he instructed. Charley simply couldn't fall into the regular way of boxing. He didn't jab fast enough with his left and he didn't cross with speed and steam with his right, as other boys do. One reason for this was that Charley is a sou'paw. But still that wasn't an argument in White's favor, for a left hander should be a good jabber, in fact, even better than a right hander.

When O'Connell, after much toil, couldn't get White to do things the way he wanted them done, he didn't give up, but instead went to work to make the best use of what Charley possessed. One day White let go with his left hook for the jaw of another boy who was boxing with him. The punch landed flush on the right side of the jaw owned by Charley's sparring partner and he crumpled in a heap. Those at the ringside saw a gleam of joy in O'Connell's eye. He had found out just what punch White could use best, and from that day to this White has made the left hook his one best bet.

But that was only the start of that left hook which gives such great promise of some day permitting Charley White to sign after his name: "Champion lightweight of the world." The next step was to develop the blow, and in this came the art of deception, for at this stage the Chicago kid "telegraphed" that it was coming every time he let go at one of his sparring partners, and they quickly jumped out of the way.

Begins Shortening Punch.

In those days White permitted the punch to travel a much farther distance than he does now, and in the development of the delivery there came a shortening of the distance that the blow travels. From a foot and a half Charley has cut this distance down to about six inches, and he lands the punch just as hard as he did with the longer range. But the most important part of this shortening of the punch was the matter of greater accuracy obtained by White. With the blow traveling only six inches, Charley was nearly always certain to hit the spot for which he aimed—the spot on the jaw that is susceptible to a knockout.

But there was something else for White to do. He soon learned that his opponents were wise to his "K. O. left hook," and they covered the jaw with either the left or right glove, thereby preventing damage from the punch. So O'Connell and White got busy and decided on shifting the blow from the head to the body, in order to make the opponent uncover the jaw. That proved a successful move, for White soon became able to hook to the body as well as to the head, and after he had landed a couple of stinging hooks to the stomach most of his opponents brought down the guard, leaving the opening for White's hook to the jaw. By alternating with punches to the head and jaw White was able to deceive his foes, which was another point that counted heavily in his favor.

How He Uses His Right.

All the time White was perfecting his left hook his right hand was not forgotten by any means. Charley held his right fist in great regard and he says himself that for a good many years his right and left have been engaging in a bitter argument to prove which is the best puncher, the left finally coming out on top. But White hasn't gone back on his right, despite the fact that it came out second best. He uses the right to help make a foe uncover the jaw.

The best method to bring about this result, of course, was to land on the said opponent's body. So White has been sending his right in the form of a straight punch to the body and sometimes to the chin. The blow, even if it landed on the "point," doesn't carry the force that produces a knockout, but White thinks with the left hook to the body and the straight right to the body and head he has a pair of "openers" that can't be beaten.

Fitz Also Had Short Punch.

The writer, who has seen a lot of fighters in action, knows of one other fighter who carried a left hook of the real classy type. That was "Ruby Bob" Fitzsimmons. Back a little more than a decade ago the fans remember that famous punch that Fitz employed. It traveled no farther, perhaps not quite so far, as the one White uses today, but it carried terrific force and seldom failed to score knockouts.

Many fighters in the past have gained fame on one punch. "Kid" McCoy invented what he called the corkscrew punch, and he used it on the jaw of Peter Maher for a knockout. Bob Fitz gained fame for his famous left shift, which placed him in position for a knockout wallop.

But Charley White has his left hook. It isn't new, but it is worth thousands on thousands of dollars to the Chicago lightweight.

Charley White and the Left Hook Which May Make a World Champion.

The left hook used by Charley White carries knockout force, although it travels not more than six inches. Standing with his left extended for a lead, as shown in the accompanying photograph, brings White's fist close to an opponent's jaw. Then when the opponent lets go with his right hand, leaving his right jaw open, White hooks his left fist over with a snap. The blow seldom misses the mark for which it is aimed for the reason that Charley is enabled to get accuracy by hooking the punch such a short distance. In hooking to the body the blow travels perhaps an inch farther than to the jaw.

LEGALIZED BOXING IN WISCONSIN UNDER RULE OF STATE COMMISSION

BY MANNING VAUGHAN.
[Secretary State Athletic Commission of Wisconsin.]

MANNING VAUGHAN

That boxing can be raised to a plane of respectability and decency by state regulation has been demonstrated in Wisconsin, where legalization of the sport has met with unqualified success. The game, under commission supervision, has been on trial for over a year, and in that time the commission has been able to eradicate so many disagreeable features of the old order of things that what opposition there is to the sport is of a minus quantity.

In a year's time the commission has brought about dozens of changes for the betterment of the game. Of course we have had opposition, but a great many people who raised a din and cry when the sport was legalized have been won over by the successful campaign carried on by the commission. They know that the sport is now conducted on the square. Every one gets a square deal—the promoter, the boxer, and lastly the public.

Fakes and frameups are unknown. In only one instance has the commission been forced to discipline a boxer for not putting forth his best efforts in the ring. Other boxers have been punished, but not for stalling or shamming. In all the commission has been forced to discipline eight boxers, most of whom were called to account for violating contracts with clubs after signing to box.

The success of legalized pugilism in Wisconsin can be attributed in a large measure to the class of men who conduct the clubs. The fly by night gentry who have put boxing in disrepute in so many states are unknown here. For the most part the promoters are substantial business men who are in the game more for the love of the sport than for the profit they may realize.

Ten or twelve clubs, licensed by the commission, have doctors and lawyers actively engaged in their promotion. Another club is owned by a well to do real estate man, while still another is headed by the secretary of one of the biggest automobile factories in the state.

The class of men promoting the shows is reflected in the character of the crowds that attend boxing matches. They are cosmopolitan in character, naturally, but are composed largely of the better element. The ban of the commission on the giving of referees' decisions keeps the betting element away. When the gamblers are kept out, clean sport and order come in.

The commission absolutely requires that order be maintained at all shows, and with one or two exceptions we have not had to "jack up" any clubs for their failure to do so. In fact, the average boxing crowd is much better behaved than the average crowd that attends an indoor baseball or a high school basketball game.

The old cry of the reformer that boxing is brutal has been given the lie by the record established in Wisconsin since the creation of the commission. In that time 146 boxing shows have been held. This means, figuring four bouts to the show, that there have been 584 boxing matches held in the last year, without a single fatality and without a single accident of a serious nature. Imagine the work a like number of football games would give the sawbones.

In this connection it might be well to state that prior to engaging in a bout every boxer must pass a rigorous physical examination given by a physician who has practiced in the state at least five years. The physical test is thorough in every respect, and any boxer who is not fit or is not constitutionally right is not permitted to box. Clubs are also required to have their rings well padded—the posts must be covered with heavy felt and every precaution taken to prevent a boxer from being injured when sent to the mat.

Since the law became operative about $15,000 has been turned into the state treasury, 5 per cent of the gross receipts of all shows going to the commonwealth. As the expenses of the commission in that time have not exceeded $3,000, the state has profited accordingly. The total receipts of all shows is around the $300,000 mark, while over 100,000 fans have attended these exhibitions.

Despite the success of boxing as a sport, it has been more or less of a financial failure under commission rule. This is due entirely to the large purses offered. Boxers have held up the promoters right and left. The club owners, anxious to get big attractions, hung up purses entirely out of proportion to what they would take in at the gate. They are getting down to a saner basis, however, and in the future a boxer who appears before a Wisconsin club will be required to box on a percentage basis or he won't be given an opportunity to fight. The attractions may not be as high class, but the promoters won't be forced to "dig" so often, and the sport will be better all around.

The chief difficulty encountered by the commission has been in getting capable referees. The clean breaks and prohibition of hitting in the clinches have bothered the officials as well as the boxers, and the commission has been forced to call several referees on the carpet for not enforcing this rule. Steady instruction in what is wanted has had excellent effect, however, so that Wisconsin now boasts four or five of the best ring officials in the country.

Gov. McGovern, who signed the Hedding act legalizing boxing, recently commended the commission for its work in elevating the sport. The governor was opposed to the commission when the bill was first brought before him for signature, but he was finally won over. He says he is gratified at the success of the board and is now a strong booster of boxing as conducted in Wisconsin.

PACKARD RACER TRIED ON TRACK

Joe Dawson Tells of Testing New Car on Speedway at Indianapolis.

BY REED L. PARKER.

The Packard Motor Car company of Detroit has built a racing car. It has been tried several times over the Indianapolis speedway, and, although equipped with a stock motor, has made several laps of the speedway in 1:45, an average of eighty-five miles an hour.

This information was brought to Chicago by Joe Dawson, the racing driver, who was injured in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis May 30, while trying to duplicate his victory of 1912. Dawson, at the invitation of Packard officials personally, made several tests of the car. He pronounced these tests startling because of the little difference in the racing car chassis and the stock car job.

Describes Build of Car.

As described by Dawson the motor is stock. The wheel base has been shortened to conform to the best practice adopted by firms to make a business of racing on the speedway, and a wind resistance body has been fitted.

Along with Dawson's information came word from Ralph De Palma that he intended visiting the Packard company between now and the middle of February. He will spend a month there, for the purpose, he said, of fitting a new body to his Mercedes. Local racing fans, however, believe De Palma's trip to be of more significance, following so closely on the heels of Dawson's story, as it does. It was pointed out that it scarcely takes a month to build a racing body.

Auto Club Welcomes News.

The fact the company had gone so far towards the preparation of a speed car was welcomed at the Automobile club as almost certain indication the Packard people intend to build fast motors, not to be campaigned by the factory, but to be sold to individuals interested in active participation in the racing game, of which there are a number in this country.

The company itself is reticent as to its plans. An effort to gain enlightenment on the proposition from the local agency yesterday was fruitless.

Referee Stops Bout.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 5.—The referee stopped a scheduled ten round bout between Al Baldwin of Jacksonville, Ill., and Jimmy Gary of Chicago at the end of the sixth round last night when Gary was saved by the gong after being knocked down by a right uppercut to the jaw. Baldwin won every round.

Ingram Made Navy Coach.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 5.—Lieut. Jonas Ingram has been appointed head coach of the Naval academy football team for next season, succeeding Lieut. Douglas L. Howard. Lieut. Ingram was one of the academy's star athletes during his midshipman days.

Inquisitive Fans.

Mattoon, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Score 3 to 1, three men on bases. The pitcher of the team now leading is disabled. The new pitcher pitches one ball and the batter hits a three base hit, scoring the three men on bases and making the score 4 to 3. Which pitcher is given credit for the loss? M. C. K.

Neither. The new system of ranking pitchers according to earned runs was devised to prevent such tangles as the foregoing.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Please state the best fielding pitcher in the past and at the present time in the major leagues. J. A.

A good many pitchers past and present have made perfect fielding averages of 1.000 for an entire season.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If the official pitching averages of the National and American leagues for 1914 have been published, please state in what edition of The Tribune they appeared. INQUISITIVE FAN.

The official pitching averages of the National league will be published for the first time tomorrow. The American league's pitching averages will be given out next Sunday or the week after.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A is on second base. B knocks a foul and the catcher returns the ball to the pitcher. A starts back to touch second, but, seeing the pitcher throw to the batter, who has remained in his box, A runs for third base without retouching second after the foul. My friend claims A must go back to second because B did not leave the batter's box after fouling the ball. I claim A had the right to run to third as the pitcher put the ball in play. Who is right? J. SULLIVAN.

It was up to the umpire, who has sole authority to declare the ball in play after a foul hit not caught. See rule 36. It makes no difference whether or not the batsman steps out of his box. If the pitcher does not wait for the runner to retouch his base the umpire usually allows the runner to advance without retouching it.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What nationality is Walter Johnson? C. HUGHES.

He is an American, born in Pennsylvania.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A fellow plays in a class C league all summer, but during the last month receives only one-fourth of his pay. If he should write to the national commission for his release would he have to forfeit this money to the club? Is there any rule which entitles a player to his release if the club does not pay him in full within a certain time? W. K.

It is a part of the national agreement that no club can reserve a player unless his salary has been paid in full. If you write to the national commission and prove that your club owes you salary it will declare you a free agent unless the back salary is paid within a certain time. You cannot get both the back salary and your release.

CLUBS FIGHT OVER BOXERS.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 5.—The boxing commission may have to decide where Ritchie Mitchell and "Kayo" Mars are to meet Dec. 11. Both the National and South Side A. C. clubs claim the services of the Cleveland featherweight. Ben Steinel, matchmaker of the South Side club, appears to have signed Mars first, but Frank Mulkern of the National is going ahead with arrangements for the same bout and has signed "Kewpie" Ertel and Artie Armstrong for the double windup.

Huntley High, 45; Genoa, 15.

Huntley, Ill., Dec. 5.—The Huntley High school basketball team defeated the Genoa High school team at Genoa by a 45 to 15 score. Genoa was outclassed from the start.

El Paso, Ill., Dec. 5.—[Special.]—The El Paso High school basketball team defeated Spaulding institute today, 54 to 22.

BENDER SIGNED BY FED MAGNATES

Indian Pitcher Tied Up for Two Years; No Assignment Is Made.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Another plum from the tree of organized baseball was plucked yesterday by the Federal league outlaws when "Chief" Bender, the great Indian hurler of the champion Athletics, was signed to a two year contract at Philadelphia. President Gilmore of the independent organization made the announcement, but said it was undecided which one of the Fed clubs would get the American league veteran.

The salary to be paid to the red skinned athlete also was kept secret, but it is supposed that no fabulous sum was necessary, as it was evident that the American league had passed up the former star when Connie Mack asked waivers on his services in October. He was claimed, however, by the Boston and Cincinnati clubs of the National league.

Gilmore Belies in Bender.

Bender has been the mainstay of the Athletics' pitching staff since 1903 until last season, when he was less effective. However, he still was thought well enough of by Mack to be started in the world's championship games against the Braves. President Gilmore is convinced that the stalwart Indian has a lot of good pitching ability left in him and that his presence will add greatly to the strength of the Feds for next season.

"We have several more applications from stars of the American and National leagues," said Gilmore, "and it is likely some of them will be accepted within the next week or so. We have enough now that the league will be much stronger in every way next year than it was last."

Tinker Talks of Johnson.

Joe Tinker, manager of the Chicago Federals, returned yesterday from Coffeyville, Kas., where he secured the signature of Walter Johnson to a contract to pitch for the north side team for the next two years.

"I think I have the best pitching staff in the world now," said Joe. "With fellows like Walter, Claude Hendrix, Rankin Johnson, "Rip" Hagerman, and Ad Brennan to do the hurling, it means we are going to have a 'big fellow' on that slab every day. I saw Brennan in Kansas City, and he has gained fifteen pounds since the season closed. It looks as if he'll return to his good form next year.

"I see the 'other gang' is commenting on our recklessness in spending money, but I'm willing to wager right now that our salary list for next season isn't within $30,000 of that of the Cubs. There are men on our team who will be turned loose, but they will not be players we took from organized ball. I can let three fellows go—fellows who will do me no good—and their salaries will pay half of Walter Johnson's salary for next season.

"Walter Ideal Ball Player."

"I think Walter is the ideal ball player. He's a fine big fellow, who has absolutely no bad habits, and he's tickled to be one of us. I met his father and brothers down in Kansas. Walter has a garage in town, which is managed by his brothers. Walter himself stays out on the farm all the time, where he is raising prize stock.

"He told me he had written Clark Griffith twice this fall regarding a contract for next season, but it was after the Washington club had withdrawn its offer of $16,000 per year, because it thought the Feds were through dealing with him. Neither letter was answered, and this seemed to rile Walter. He also told me of another incident that made him disgusted with the American league. In the season of 1913 he was fined $50 by President Johnson. This fall, when it looked as if Walter might jump to the Feds, he received through the mail one day a check from Ban Johnson for $50 remitting the fine of more than a year ago."

Ban Johnson Goes East.

President Johnson of the American league, accompanied by Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, left yesterday at noon for New York, where Johnson is to meet with the national commission tomorrow. President Thomas of the Cubs and his manager, Roger Bresnahan, will leave at noon today to attend the National league meeting in New York Tuesday. Both were in conference again yesterday, laying plans for a trade which will bring a star second baseman to the west side team.

Fred Clark, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was seen about town yesterday. He came from his Kansas ranch and stopped over here for a day on his way to attend the National league gathering in New York.

All-Star Elevens.

BY RAYMOND S. FROST.

THE open season for football experts is on. With a great profundity of thought we have carefully gone over the lineup of all the college, prep, and high school elevens scattered through our peaceful land. Then our selections were made, considering the ability of the players as far as possible. Of course, a college man has the call over a prep school "athlete." In a few cases it has been necessary to shift a player to the other side of the line to make use of his name, but in many instances we had difficulty in making up the teams, there being so many candidates for one position. The standard of play for some of these elevens might not be very high, while others look rather good—on paper. Here is our list:

ALL-ANIMAL.
Center, Wolf, Dickinson.
Right guard, Hogg, Princeton.

FEDERALS NOW AFTER COBB.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 5.—Reports today that close friends of Tyrus Cobb had seen a Federal league contract in the last few days offering the Detroit American outfielder $15,000 annually for four years last night drew from Cobb an emphatic statement that he would remain with the Detroit club. Cobb is spending the winter at his home near here.

Golfers who can recall the introductio of their game to Jackson park ab twenty years ago never dreamed at th time that the Scottish sport would r the proportions it has attained in th public parks.

A few players recall the opening of th first course, which was a nine hole fair, two of the holes being on the wood island. Superintendent Joseph Donnenberger and the late Judge Tuley, the latter being attired in a tall hat and a Prince Albert coat, made the opening drives a fair green now part of the small cours After that some of the supposed exper including Charles Eason, Prof. Cha Zueblin, and the late Robert Risk, back to the first tee and drove acros lagoon, back of what is now the first of the small course.

Courses Receives Big Play.

It is doubtful if any course in the gets more play. A few years ago it possible to start at some periods day without much waiting, but now course, on anything like a good day, busy from daylight until dark.

Each year the attendance has creased, and the present year has bro all records. George H. Weitzel, superintendent of the locker room, has kep record of each month's play, both on big and little courses. Allowing for the fact that many players have drawn tick ets without playing, and that when tick ets were not being given out, an estimat of so many players an hour was made the figures are immense.

Huge Average Recorded.

Starting with March, when the cou were open, 400 players were on the course and 3,579 on the small course. April, the big course was open for fourteen days, the figures being Through the busy months the attend averaged from 600 to 800 a day, and have been bigger if accommodations larger.

Mr. Weitzel's figures show a total 171,656 for the big course up to Nov. and 118,730 for the small course, of 290,386. It is fair to assume that attendance at the nine hole Garfield park course was greater than that at the small course at Jackson park, and allowing 120,000 for Garfield, 10,000 for the course at Marquette park, and 2,000 for the new nine hole course in Lincoln park there is a total of 423,116 starters. Giving every player fifty games in a year would show a total of approximately 8,400 golfers using the public courses, and this estimate is on the low side.

AUBURN BEATS INDIANS, 7-0, BY SCORE IN LAST PERIOD

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 5.—In a bitterly fought game here today Auburn football team defeated the Carlisle Indian school team, 7 to 0. There was little advantage to either side in the first three periods. In the final period, after advancing well down the field by line plunges, Auburn worked a double pass and carried the ball to the six yard line. On the next play it was sent through the Indians' line for a touchdown and a goal was kicked. Carlisle braced and prevented further scoring.

JOFFR
CHIEF of the TRI-COLOR.

By BURTON RASCOE.

COMBINE the temperament and scholastic exactitude of a placid professor of mathematics and the shrewd sagacity and taciturn comprehension of a director in a group of corporations with the inexorable demands for discipline and the creative ability of a football coach who has a penchant for turning green material into championship elevens, and embody these ingredients in a commander-in-chief of an army of three and a half million men—and you have an impressionistic conception of Gen. Joffre, generalissimo of the French army.

Imperturbable, arbitrary, self-sufficient to the point of letting it be known at official headquarters that he is not to receive instructions from Paris while in the field, and yet capable of being at once the most deferential and most amiable man in a party; a French general without excitableness, dash, inspiration, fatuity—in a word, an anomaly in French military history; a man who in civilian dress would pass as a comfortable merchant and who in military trappings appears almost as unheroic; this is Gen. Joffre.

There is nothing of the poseur in him. He has had too many hard knocks attaining his position to give time to the study of effects before the camera and on dress parade. He does not contract the muscles of his face to incite hero worship. He has no eccentricities like clasping his hands lugubriously behind his back. He is indifferent to praise. And if as the result of his hard work in the present war he is made a demigod by future historians it will not be his fault.

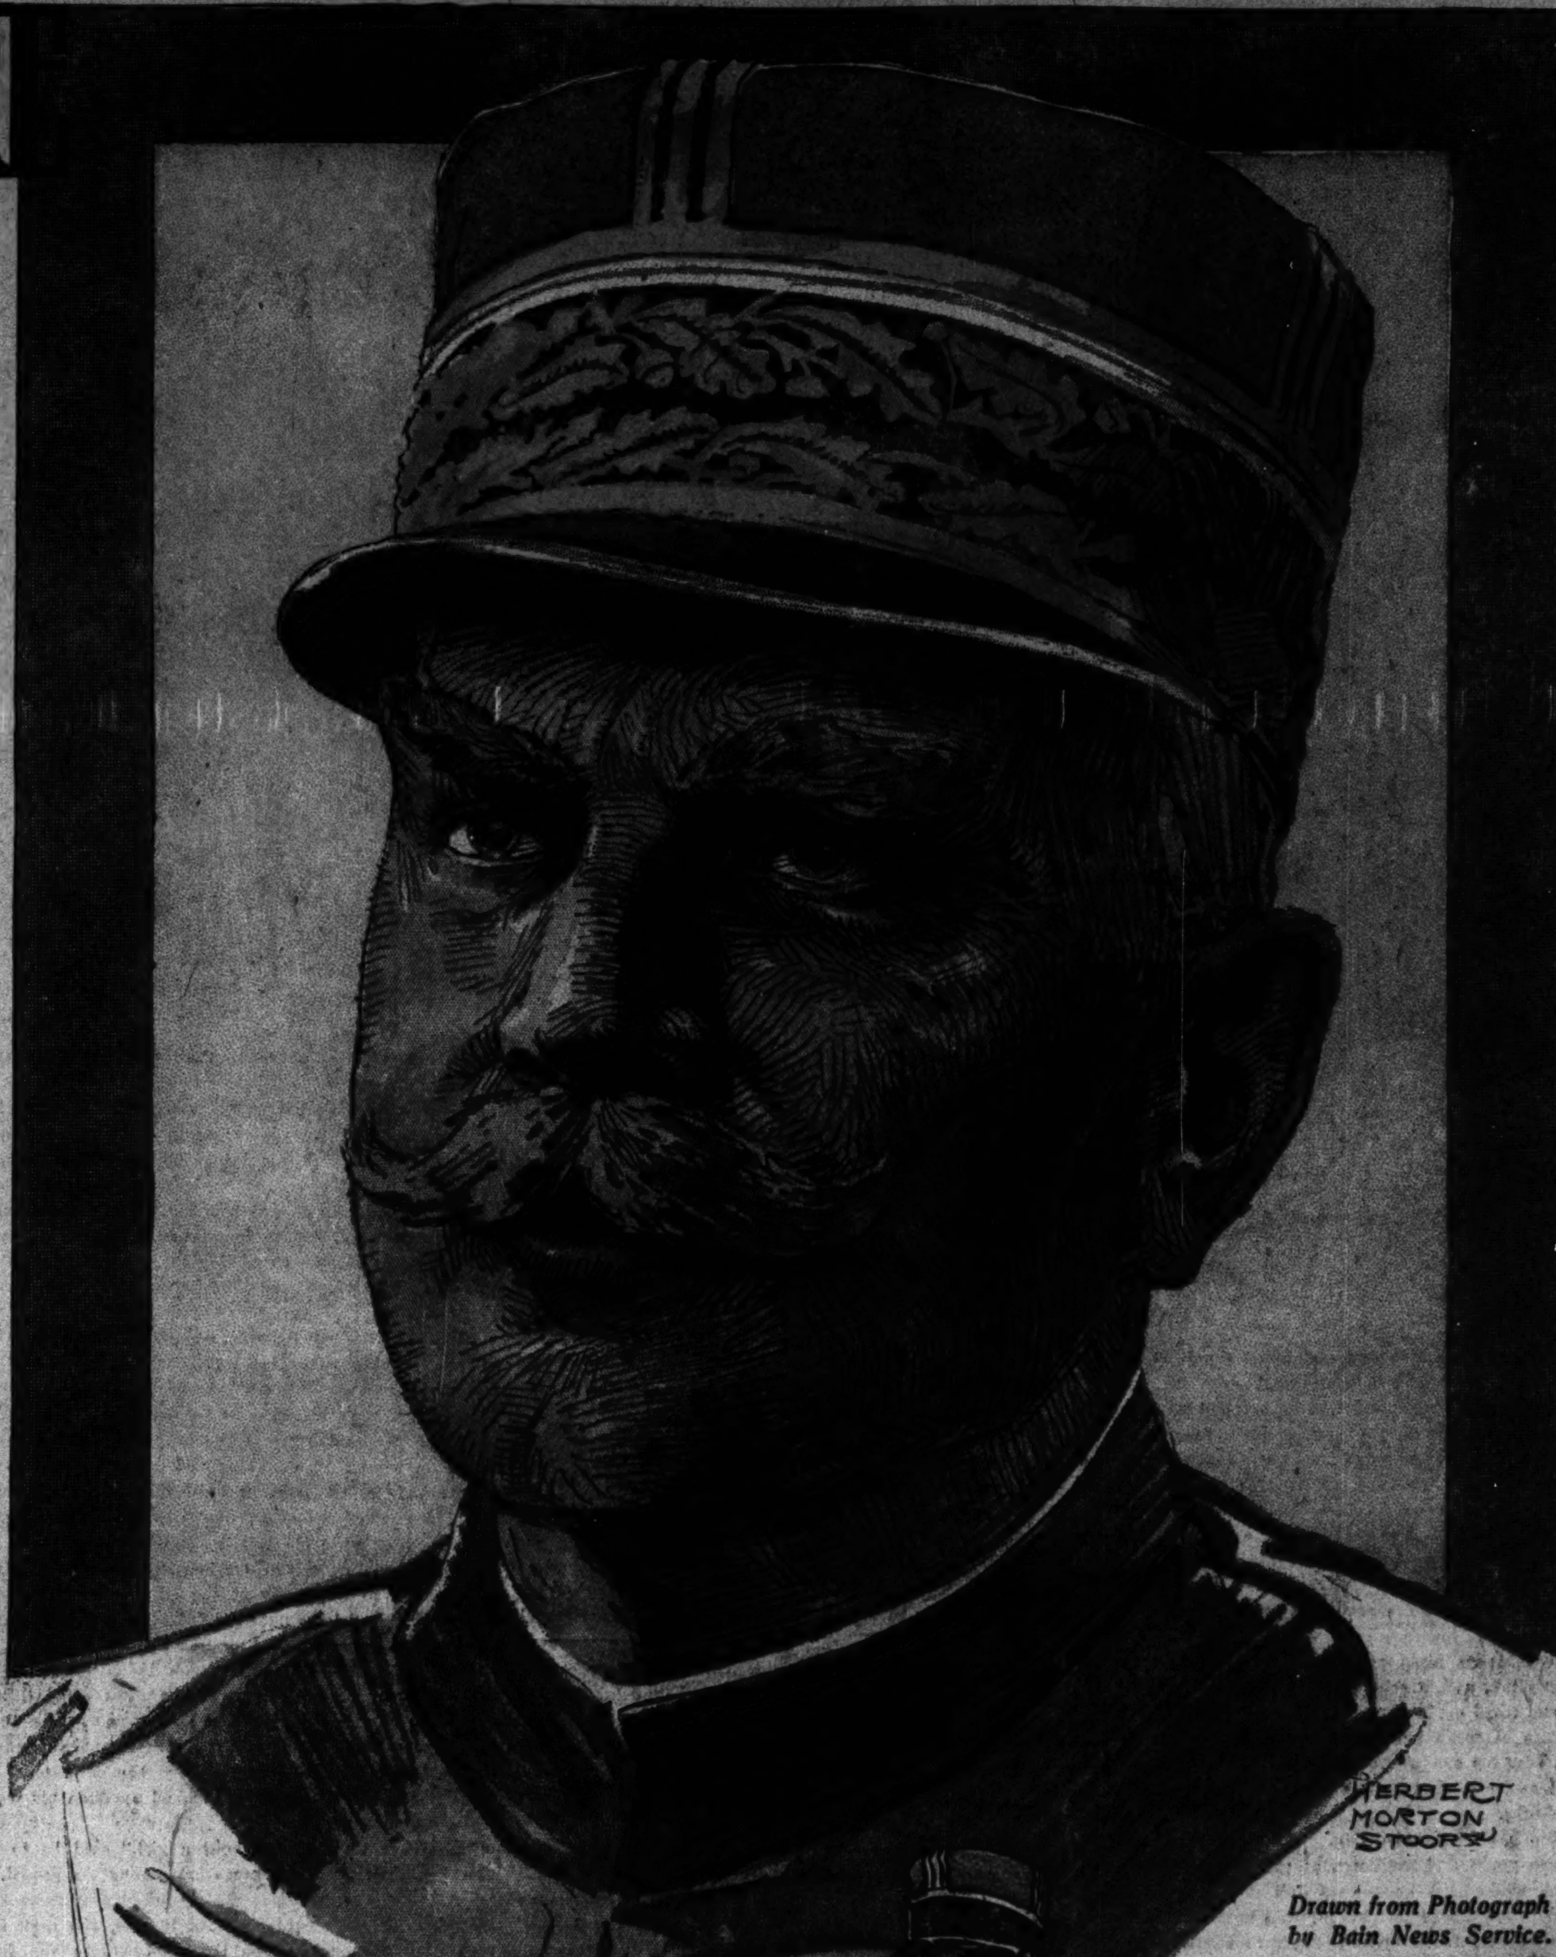
Given Name Almost Unknown.

That Gen. Joffre should have a baptismal name is almost inconceivable—so nearly inconceivable in fact that war correspondents and other journalists who have had occasion to mention his name in connection with the present differences in Europe and previous, religiously have refrained from giving it. It is possible that they never have heard of it; that they surmised that his title was at the same time his given name—an incidence of prophetic nomenclature. But a few years ago it was Col. Joffre, again minus the given name wherever and whenever his name was used.

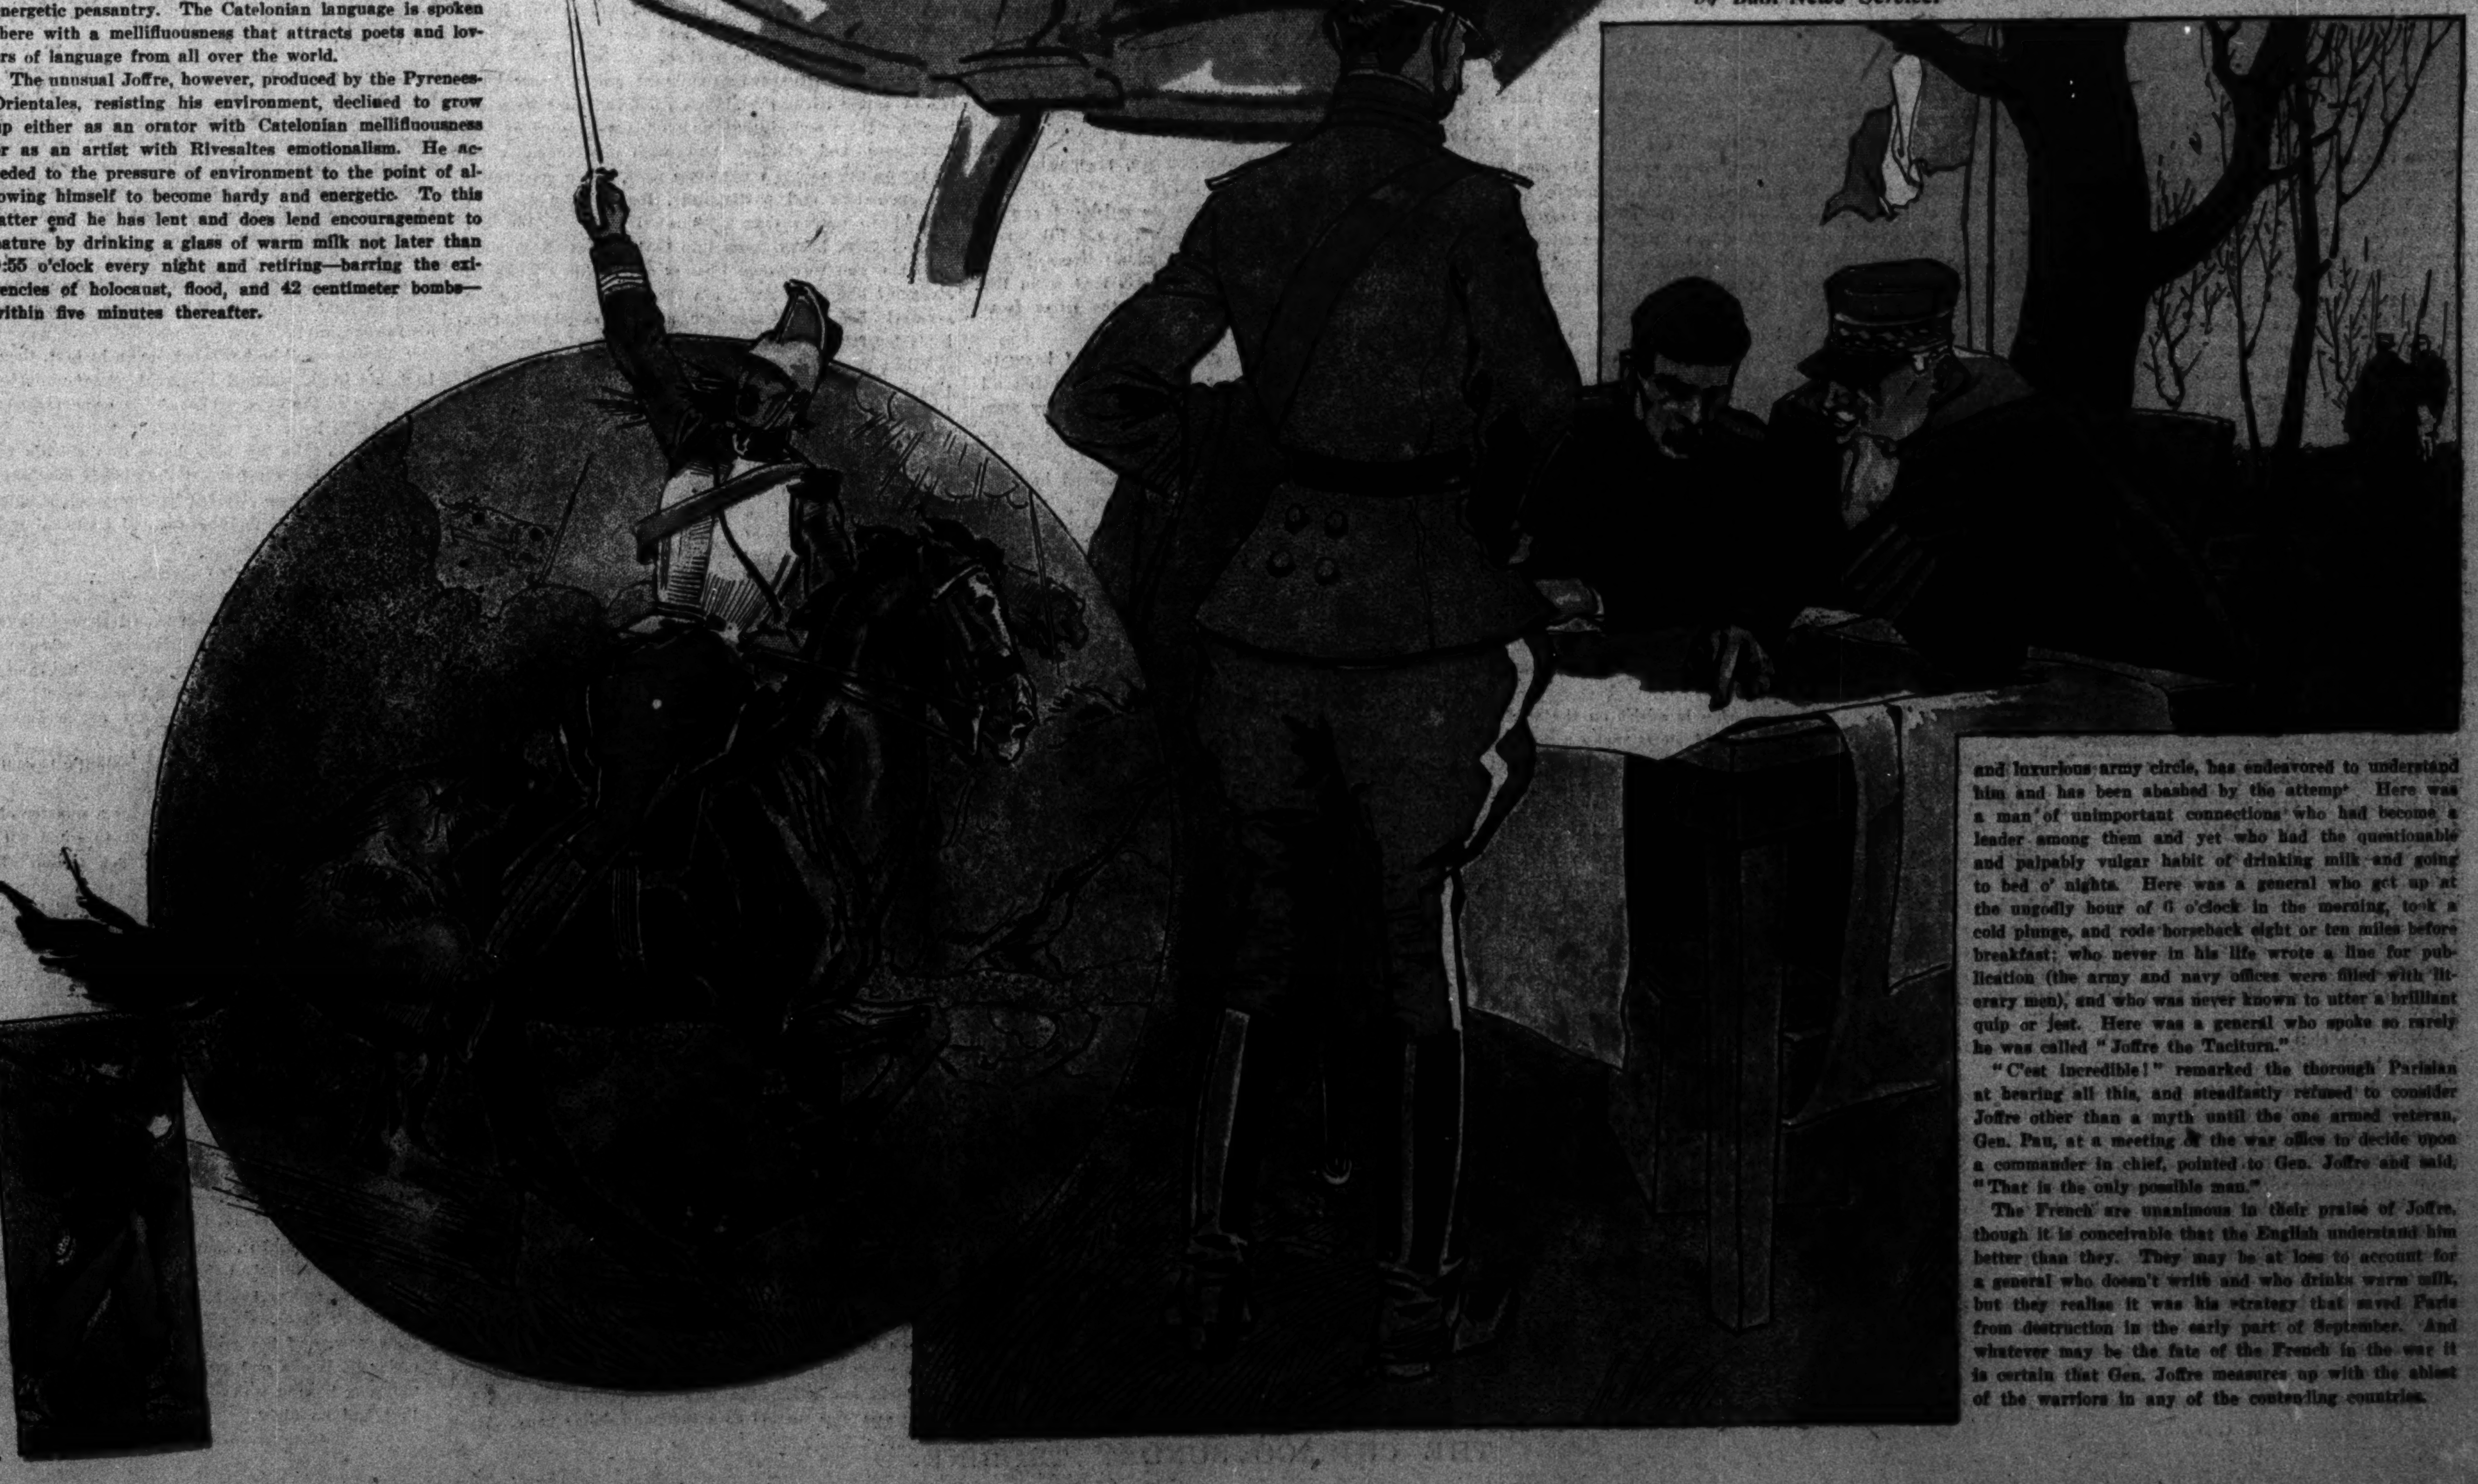
However, if you dig long enough in the meager material that has been collected relative to the life of Gen. Joffre you will find that his mother, if no one else, called him Joseph. And Joseph Joffre he was designated on the birth certificate that the family physician of the bourgeois Joffre caused to be entered into the vaults of the city hall of Rivesaltes on the French side of the Pyrenees some time in the year 1852. The month of his birth and the names of his antecedents his biographers have considered negligible.

The Pyrenees-Orientales, where Joffre was born, have the reputation of producing artists, orators, and a hardy, energetic peasantry. The Catelonian language is spoken there with a mellifluousness that attracts poets and lovers of language from all over the world.

The unusual Joffre, however, produced by the Pyrenees-Orientales, resisting his environment, declined to grow up either as an orator with Catelonian mellifluousness or as an artist with Rivesaltes emotionalism. He acceded to the pressure of environment to the point of allowing himself to become hardy and energetic. To this latter end he has lent and does lend encouragement to nature by drinking a glass of warm milk not later than 9:55 o'clock every night and retiring—barring the exigencies of holocaust, flood, and 42 centimeter bombs—within five minutes thereafter.



Drawn from Photograph by Bain News Service.



It has been said that as a boy he was rather effeminate, studious, and orderly. That he was graduated at the College of Perpignan with the degree of bachelor of science at the age of 16 bears out the statement. His bent was toward mathematics, and in that study alone did he excel. Upon recognition of his excellence in that branch of science he was admitted the following year to the Polytechnic institute, a school for military training.

Builder of Forts.

He had hardly undertaken his studies at the Polytechnic when the Franco-Prussian war broke out and he was commissioned in the French army as an artillery subaltern. His aptitude in trigonometry, surveying, and construction stood him in good stead in building barracades hurriedly and well. His work commanded the attention of superior officers, and after the war he was commissioned to restore the fortifications about Paris and later to draw up plans for the line of forts in the direction of Enghien.

Joffre was so successful in his commissions that he became known as a builder of forts, and when the government decided to erect a chain of forts in French China Joffre was selected to engineer the work.

Gen. Courbet, a paternal old warrior then in command in French China, saw that Joffre was chafing under uninteresting and unpromising work of building fortifications, and was desirous of seeing active service, so when the forts were completed Joffre, under Courbet's direction, was given command of a regiment to put down a sedition of the natives. Joffre won his battles and acquitted himself well. When Courbet was sent to Formosa Joffre was taken along as a member of his staff.

Brilliant work in Formosa earned Joffre the command in Madagascar, where he later was heralded as an ideal military governor. Hitherto a wild island, unprofitable to France, Madagascar under Joffre's discipline became a prosperous and easily governed colony. In Dahomey later on he commanded the rear guard under Gen. Bonnier in a campaign to subdue the natives. Bonnier was trapped and killed in a sortie and his advance guard was almost annihilated. Joffre saved the whole French column by a strategic move, drove back the natives, and achieved the distinction of being the first French army officer to reach Timbuctoo.

Transforms the French Army.

A French magazine writer, commenting upon this incident, waxed prophetic in words which may seem amusing now, "Behold a colonel who will be a general if he perseveres." Joffre returned to Paris, married, and became a professor in the war college. There was internal dissension; the minister of war and the minister of the marine were doing everything to harass each other; the military power of France was suffering. But Joffre said nothing, only watched and thought and kept to his work.

International complications which foreshadowed the present war helped matters, made it necessary for the two departments to act more coöperatively. Joffre was promoted to the command of a brigade, then to a division and then to an army corps. He preached preparation, organized the infantry along more modern lines, and made his cavalrymen perhaps the most efficient and daring in all Europe. People began to hear of him. The general council of war appointed him chief of the general staff and he proceeded to dismiss five generals for failing to measure up in physical fitness, an act that stupefied Paris but brought the war office to the realization that they had a man who meant business, and who meant to transform the French army into a powerful machine.

Paris, from the advent of Gen. Joffre into its brilliant and luxurious army circle, has endeavored to understand him and has been abashed by the attempt. Here was a man of unimportant connections who had become a leader among them and yet who had the questionable and palpably vulgar habit of drinking milk and going to bed o' nights. Here was a general who got up at the ungodly hour of 6 o'clock in the morning, took a cold plunge, and rode horseback eight or ten miles before breakfast; who never in his life wrote a line for publication (the army and navy offices were filled with literary men), and who was never known to utter a brilliant quip or jest. Here was a general who spoke so rarely he was called "Joffre the Taciturn."

"C'est incredible!" remarked the thorough Parisian at hearing all this, and steadfastly refused to consider Joffre other than a myth until the one armed veteran, Gen. Pau, at a meeting at the war office to decide upon a commander in chief, pointed to Gen. Joffre and said, "That is the only possible man."

The French are unanimous in their praise of Joffre, though it is conceivable that the English understand him better than they. They may be at loss to account for a general who doesn't write and who drinks warm milk, but they realize it was his strategy that saved Paris from destruction in the early part of September. And whatever may be the fate of the French in the war it is certain that Gen. Joffre measures up with the ablest of the warriors in any of the contending countries.

WHEN THE MAIL CAME IN

by REX BEACH

REX BEACH

WE didn't like Montague Prosser at first—he was too clean. He wore his virtue like a bath robe and flapped it in our faces. It was Whitewater Kelly that undertook to mitigate him one day, but being as the nuisance stood an even fathom high and had a double action, football motion about him Whitewater's endeavors kind of broke through the ice and languished around in his bunk the next week while we sat up nights and changed his bandages.

Yes, Monty was equally active at repartee or rough house, and he knocked Whitewater out from under his cap, slick and clean, just the way you snap a playing card out from under a coin, which phenomenon terminated our tendencies to scoff and carp.

Personally, I didn't care. If a man wants to wallow about in a disgusting daily debauch of cleanliness it is his privilege. If he squanders the fleeting moments brushing teeth, cleaning finger nails, and such technicalities, it stands to reason he won't have much time left to attend to his work and at the same time cultivate the essentials of life, like smoking, drinking, and the proper valuation of a three card draw. But, as I say, it's up to him and outsiders who don't see merit in such a system shouldn't try to bust up his game unless they've got good foot work and a knockout punch.

It wasn't so much these physical refinements that riled us as the rarefied atmosphere of his general mental and moral altitudes. To me there's eloquence and sentiment and romance and spiritual uplift in a real, full grown, black whiskered cuss word. It's a great help in a mountainous country. Profanity is like steam in a locomotive; takes more to run you up hill than on the level, and inasmuch as there's only a few men on the level, a violent vocabulary is a necessity and appeals to me like a certificate of good character and general capability.

There wasn't a thing doing with Prosser in the idiom line, however. His moral makeup was like his body, big and sound and white and manicured, and although his talk, alongside of ours, listened like it was skimmed and seminaried, still when we got to know him we found that his verbal structures had vital organs and hair on their chests just like anybody else's, and at the same time had the advantage of being fit to send through the mails.

He had left a widowed mother and come north on the main chance, like the rest of us, only he originated farther east. What made the particular ten strike with us was the pride he took in that same mother. He gloried in her and talked about her in that hushed and nervous way a man speaks about a real mother or a regular sweetheart. We men folks liked him all the better for it. I say we men, for he was a "shine" with the women—all nine of them. The camp was 1,500 strong that winter, over and above which was the aforesaid galaxy of nine, stranded on their way up the river to a Dawson dance hall. The Yukon froze up and they had to winter with us. Of course, there were the three married women, too, living with their husbands, back on the Birch Ridge, but we never saw them and they didn't count. The others went to work at Eckert's theater.

Monty would have been right popular at Eckert's—he was a handsome lad—but he couldn't see those people with a field glass. They simply scandalized him to death.

"I love to dance," said he, one night, as we looked on, "and the music sends thrills through me, but I won't do it."

"Why not?" I asked. "This is Alaska. Be democratic. You're not so awfully nice that a dance hall girl will contaminate you."

"It's not democracy that I lack, nor contamination that I'm afraid of," he replied. "It's the principle back of it all. If we encourage these girls in the lives they lead we're just as bad as they are."

"No, sir; I won't associate with gamblers and crooks, so why should I hobnob with these women. They're worse than the men, for all the gamblers have lost is their honesty. Every time I see these girls I think of the little mother back home. It's awful! Suppose she saw me dancing with them?" Well, that's a bad line of talk and I couldn't say much.

It was one afternoon in January, cold and sharp, that Ollie Marceau's team went through the ice just below our camp. She was a great dog puncher and had the best team in camp—seven fine malamcute—which she drove every day. When the animals smelled our place they ran away and dragged her into the open water below the hot springs. She was wet ten minutes, and by the time she had got out and stumbled to our bunk house she was all in. Another ten minutes with the "quick" at 30 below would have finished her, but we rushed her in by the fire and made her drink a glass of "hootch." Martin got her parka off somehow while I slashed the strings to her mukluks and had her little feet rubbed red as berries before she'd quit apologizing for the trouble she'd made. A fellow learns to watch toes pretty close in the winter.

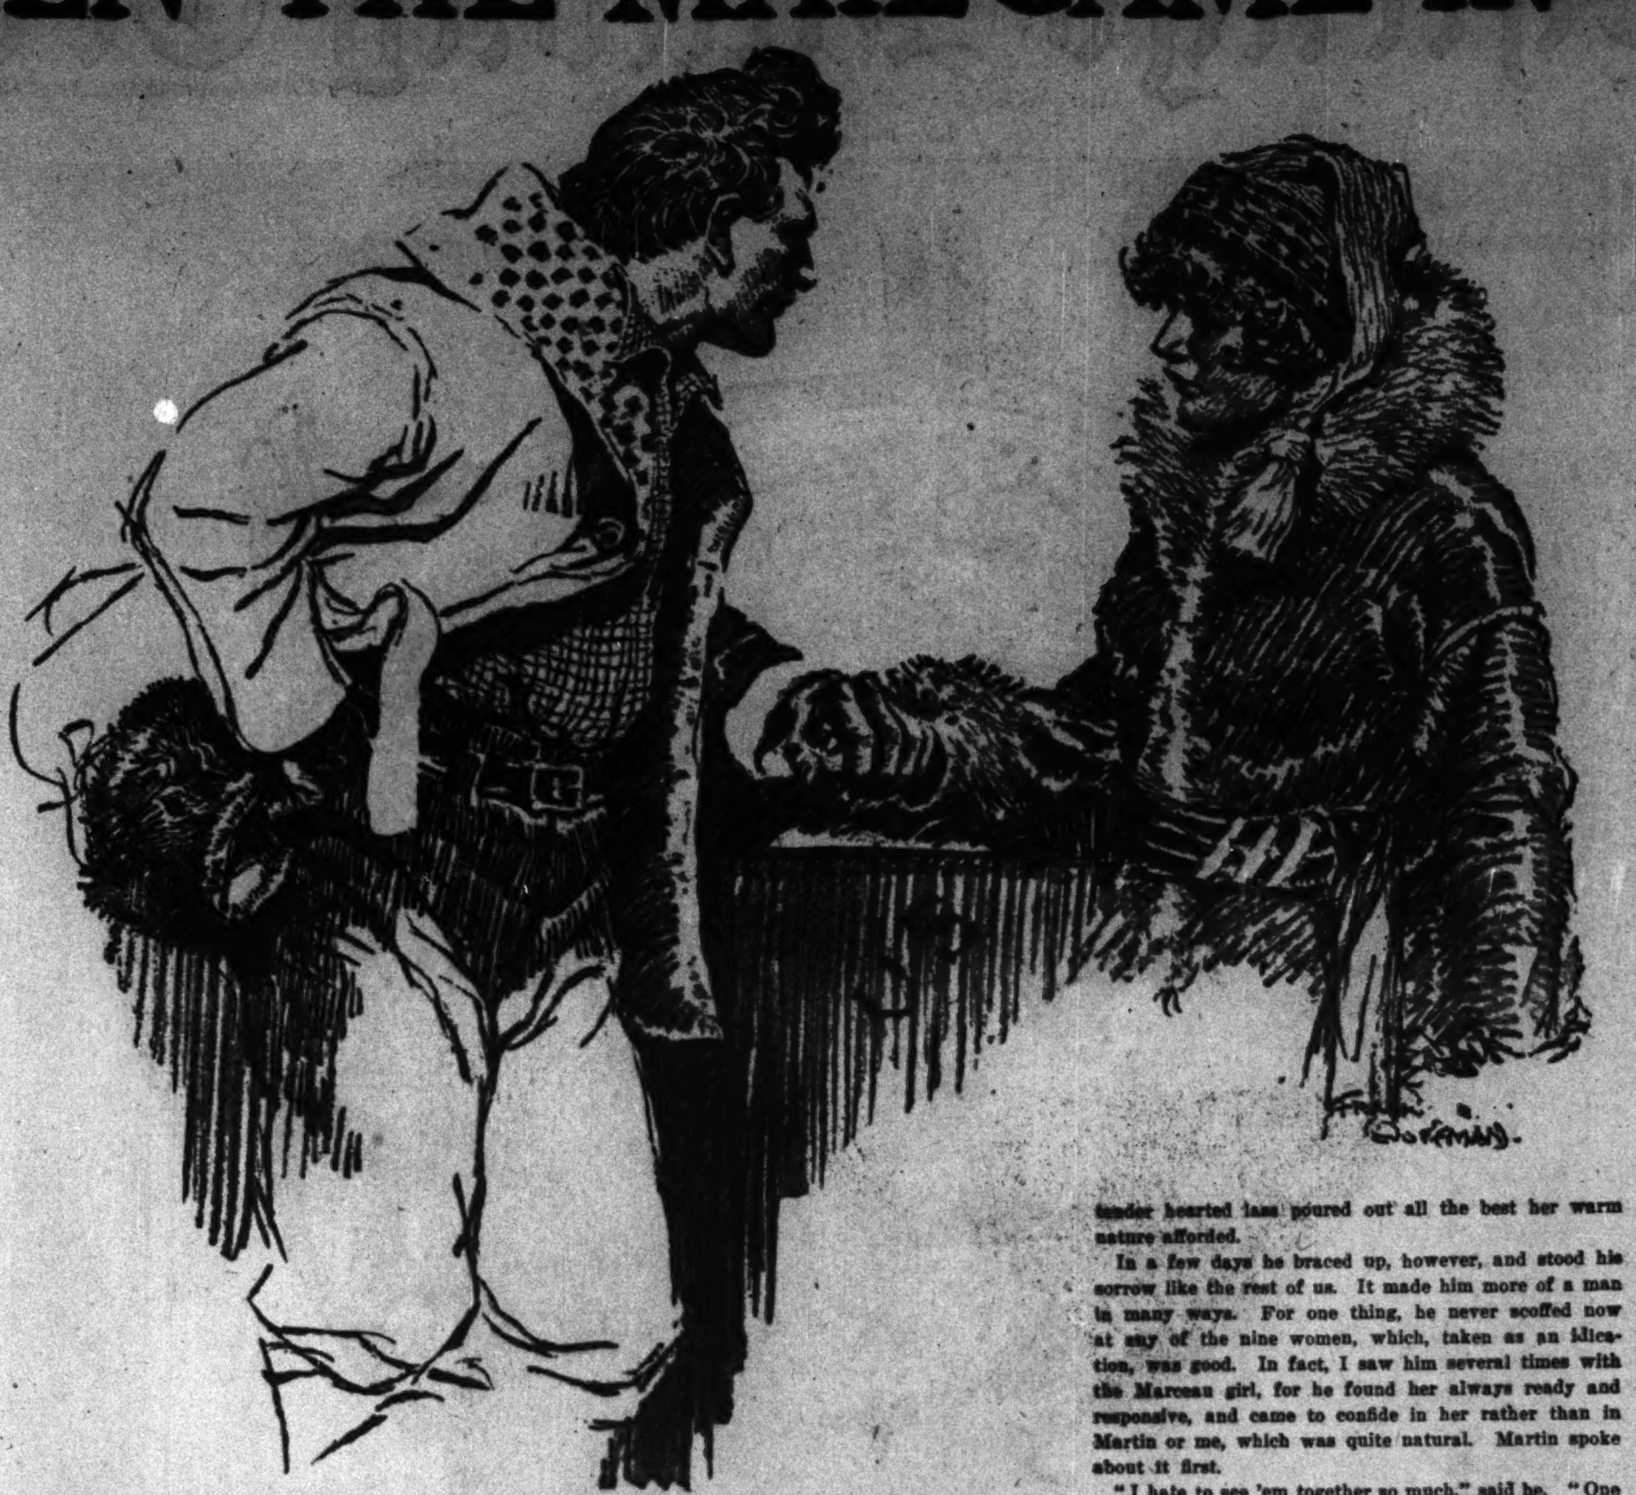
"Lord, stop your talk," we said. "This is the first chance we have had to do anything for a lady in two years. It's a downright pleasure for us to take you in this way."

"Indeed," she chattered. "Well, it isn't mutual,"—and we all laughed.

We roused up a good fire and made her take off all the wet clothes she felt she could afford to, then wrung them out and hung them up to dry. We made her gulp down another whisky, too, after which I gave her some footgear and she slipped into one of Martin's mackinaw shirts. We knew just how faint and shaky she felt, but she was dead game and joked with us about it.

I never realized what a cute trick she was till I saw her in that great, coarse, blue shirt with her feet in beaded moccasins, her yellow hair touseled, and the sparkle of adventure in her bright eyes. She stood out like a nugget by candlelight, backed, as she was, by the dingy bark walls of our cabin.

I suppose it was a bad instant for Prosser to appear.



He certainly cued in wrong and found the sight shocking to his Plymouth Rock proprieties.

The raw liquor we had forced on her had gone to her head a bit, as it will when you're fresh from the cold and your stomach is empty, so her face was flushed and had a pretty, reckless, daring look to it. She had her feet high up on a chair, too—not so very high, either—where they were thawing out under the warmth of the oven, and we were all laughing at her story of the mishap.

Monty stopped on recognizing who she was, while the surprise in his face gave way to disapproval. We could see it as plain as if it was blazoned there in printer's ink, and it sobered us. The girl removed her feet and stood up.

"Miss Marceau has just had an accident," I began, but I saw his eyes fastened on the bottle on the table, and I saw also that he knew what caused the fever in her cheeks.

"Too bad," he said coldly. "If I can be of any assistance you'll find me down at the shaft house"—and out he walked. I knew he didn't intend to be inhospitable; that it was just his infernal notions of decency, and that he refused to be a party to anything as devilish as this looked—but it wasn't according to the Alaska code, and it was like a slap in the girl's face.

"I am quite dry," she said. "I'll be going, now."

"You will not! You'll stay to supper and drive home by moonlight," says we. "Why, you'd freeze in a mile." And we made her listen to us.

During the meal Prosser never opened his mouth except to put something into it, but his manner was as full of language as an oration. He didn't thaw out the way a man should when he sees strangers wading into the grub he's paid a dollar a pound for, and when we'd finally sent the young woman off Martin turned on him.

"Young feller," said he—and his eyes were black—"You've broke about the only law that this here country boasts of—the law of hospitality."

"He didn't mean it that way," I spoke up. "Did you, Monty?"

"Certainly not. I'd help anybody out of trouble—man or woman—but I refuse to mix with that kind of people, socially."

"'That kind of people,'" yelled the old man. "And what's the matter with that kind of people? You come creeping out of the milk and water east, all pink and perfumed up, and when you get into a bacon and beans country, where people sweat instead of perspiring you wrinkle your nose like a calf and whine about the kind of people you find. What do you know about people, anyhow?"

"O, I pity any woman who is adrift on the world, if that's what you mean, but I won't make a pet out of her just because she is friendless. She must expect that when she chooses her life. Her kind are bad—bad all through. They must be.

"Not on your life! Decency runs deeper than the hives."

"Trouble with you," said I, "you've got a juvenile standard—things are all good or all bad in your eyes—and you can't like a person unless the one overbalances the other. When you are older you'll find that people are like gold mines, with a thin streak of pay on bed rock and lots of hard digging above."

The mail came in during March, 500 pounds of it, and the camp went daffy.

Monty had the dogs harnessed ten minutes after we got the news, and we drove the four miles in twenty-seven minutes. I've known men with sweethearts outside, but I've never known one to act gladder than Monty did at the thought of hearing from his mother.

This morning was bitter, but the "sour-doughs" were lined up outside the store waiting their turns like a crowd of Parsifal first nighters, so we fell in with the rest, whipping our arms and stamping our moccasins till the chill ate into our very bones. It took hours to sort the letters, but not a man whimpered. When you wait for vital news a tension comes that chokes complaint. There was no joking here nor that elephantine persiflage which marks rough men when they foregather in the wilderness.

Five months is a wearying time, and silent suspense will sap the courage. If only one could banish worry, but the long, unbearable nights, when the mind leaps and scurries out into the voids of conjecture like sparks from a chimney—well, it's then you roll in your bunk and your sigh ain't from the snowshoe pain.

I saw McGill, the lawyer, in the line ahead of me and noted the grayness of his cheeks, the nervous way his lips worked, and the futile, wandering, uselessness of his hands. Then I remembered. When his letter came, the fall before, it said the wife was very low; that the crisis was near, and that they would write again in a few days. He had lived this endless time with Fear stalking at his shoulder. He had lain down with it nightly and risen with it grinning at him in the slow, cold dawn. The boys had told me how well he fought it back week after week, but now, edging inch by inch toward the door behind which lay his message, it got the best of him.

When my turn came and I saw the writing of the little woman something gripped me by the throat, while I saw my hands shake as if they belonged to somebody else. My news was good, though, and I read it slowly—some parts twice—then at last, when I looked up, I found McGill near me.

He was plucking feebly at the end of his envelope, tearing off tiny bits, dropping the fragments at his feet. Now and then he stopped and when he did he shuddered.

"Buck up, old pal," I said. Then, recognizing me he thrust the missive into my hand.

"Tell me—for God's sake—tell me quick. I can't—No, no—wait! Not yet. Don't tell me. I'll know from your face. They said she couldn't live——" but she had and he watched me so fiercely that when the light came into my face he snatched the letter from me like a madman.

"Ah-h. Give it to me! Give it to me! I knew it. I told you they couldn't fool me. No, sir. I felt all the time she'd make it. Why, I knew it in my marrow."

"What's the date?" I inquired.

"Sept. 30," he said. Then, as he realized how old it was, he began to worry again.

"Why didn't they write later? They must know I'll eat my heart out. Suppose she's had a relapse. That's it. They wrote too soon and now they don't dare tell me. She—got worse—died—months ago and they're afraid to let me know."

"Stop it," I said, and reasoned sanity back into him.

Monty had taken his mail and run off like a puppy to feast in quiet, so I went over to Eckert's and had a drink.

It seems I'd missed him at the store, but when the crowd came out, Ollie Marceau found him away in at the back, having gone there to be alone with his letters. She saw the utter abandon and grief in his pose, and the tears came to her eyes. Impulsively she went up and laid her hand on his bowed head. She had followed the frontier enough to know the signs.

"O, Mr. Prosser," she said. "I'm so sorry. Is it the little mother?"

"Yes," he answered, without moving.

"Not,—not——" she hesitated.

"I don't know. The letters are up to the middle of December, and she was very sick." Then, with the quick sentiment of her kind, the girl spoke to him, forgetting herself, her life, his prejudice, everything except the lonely little gray woman off there, who had waited and longed just as such another had waited and longed for her, and, inasmuch as Ollie had suffered before as this boy suffered now, in her words there was a sweet sympathy and a perfect understanding.

It was very fine, I think, coming so from her, and when the first shock had passed over he felt that here, among all these rugged men, there was no one to give him the comfort he craved except this child of the dance halls. Compassion and sympathy he could get from any of us, but he was a boy and this was his first grief, so he yearned for something more, something subtler, perhaps the delicate comprehension of a woman. At any rate, he wouldn't let her leave him, and the tender hearted lass poured out all the best her warm nature afforded.

In a few days he braced up, however, and stood his sorrow like the rest of us. It made him more of a man in many ways. For one thing, he never scoffed now at any of the nine women, which, taken as an indication, was good. In fact, I saw him several times with the Marceau girl, for he found her always ready and responsive, and came to confide in her rather than in Martin or me, which was quite natural. Martin spoke about it first.

"I hate to see 'em together so much," said he. "One of 'em is going to fall in love, sure, and it won't be reciprocated none. It would serve him right to get it hard, but if she's hit—it'll be damn pitiful. You an' I will have to combine forces and beat him up, I reckon."

The days were growing long and warm, the hills were coming bare on the heights, while the snow packed wet at midday when we went into town to sled out grub for the clean-up. We found every one else there for the same purpose, so the sap began to run through the camp. We were loading at the trading post the next day when I heard the name of Ollie Marceau. It was a big limbed fellow from Alder Creek talking, and, as he showed no liquor in his face, what he said sounded all the worse. I have heard as bad many a time without offense, for there is no code of loyalty concerning these girls, but Ollie had got my sympathy somehow, and I resented the remarks, particularly the laughter. So did Prosser, the Puritan. He looked up from his work, white and dangerous.

"Don't talk that way about a girl," said he to the stranger, and it made a sensation among the crowd. I never knew a man before with courage enough to kick in public on such subjects. As it was, the man said something so much worse that right there the front busted out of the tiger cage and for a few brief moments we were given over to chaos.

I had seen Whitewater walloped and I knew how full of parlor tricks the kid was, but this time he went insane. He knocked that man off the counter at the first pass and climbed him with his hobnails as he lay on the floor. A fight is a fight, and a good thing for spectators and participants, for it does more to keep down scurvy than anything I know of, but the thud of those heavy boots into that helpless flesh sickened me, and we rushed Prosser out of there while he struggled like a maniac. I never saw such a complete reversal of form. Somewhere, away back yonder, that boy's forefathers were pirates or cannibals or butchers.

When the fog had cleared out of his brain the reaction was just as powerful. I took him out alone while the other worked over the Alder Creek party, and all at once my man fell apart like wet sawdust.

"What made me do it—what made me do it?" he cried. 'I'm crazy. Why, I tried to kill him! And yet what he said is true—that's the worst of it—it's true! Think of it, and I fought for her. What am I coming to?"

After the clean-up we came to camp, waiting for the river to break and the first boat to follow. It was then that the suspense began to tell on our partner. He read and reread his letters, but there was little hope in them, and now, with no work to do, he grew nervous. Added to everything else, our food ran short and we lived on scraps of whatever was left over from our winter grub stake. Just out of cussedness, the break-up was ten days late, the ten longest days I ever put in, but eventually it came, and a week later also came the mail. We needed food and clothes—we needed whisky—we needed news of the great distant world—but all we thought of was our mail.

The boy had decided to go home. We were sorry to see him leave, too, for he had the makings of a real man in him, even if he shaved three times a week, but no sooner was the steamer tied than he came plunging into my tent like a moose, laughing and dancing in his first gladness. The mother was well again.

Later I went aboard to give him the last lonesome good wishes of the fellow who stays behind and fights along for another year. The big freighter, with her neat staterooms and long, glass burdened tables, awoke a perfect panic in me to be going with him, to shake this cruel country and drift back to the home and the wife and the pies like mother made.

I found him on the top deck with the Marceau girl, who was saying good-by to him. There was a look about her I had never seen before, and all at once the understanding and the bitter irony of it struck me. This poor waif hadn't had enough to stand, so love had come to her, just as Kink had predicted—a hopeless love which she would have to fight the way she fought the whole world. It made me bitter and cynical, but I admired her nerve—she was dressed for the sacrifice, trim and well curried as a thousand dollar pony. Back of her smile, though, I saw the waiting tears, and my heart bled. Spring is a fierce time for romance, anyhow.

There wasn't time to say much, so I squeezed Monty's hand like a cider press.

"God bless you, lad. You must come back to us," I said, but he shook his head and I heard the girl's breath catch. I continued, "Come on, Ollie, I'll help you ashore."

We stood on the bank there together and watched the last of him, tall and clear cut against the white of the wheelhouse, and it seemed to me when he had gone that something bright and vital and young had passed out of me, leaving in its stead discouragement and darkness and age.

"Would you mind walking with me up to my cabin?" Ollie asked.

"Of course not," I said, and we went down the long street, past the theater, the trading post, and the saloons till we came to the hill where her little nest was perched. Every one spoke and smiled to her and she answered in the same way, although I knew she was on parade and holding herself with firm hands. As we came near to the end her pace quickened, however, and I guessed the panic that was on her to be alone where she could drop her mask and become a woman—a poor, weak, grief stricken woman. But when we were inside at last her manner astounded me. She didn't throw herself on her couch nor go to pieces, as I had dreaded, but turned on me with burning eyes and her hands tight clenched, while her voice was throaty and hoarse. The words came tumbling out in confusion.

"I've let him go," she said. "Yes, and you helped me. Only for you I'd have broken down; but I want you to know I've done one good thing at last in my miserable life. I've held in. He never knew—he never knew. O, God! What fools men are."

"Yes," I said, "you did mighty well. He's a sensitive chap, and if you'd broken down he'd have felt awful bad."

"What!" She grasped me by the coat lapels and shook me. Yes! That weak little woman shook me, while her face went perfectly livid. "'He'd have felt badly,' eh! Man! Man! Didn't you see? Are you blind? Why, he asked me to go with him. He asked me to marry him. Think of it—that great, wonderful man asked me to be his wife—me—Olive Marceau, the dancer! O, O! Isn't it funny? Why don't you laugh?"

I didn't laugh. I stood there picking pieces of fur out of my cap and wondering if ever I should see another woman like this one. She paced about over the skin rugs, tearing at the throat of her dress as if it choked her. There were no tears in her eyes, but her whole frame shook and shuddered as if from great cold, deep set in her bones.

"Why didn't you go?" I asked stupidly. "You love him, don't you?"

"You know why I didn't go," she cried fiercely. "I couldn't. How could I go back and meet his mother? Some day she'd find me out and it would spoil his life. No, no! if only she hadn't recovered—no, I don't mean that, either. I'm not his kind, that's all. Ah, God, I let him go—I let him go, and he never knew."

She was writhing now on her bed in a perfect frenzy, calling to him brokenly, stretching out her arms, while great, dry, coughing sobs wrenched her.

"Little one," I said unsteadily, and my throat ached so that I couldn't trust myself. "You're a brave—girl, and you're his kind or anybody's kind."

With that the rain came, and so I left her alone with her comforting misery. When I told Kink he sputtered like a pinwheel, and every evening thereafter we two went up to her house and sat with her. We could do this, because she'd quit the theater the day the boat took Prosser away, and she wouldn't heed Eckert's offers to go back.

"I'm through with it for good," she told us, "though I don't know what else I'm good for. You see, I don't know anything useful, but I suppose I can learn."

"Now, if I wasn't married already——" I said.

"Humph!" snorted Kink. "I ain't so young as either one of my pardners, Miss, but I'm possessed of rare intellectual treasures." She laughed at both of us.

When a week had passed after the first boat went down with Prosser we began to look for the first upriver steamer, bringing word direct from the outside world. It came one midnight, and as we were getting dressed to go to the landing our tent was torn open and Montague tumbled in upon us.

"What brought you back?" we questioned when we'd finished mauling him. It was June and the nights were as light as day in this latitude, so we could see his face plainly.

"Why—er——" he hesitated for an instant, then threw back his head, squared his great young shoulders and looked us in the eyes, while all his embarrassment fled.

"I came back to marry Olive Marceau!" said he. "I came to take her back home to the little mother."

He stared out wistfully at the distant southern mountains, effulgent and glorified by the midnight sun, which lay so close behind their crests, and I winked at Martin.

"She's left——"

"What!" He whirled quickly.

"—the theater, and I don't suppose you can see her until tomorrow." Disappointment darkened his face.

"Besides," Kink added gloomily, "when you quit her like a dog I slicked myself up some, and I ain't anyways sure she'll care to see you now—only jest as a friend of mine. Notice I've cut my whiskers, don't you?"

We made Monty pay for that instant's hesitation, the last he ever had, and then I said:

"You walk up the river trail for a quarter of a mile and wait. If I can persuade her to come out at this hour I'll send her to you. No, you couldn't find her. She's moved since you left."

"I wouldn't gamble none on her meetin' you," Martin said, discouragingly, and combed out his new mown beard with ostentation.

She was up the moment I knocked, and when I said that a man needed help I heard her murmur sympathetically as she dressed. When we came to our tent I stopped her.

"He's up yonder a piece," said I. "You run along while I fetch Kink and the medicine kit. We'll overtake you."

"Is it anything serious?"

"Yes, it's apt to be unless you hurry. He seems to think he needs you pretty badly"—and so she went up the river trail to where he was waiting, her way golden with the beams of the sun whose rim peeped at her over the far off hills. And there, in the free, still air, among the virgin spruce, with the clean, sweet moss beneath their feet, they met. The good sun smiled broadly at them now, and the grim Yukon hurried past, chuckling under its banks and swiggering among the roots, while the song it sang was of spring and of long, bright days that had no night.

THE COCAINE FIEND

by Charles J. McGuirk

If you have plumbed the depths, and the devil has seared your soul,
There is hope that you may return to earth cleansed and again made whole.
But if you have sniffed the snowy drug that sets the red world aglow, Deliver yourself as damned, my man. I have,
and I ought to know.

The Cocaine Fiend.

I MET him by appointment, the cocaine fiend. He did not know it was an appointment, and I did not enlighten him by signs of any particular interest. If I had, he would be given a wonderful imitation of the Sphinx, and you would not now be reading this story. So he never suspected that he was "copy" for me and that he was turning over his spiritual vitals for my inspection as he sat there at the table, his mouth twitching, and his body shuddering, and his haggard face making a pasty background for his too brilliant eyes.

And I used him, studying him carefully and impersonally, just as you would a rat or a dog on the dissecting table. His endless pluckings at his clothes and his wild dreams driveling from the nervous mouth roused in me a little pity, but he was a good story, and delivering stories is my business and my sole support.

His story is not an unusual one. There are thousands of cocaine victims in Chicago just as there are thousands of victims of other drugs. This is not altogether a blot on the fair name of the city. The cocaine users, or "snowbirds," as they are called in the vernacular, come from the ends of the earth to the big cities, because the drug is more easily obtainable in the cities and because there is not the weight of public opinion that might deter them from giving way to their appetites.

Out After Nigthfall.

Whatever the causes, you can see the cocaine users if you get out after nightfall, in cabarets, in the cheap saloons, on the street, in public conveyances. They come out after nightfall, because it is then that the venders sally forth with their wares, and because cocaine stimulates and calls for the bright lights. Cabarets are good places to find them, especially where the tango is one of the attractions. The modern dances call for violent exercise and a certain amount of abandon, and cocaine is a substitute for good physical condition while its effects are strong on the system.

The night I met the cocaine fiend I had counted twenty "snowbirds." I could tell them by their twitching features, and their shifting eyes, and their unusual activity. But he was a find, a diamond that I saw gleaming in the dirt at about the time my search was finished.

Early in the evening I started to make the rounds of the cabarets in the outlying south side. I steered clear of the well advertised places and sought, instead, the neighborhood resorts and one cabaret whose owner has appeared frequently in the daily newspapers.

There was a crowd in the place, a crowd that laughed at everything and nothing, and which streamed on to the dance floor, which took up a quarter of the ground floor of the building. And it was here that I got the first glimpse of what I was hunting.

Two women, both in their early twenties, sat at a table next to mine and sipped the beer that their escorts ordered. They were listless, dead eyed, bored. They answered the sallies of their men with monosyllables and a smile that disappeared almost as it came. They followed the men on to the floor and danced listlessly as they talked, taking the steps indifferently, watching the other dancers with lackluster eyes. When they had come back to their table I had moved so that I could watch them more closely, catching the play of the lights on them as they leaned across the table.

Their faces were white and dead. There was not the suggestion of color under the skin that gives life to the appearance of a woman of that age. They were old, satiated women in the bodies of young girls. There was tragedy written in their faces, in every line of their wearied bodies.

They held a whispered conference, glancing swiftly around as though they feared that some one would overhear them. They both arose and, with a murmured word of apology to the men, they went to the retiring room. When they came back they were changed. They had regained their youth. There was color in their cheeks and their feet were light, barely touching the floor as they came back to the tables. The low whispered jests of the men met with instant and ready response. There was animation at the table that one would have thought impossible after the first look at the quartet. When the music started again they almost ran to take their places on the floor, and they danced with abandon, their clinging dresses revealing the lines of their bodies and their silken hose darting from below skirts that were lifted a trifle too high.

"Snowbirds, snowbirds!" I heard a voice at the next table. "They filled themselves full of snow, and they'll be alive for an hour."

This was the type that the drug has taken the strongest hold upon, the young woman who has passed the wonder stage in her journey along the road of the white lights. Women are said to be more susceptible to the effects of the drug and more dependent upon it, once they have formed the habit.

Started on a Bet.

I left the place and journeyed on to another, watching for the victims, waiting for the chance that came to me just when I was ready to give up my search. Just on the borders of the loop, in the district of the old Harrison street station, I went into a saloon to get a drink and to take my last chance at meeting a cocaine victim. The saloon was the common type, the mirror behind the bar, the stale free lunch resting on the counter, the flyspecked pictures of horses, and pugilists, and women. And, leaning against the bar, with his eyes half closed, was the man for whom I had searched all night.

"Sure, I'll have a drink." He was speaking to the world at large, but there was one eye hovering around in my direction.

"What is it going to be?" I asked.

He raised from his elbows and his foot felt for the bar rail. "Brrrh." He cleared his throat. "Got a bad throat here. Bad throat. Runs in the family. All subjected to bad colds. Have a little whisky. Just this once. Little whisky.

The whisky was placed in position with all the ancient ceremony that years of barrooms have instilled on the saloon as an institution. He poured a generous glassful and swallowed it at a gulp, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand when he had finished.

We talked of many things, from the weather to the prospects that the war showed for wholesale murder and sudden death. We retired to a table in the rear, where we could finish an argument raised and kept up by me with infinite guile and a great perseverance. When we were seated, my reward began to make itself evident. For the light of the alcohol was leaving the eyes and the "snowbird" was half lying across the table. He left me for a few minutes, and when he came back he was the nervous, brilliant man of the world, cynical, scintillating, once in a while incoherent.

"Use it?" he asked. "Use the snow? Great stuff. Only thing in the world keeps the love o' life in a man. You're a college man? I'm a graduate of Yale, fellow in Oxford college. Ever hear of Oxford? Splendid educational institution."

I inserted some questions.

"You'd never believe it if I told you," he answered. "Some of the old men around remember me. I was a criminal lawyer." He whispered his name, and it came to me through the mists, a fragment of some conversation when I had heard that name mentioned with veneration by men of his own profession. "Ten years. Ten years ago. Seems long time. But it wasn't so long in the going. Started it accidentally. Took a sniff of it at a big party. Bet I could do it. Did it. And been doing it ever since."

He plucked nervously at his coat, straightened his tie, and brushed his hand upward across his face. "Awfully nervous. Stuff makes you nervous. Leaps through your brain. Sets its afire. World is red when you sniff the snow. Composed a little poem about it. Want me to recite it? Pretty good."

I leaned back and the tired eyes sought mine and looked away again. His voice launched itself on the four line piece of doggerel, cadenced and lilting, rising involuntarily, it seemed. The only way I can describe it is by italics:

"If you have plumbed the depths, and the devil has
seared your soul,
There is hope that you may return to earth cleansed and again made whole.
But if you have sniffed the drug that sets the red world
aglow,
Deliver yourself as damned, my man. I have, and I ought to know."

Takes It All the Time.

The fingers went on with their plucking and the mouth twitched as he drew in his breath. Already he had lost interest in the effect of his poem upon me. He was glancing swiftly about from me to the bar, then back, where his gaze roamed across to the wall, where there hung a picture of Jim Jeffries.

"Another drink?" I suggested.

"Brrh. Got a bad throat. Runs in the family. Everybody in the family has bad lungs. Tendency that way. Take a little whisky. If you don't mind. Yes, little whisky, Jim. Conan Doyle not much of a writer. Brrh. No, not much of a writer. But he did a great thing when he made Sherlock Holmes use the needle. Great medicine for mental strain. Brings back the energy. Always took it after a hard trial in the old days. Always had to take it toward the last. Have to take it now all the time. Meat and drink to me. Meat and drink."

The porter approached the table and laid down the drinks. With the whisky he served the conventional water "chaser." I got the shock of sudden fear, for the voice of the legal friend of belles lettres had risen almost to a scream. "Take that water away! Hear me! Good God! Never serve me water! I hate it. It makes me sick."

There was foam on his lips that he took back into his mouth with deep, sibilant breaths.

"Always annoys me, water," he muttered in apology. "Sorry to disturb you. But I was annoyed. Brrh. Very much annoyed. Very nervous, anyhow. Drug always makes you nervous. Sort of flighty. Fly off the handle easily. Very sorry."

I passed the matter up. I had nothing to say about his habits. Didn't bother me a bit. So we sat and drank, and he told me the story with fits and starts, his head nodding sagely over some piece of advice he gave me, speaking as one who knew life. And his voice would rise from time to time in the queer little lilt that seemed to be involuntary. He had been a brilliant man, a fast man, a man about town, with many friends and wonderful prospects. Now he had reached the depths.

"But I'll come up again. Got a scheme now that beats 'em all. All I need is somebody with money to back me. Greatest thing in the world. Loose leaf book containing all the world's great masterpieces. Man carries the leaves he tears out and commits them to memory. Then he can put back the leaf again."

The Lines It Makes.

When he had finished his description of the marvelous loose leaf book of masterpieces, he eyed me furtively, the light of speculation glowing dimly in his eyes.

"Say," he said, at last. "Just got a little bit of snow left. And, unfortunately, haven't any money just at present." I produced the required amount, and he turned from me as he took out a little packet, poured the powder in his hand, and sniffed it. I waited a long time watching for effects. I drank alone. Whisky had no attraction for him. He talked brilliantly of things that I could dimly understand. Quotations from the Latin and Greek rang frequently through the monologue. But his head was getting heavy and his eyes, while they were wide open, were the eyes of the dead or one who is asleep. The bartender came down to the table.

"Do you use it?" he asked. I said I did not.

"Funny, the lines it makes," he said. "See here." He lifted the head of my friend, jerking it up toward the light, which showed dimly.

"Here," he said, "and here and here. Those lines can only come one way, and that's through sniffing the snow." He ran his fingers over the lips. "Dry as hell," he whispered. "Always dry. Like a dead man's."

I bade him good-night and left hurriedly. It was as though I had seen a dead body outraged. Later, as I shuddered at the memory of what I had seen, I heard the swan song of the man who had been. It rang through my head with the queer little lilt with which he had invested it:

If you have plumbed the depths, and the devil has
seared your soul,
There is hope that you may return to earth cleansed and
again made whole.
But if you have sniffed the snowy drug that sets the red world aglow,
Deliver yourself as damned, my man. I have, and I ought to know. THE COCAINE FIEND.

The Bravest of the Brave

REPORTED TO BELGIAN GOVERNMENT FOR BRAVERY

Mme. Patton Bethune, of Clayton Priory, Burgess Hill, Sussex; Miss Isabel Ormiston, of Bayswater, and M. Emile van de Water, who is the only Red Cross official remaining in Ostend, have been reported to the Belgian government for bravery and devotion to service.

AMBULANCE "STAR" WINS STRIPES

Miss Jessica Borthwick, an ambulance worker for the Belgian field hospital at the front, was recently honored when, because of her bravery under fire, a Belgian colonel decorated her with a corporal's stripes. The stripes were cut from the sleeve of a corporal and sewn on hers. She shares the distinction of being an officer in this regiment with the burgomaster of Brussels, M. Max, and the king of Italy.

SIX FEET TWO AND EVERY INCH BRAVE

Is Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, the victorious leader of the Russians in the field. This genius of the Russian army has resorted to the old method of retreating before a seemingly victorious army only to turn back at an opportune time and send his foes back in a rout.

HE TOOK ALLIES AND GERMANS AS WELL

This is Donald Thompson, the brave photographer from Topeka, Kansas who, in order to get pictures of the war plunged intrepidly into the thickest encounters.

SERVIA'S YOUNGEST HERO

This little Servian lad, fired by the bravery of his elders, slipped away from home, found for himself a gun, coat and cap, dug a trench for himself, and all alone held off a number of German soldiers for several hours. Since his babyhood his motto has been, "What dad can do, so can I!" And now he has proved it a motto of worth.

FOR SAVING HIS COUNTRY'S FLAG FRENCH MILITARY MEDAL IS HIS

Corporal Andre Bourgois is only nineteen years old, but he is a man in bravery and honors. Recently in a charge when the French flag seemed about to be trampled under foot he rushed to the rescue and carried it to safety held proudly aloft. For this act of valor he was awarded the French military medal.

STATISTICS, it is said, can be made to prove anything on earth. Acting on this principle, there are those who have tried to prove that there are more twins born in Chicago than in any other city in the country. Whether or not this is an accurate assertion, a stroll through any of the parks in the summer time would seem to bear it out, and despite the fact that it is practically impossible to prove in black and white the truth of the assertion, the registering of births being still a most incomplete and inaccurate affair, this picture contains a few of the best looking and healthiest specimens of twinhood that could be found. The following are their names and ages:

1. Marguerite and Katherine Maher, 1415 E. 73d st. Ages 18.
2. Bernice and Beatrice Tallmadge, 2515 Monticello avenue. Ages 2½.
3. Agnes and Joseph Daly, 5725 Groveland ct. Ages 6 months.

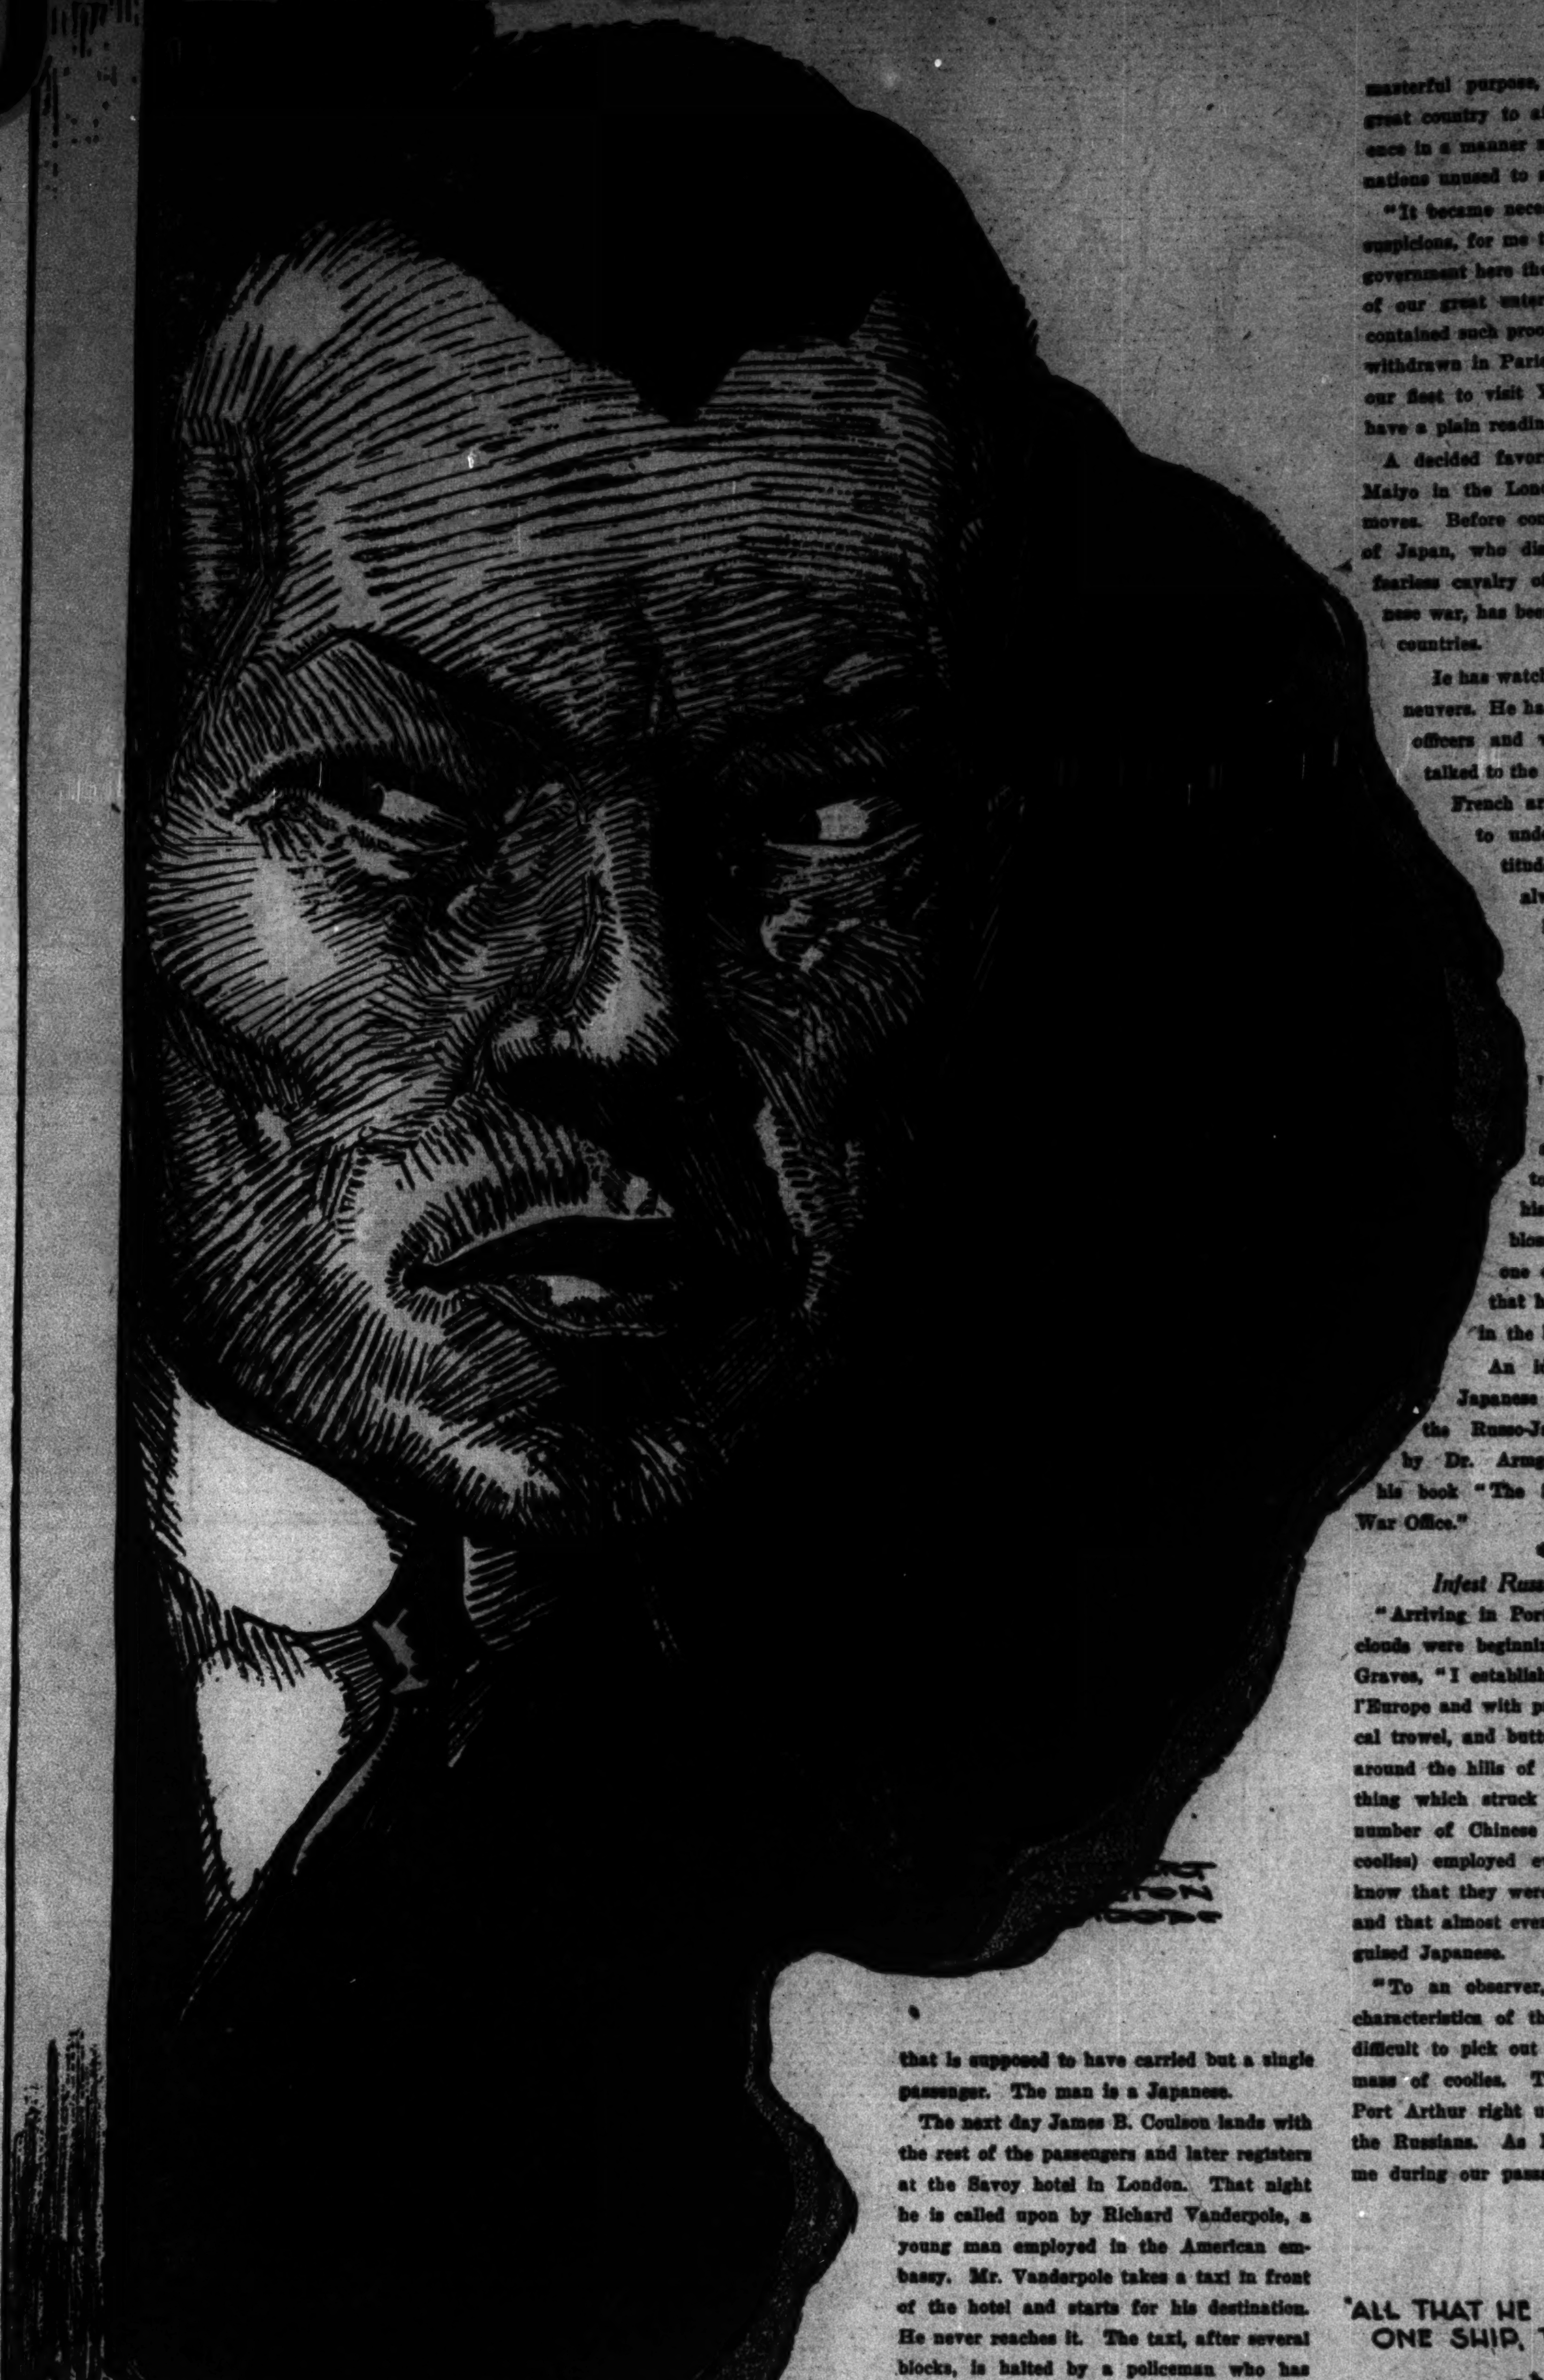
THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

The JAPANESE SPY

by ONEY FRED SWEET



A WEEK before Japan declared war upon Germany there were approximately 6500 Japanese scattered about the German empire—scattered about as they are in the universities and workshops of our own United States today. The day on which Japan issued its ultimatum there were not seventy-five yellow skinned, almond eyed, soft spoken, expressionless faced sons of Japan in the whole of Germany.

What significant word had passed among them, what word in that language so strange to western peoples had gone from school to school and from workshop to workshop, Germany does not know, but silently, cautiously, almost completely the Japanese had vanished from within German borders.

In these days, when all Europe is fairly spy crazy, speculation as to what proportion of these men were acting as secret agents for their country is a matter of exceeding interest.

Sufficient hint of the subtleness and the power with which the Japanese spy system works is given in E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "The Illustrious Prince."

The novel is woven about three American secret service men, two of whom are murdered in England. These men were seeking to carry to the American embassy in London secret papers in connection with the Pacific cruise of the United States fleet some years ago. (The postoffice is a great institution, on both sides of the water, but a letter posted in Washington has to go through a good many hands before it is delivered in London.)

The men were killed by a Japanese and robbed of their papers. One of them was found with a dagger through his heart; the other was strangled by a silken cord. Fiction though it is, the author shows an unusual insight into diplomatic affairs.

Prince Maiyo, undersized, expressionless of face, highly educated, physically agile as a cat, has a philosophy that death is nothing more to fear than night. Death is a thing that comes—a thing that must be.

"For a worthy cause, or a cause which he believed to be worthy," the prince tells a friend, "there is no man of my country worthy of the name who would not accept death with the same resignation that he lays his head upon the pillow and waits for sleep."

Two Mysterious Murders.

It is such a man, living in luxuriant, oriental perfumed, oriental curio decorated bachelor apartments with a retinue of fourteen almond eyed servants, who happens to be in London at the time Uncle Sam's secret service agents arrive with papers that contain something that concerns his country.

James B. Coulson, posing as a New York woolen goods manufacturer, and Hamilton Fynes, a man who lets no one know his business, arrive in the harbor at Liverpool on the Lusitania. When it is learned that the ship will lay outside of the harbor for the night and not dock until morning, Hamilton Fynes presents a letter to the captain of the boat which seems to have magic power. Mr. Fynes is lowered into a chartered tug and taken ashore.

At Liverpool, Mr. Fynes presents another letter to the railroad authorities, which also seems to have magic power. A chartered train, with a picked crew, is quickly prepared to carry Mr. Fynes as speedily and safely as possible to London. Mr. Fynes is a cautious man. He satisfies himself as to the crew and he satisfies himself that he is not being watched. But when the train reaches London, Mr. Fynes is found with a dagger through his heart. The document, which he carried in a secret lining of his coat, is missing.

Incidentally, during the few brief moments while the special train was slackening from sixty miles down to ten miles an hour for a tressle, a man hurls himself from the coach that is supposed to have carried but a single passenger. The man is a Japanese.

The next day James B. Coulson lands with the rest of the passengers and later registers at the Savoy hotel in London. That night he is called upon by Richard Vanderpole, a young man employed in the American embassy. Mr. Vanderpole takes a taxi in front of the hotel and starts for his destination. He never reaches it. The taxi, after several blocks, is halted by a policeman who has caught sight of Vanderpole's dead face inside.

Athlete though he was, Mr. Vanderpole had been strangled by a silken cord and there was not a sign that the slightest struggle had taken place.

Jap Attitude Changed.

Referring to the contents of these dispatches intrusted to Fynes and Coulson, the American ambassador is quoted as explaining that "they contained an assurance that the sending of the United States fleet to the Pacific was in fact as well as in appearance an errand of peace. It was a demonstration, pure and simple.

"Behind it there may have lain indeed a masterful purpose, the determination of a great country to affirm her strenuous existence in a manner most likely to impress the nations unused to seeing her in such a rôle.

"It became necessary, in view of certain suspicions, for me to be able to prove to the government here the absolutely pacific nature of our great enterprise. Those dispatches contained such proof. A great loan has been withdrawn in Paris, an invitation cabled to our fleet to visit Yokohama. These things have a plain reading."

A decided favorite is the polite Prince Maiyo in the London society in which he moves. Before coming to London this son of Japan, who distinguished himself as a fearless cavalry officer in the Russo-Japanese war, has been busy in other European countries.

He has watched the German army maneuvers. He has talked with the German officers and where he could he has talked to the men. He has studied the French artillery and he has tried to understand the peculiar attitude which that country has always adopted toward the land of the mikado.

Prince Maiyo is not arrested by the Scotland Yard detectives for being connected with the murder of the two American secret service agents. He sails back to spend the remainder of his days among the cherry blossoms—a passenger on one of his emperor's cruisers that has been waiting for him in the harbor.

An idea of what part the Japanese spy system played in the Russo-Japanese war is given by Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves in his book "The Secrets of the German War Office."

Infest Russian Stronghold.

"Arriving in Port Arthur when the war clouds were beginning to gather," says Dr. Graves, "I established myself at the Hotel l'Europe and with prospecting spade, botanical trowel, and butterfly net, I sallied forth around the hills of Port Arthur. The first thing which struck me was the enormous number of Chinese and Chunshuses (bad coolies) employed everywhere. I came to know that they were not all Chinese coolies and that almost every tenth man was a disguised Japanese.

"To an observer, trained in the facial characteristics of the oriental, it was not difficult to pick out the Japanese from the mass of coolies. They fairly swarmed in Port Arthur right under the very noses of the Russians. As Baron Huraki had told me during our passage on the Bayern, his countrymen were actually employed in the building of the Port Arthur defenses! These Japanese were later able to give invaluable information in directing the Japanese batteries.

"Numerous other alleged coolies were acting as servants to Russian officers. I also found that on the Liao Teah Shan railway and at Pigeon bay the very porters were Japanese. In fact, the entire Russian stronghold was infested with them.

"This carelessness, lack of knowledge or suspicion, with a total lack of belief on the part of the Russian officers, that the 'little monkey men' would ever dare attack, is in my opinion the chief cause of the comparatively quick fall of Port Arthur. For even with the incompleted defenses the place was tremendously strong.

"Everywhere I could see the most elaborate plans incomplete. For instance, as I wandered through the hills seeking my botanical specimens, I found that the chain of forts on the hills of the Quang Tong peninsula south and west of Dalny were totally unfinished and that the Kuan Ling section of the Port Arthur and Dalny railway was not even adequately protected from capture by a hostile force.

"The harbor defenses, comprising submarine mines and searchlight stations, etc., I found to be in the worst condition. In pottering around I visited many of the switchboard stations controlling the submarine mine fields. Everywhere the eye met evidences of defective work—rusty contacts, open insulations, and exposed connections.

"There were carelessly exposed buoys betraying to the naked eye supposedly invisible submarine mines. The whole mine field was so badly laid that the Japanese were subsequently able to drag and explode three out of every five mines.

"This explains the astounding fact that during Admiral Togo's five dashes, some of them lasting thirty-six hours, all that he lost from torpedoes and mines was one ship, the Hatsuse, which struck a floating mine."

ZUDORA

A Great Mystic Story by HAROLD MAC GRATH

The photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "Zudora," as printed in The Sunday Tribune, may now be seen at a number of the leading moving picture theaters. The plot of "Zudora,"—weird, entrancing, gripping, with marvelous realism in the portrayal of the methods of the Hindu mystics, crystal gazers, prophets, and seers—is unraveled in twenty episodes, each complete in itself. The producing company is the Thanhouser Film corporation of New Rochelle, New York. More than 1,000 actors are in the cast, including Marguerite Snow and James Cruze. One two-reel episode is released every Monday.

SYNOPSIS.

Zudora is left an orphan at an early age. Her father is killed in a gold mine he has discovered. Half an hour after learning of the death of her husband Zudora's mother—a tight rope walker with a circus—is seized with vertigo, falls, and is killed.

Zudora and the fortune from the mine, which grows to be worth $20,000,000, are left in the guardianship of Frank Keene, a circus man, Zudora's mother's brother. Zudora, giving promise of great beauty, reaches the age of 18. The uncle, who has set himself up as a Hindoo mystic and is known as Hassam Ali, decides in his greed that Zudora must die before she can have a chance to come into possession of her money, so that it may be left to him, the next of kin, and he prevails upon the girl to leave her money in his hands three years longer and say nothing to any one about the fortune. Hassam Ali sees an obstacle to his scheme in the person of John Storm, a young lawyer, for whom Zudora has taken a fancy, and he commands the girl to put the man out of her mind. Storm comes to ask Hassam Ali for the hand of his niece. At first the crystal gazer will not listen to the proposal, but Zudora insists that if she cannot marry Storm she will marry no one.

"Well, well," says Hassam Ali, "if you take such a stand, I'll compromise. Solve my next twenty cases and you can marry him; fail in a single case and you must renounce him."

Zudora, using the knowledge gained from years of association with her uncle, unravels a baffling mystery and wins her first case—a case in which John Storm is saved from being convicted of a murder instigated by Hassam Ali himself.

CHAPTER II

THE MYSTERY OF THE SLEEPING HOUSE ~

THE clearing of John Storm was a nine days' wonder. In court Hassam Ali testified that Burns had been seeking some facts regarding the past, and that he, Hassam Ali, had succeeded in aiding him to a certain extent. But the name of Bienreith had never been mentioned during those séances. He could not imagine why Burns had committed the crime. There was no evidence to be found that the two men had ever exchanged a word. He was rather confounded at the turn of events. The broken phrase, "But another——" was as much a mystery to him as to the court. It was inexplicable. Hassam Ali received a good deal of contemptuous grilling from the district attorney, but the witness answered every question calmly and in detail. He admitted that he was a disciple of the Hindu cult; admitted that he had the gift of second sight at times. There were many who could testify to this. Hassam Ali finally left the witness chair with honors in his favor.

A subsequent investigation by the police revealed nothing to his discredit so far as the law was concerned. His past, from the circus days to the present day, was as an open book. Indeed, Hassam Ali was himself the instigator of this research. He wanted it definitely understood that while his cult was not looked upon favorably by the police, he was not the object of any justifiable suspicion. His grave air, his unfailing patience under the gibes of the interrogator, his frankness, all won him at least the respect of his detractors.

The man Burns was buried at the expense of the city, and what was known as the Bienreith case went into the public archives as one more unsolvable mystery.

It was remarked, however, among his associates that John Storm lost a deal of his impetuosity and that in his subsequent cases he was no longer brilliant and erratic but calm and steady, always extremely well fortified within his facts.

New York City has without doubt the most conglomerate population of any city in the world. The only alien race which does not find habitat in New York is the Aztec, and that is merely because the Aztec is extinct. And each race has quietly formed a city of its own within the greater city. There are Little Italy, the Ghetto, Chinatown, and heaven knows how many others, all familiar to sightseers. But there is a lot going on in New York among these aliens that even the police never hear about except by purest accident. Who can say he knows the heart of Chinatown unless he actively belongs to it?

On a certain night two weeks after the Bienreith case, recorded in the preceding chapter, Zudora heard the clock chime the hour of nine. She went upstairs to her room and threw up the shade for a final glance at the heavens—and paused in amazement. Coming toward the house was the strangest procession she had ever seen. Turbans, flowing robes, and white pantalettes, here in this workaday city of New York! She rubbed her eyes as if striving to awake. She looked again. They were trooping silently up the steps. She next heard the thunder of the knocker, which nobody used in these days of electric buttons. She then became alive to the fact that this was reality. She reached the head of the stairs just as her uncle's Hindu servant Amed opened the door. He bowed deeply and ceremoniously. He was dressed a good deal like his strange visitors.

Zudora came down the stairs undecided as to whether she was frightened or merely upset. The man who was evidently the leader of this strange caravan advanced toward Zudora.

"I wish," he said in broken English, "to see him who is called Hassam Ali, the giver of light."

"O, you wish to see my uncle?" said Zudora, greatly relieved.

"And thou art his daughter?"

"His niece. I will call him."

She left the hallway and sought the mystic room, where she found Hassam Ali crouched over his globe. He looked up impatiently.

"Well?"

"Some Hindus to see you, uncle."

"Hindus, at this time of night? Why didn't you send Amed to me? It lowers you in his opinion to take upon yourself to do his work. Hindus; what can they want, I wonder?"

"I'm sure I don't know, nor care"; a bit angry at being rebuffed by her uncle.

When Hassam Ali stood before his guests there was some time wasted in genuflections.

"You are Hassam Ali, the man who sees?"

"I am."

"Your servant here recommended you to us. Sahib, we are in the midst of a strange mystery. In our abode the god of sleep comes suddenly and unawares. Our own god seems to have forgotten us. This dread thing comes almost instantly, and we are taken in sleep no matter what pose we are in. That we are here tonight and not under the evil god's influence is due to the fact that we waited outside the octagonal room."

"The octagonal room," repeated Hassam Ali thoughtfully.

"You are known to us as a great yogi, a seer into the future. Will you aid us to find out what causes this dreaded sleep? Our religious ceremonies are being interfered with."

All this was in an English that was only fairly understandable. Here and there Hassam Ali's man interpolated the right word.

"You will accompany us, Huzoor?"

Hassam Ali smiled and nodded. Here was an adventure that rather appealed to him. More than that, it would banish from his mind, at least temporarily, certain psychological agencies which were making their power felt more and more strongly as the days went by.

"I must go, too, uncle," said Zudora.

"Hurry, then. I should like to see these people before they come out of their trance."

They went away to get their wraps. Before going downstairs again Zudora fondled for a moment the carrier pigeon which Storm had given her recently. John had one for himself. The birds carried messages. Aside from its practicality it was very romantic and obviated the necessity of trusting one's secrets to the telephone girls. And Zudora was not always sure that some one in the house was not listening when she telephoned. As Hassam Ali never entered this room of hers, she was quite confident that he knew nothing of the pigeons.

When they returned to the visitors they were greatly astonished to learn that they were to go blindfolded, garbed in oriental costume. Hassam Ali objected. Very well, then; the Hindus declared that they would go elsewhere for aid. They made this decision unemotionally. Hassam Ali bent his head to signify that if they took that attitude he was ready to submit.

Presently the procession filed out into the street. They hurried along for several blocks; then came a long automobile ride. Hassam Ali counted the turns and felt quite assured in the end that they were being driven in circles and that the house of mystery was not so far away as it seemed. When the bandages were finally taken off Zudora found herself in a room which might easily have been taken bodily out of the Arabian Nights. It was, indeed, like some fabulous fairyland; the idols, the sleeping people, the strange sweet odor which seemed to permeate everything. She was not sure that she had not been transported by some magic carpet to the heart of the ancient city of Bagdad.

She became childishly inquisitive. She moved about the recumbent figures; and suddenly she came upon what looked for all the world like the sleeping beauty of the fairy tale. The sleeping woman was beautiful in the accepted sense of the Caucasian race. Her skin was as light as Zudora's own, which generally wore a slight tan, due to her out of door habits. Near the young woman lay the figure of a fine looking native. Zudora surmised that these sleeping people had been in the midst of some solemn ceremony, possibly a wedding, when overtaken. The ensemble resembled nothing so much as a prearranged tableau such as she had often played at school.

"Who is this beautiful woman?" asked Hassam Ali, as keenly interested as Zudora.

"She is our ruler, our princess. Ai!" he murmured, darting toward Zudora, who was now stooping over the sleeping beauty. "The memsahib must not touch!"

"But——" began Zudora.

"The memsahib's touch would defile her," said the man stoically.

Meantime an idea had come to Hassam Ali. He was beginning to sense a peculiar heaviness about his eyes, and he realized with alarm that this mysterious sleep was overtaking him. Quietly and unobserved he slipped from the room and managed after some difficulty and some explanations to reach the street. Zudora was there alone. If she was clever enough she might extricate herself; if not . . . . Well, that was Hassam Ali's idea.

Zudora went on with her visual investigations, quite oblivious to the fact that her uncle had deserted her. The strange idols fascinated her, especially the heroic one before which were grouped the sleepers. It was a monster, a man's body with an elephant's head. As she gazed up at its sinister little eyes she began to see things as through a film of rain. It seemed as if some invisible hands were forcing her down, down. There was no feeling of alarm, no sense of danger; just a grateful, dreamy sensation, not unlike that of going to bed after some strenuous physical exertion. The oddest part of it was that she was conscious of making no effort to fight off this sleep. As she fell she clutched in her hand a little ivory figure, a small elephant which had evidently escaped the fingers of the princess when she succumbed.

"STORM WAS IN NO MOOD FOR PARLEYING. IN HIS HAND THERE WAS AN AUTOMATIC."

Now there had grown in John Storm's heart an orientalism, doubtless engendered by his frequency at the house of Hassam Ali. It consisted of a poignant sense of danger to Zudora at those moments when she really was in danger. He could not have analyzed this sensation, but he immediately surrendered to it. He was this night in the act of retiring when this sense came to him. He at once went to his desk and wrote a note, which he attached to the carrier pigeon. In less than a quarter of an hour the bird returned. The message had not been received. Storm got into his top coat and hat and hurried over to the Keene place. Amed answered his ring, but hesitated to admit the man his master had forbidden the house.

"Where is your mistress?" demanded Storm.

"She is out, Sahib."

"Where?"

"I cannot tell you," said the servant, gradually closing the door.

But Storm was in no mood for parleying. He resolutely pushed his way in. In his hand there was an automatic.

"You will tell me where she has gone or I'll kill you!" he said, making no effort to lower his voice.

"Sahib, Hassam Ali will kill me if I tell you!" wailed Amed.

"I don't care what he'll do, but I know what I'll do if you don't answer me. Where has she gone?"

The curtains stirred a little; but neither Storm nor the servant noticed this. Hassam Ali peered forth cautiously.

The servant saw in Storm's eyes a species of madness; and he was quite certain that Storm Sahib would shoot him as he said. Rapidly he recounted what had taken place.

"You take me there just as soon as you can."

"Very well, Sahib; but it will be the death of us both in the end."

The curtains fell back gently. Hassam Ali returned to his globe smiling. Both of them!

Storm was greatly astonished when the Hindu told him that he must be blindfolded. He refused emphatically.

"Very well, Sahib; shoot. I cannot take you where the memsahib is without blindfolding you."

Storm saw that the man was in earnest, so after much grumbling and warning he submitted to be blindfolded. Half an hour later the bandage was taken from his eyes.

"Where is she?" he whispered to his guide.

"That, Sahib, is for you to find out"; and with that Amed turned away quickly.

Storm resolutely moved forward until he came upon the form of the sleeping princess. He was rather awed in spite of his democratic assurance. What in heaven's name was going on here? Where was he? In Hindustan, in the middle of a mad dream? Suddenly, even as he gazed, the woman on the rug before the idol stirred and sighed. Her dark, sloe-like eyes opened. Storm stooped and raised her to her feet.

"Is Zudora here?" he asked.

Zudora lay almost at his feet, but he had not recognized her, due to the outlandish costume.

The princess looked at him bewilderedly, shaking her head. Presently she spoke softly; but so far as his knowing the intent of the liquid words, it might as well have been the wind moving through the treetops.

The handsome native who had been lying at the side of the princess now opened his eyes, saw the strange white man talking or trying to talk to his princess. The stupor left him almost instantly. He sprang to his feet, a vicious looking knife in his hand.

"Feringhi!" he shouted. Which means a foreigner.

Others came to life at the same moment; and John Storm found himself in a predicament little to his liking. He was strong and sturdy, but he was no match for the dozen or so lithe East Indians. He was overcome and taken away from the octagonal room. He was cast into a steel dungeon in the basement of the house.

The sleeping mystery of this house had its ebb and flow, evidently. Zudora awoke without any abnormal effect for her short sleep; and the men who had gone to Hassam Ali's house also awoke. Nabok Shan demanded of them who this white girl was. Were they betraying him? They should die like dogs in that case. They groveled and hastily explained that she was the niece of the celebrated Hassam Ali, and that she might be able to break the power of the sudden sleep by discovering how it was accomplished.

"Where is this man Hassam Ali, then?" demand Nabok Shan, who had grown very suspicious.

"Huzoor, we know not. Mayhap overcome as we were by the sleep. But this memsahib is clever and may help us."

"Who was this man I just sent to the dungeon?"

"We know not."

"Well, you speak the accursed English tongue. Question her and learn what she has to say. And on your heads be it if there is any sign of treachery."

"It is just," said the leader of the men who had brought Zudora.

They then proceeded to squat down upon the rug, and Zudora plied her questions and culled a story which ran somewhat as follows:

It began in southern India. A certain native prince had in his extreme youth, as is customary in India, become betrothed to the little princess of a neighboring state. There were great festivities, not to say extravagant ones, in honor of the event. When the girl became a young woman and the boy a young man the marriage ceremony was brought about but not consummated, for the simple fact that a prince of still another principality had seen the princess and had determined to make her his own, regardless of the possibility of throwing the three states into a tribal war. The British raj might interfere, but not until a good deal of damage was wrought. The rival prince was Nabok Shan, a brave, hardy, and none too scrupulous chieftain. He succeeded in carrying off the princess, but he was beset by so many trials that he fled from India to America with the bulk of his treasure and the purloined princess. The house with its oriental trappings had been the property of an uncle who had chosen America because his neck had been in danger.

"But the mystery is this, Memsahib: It is written that the marriage ceremony shall take place before our god, the elephant headed. And always when we begin the ceremony we are thus strangely overcome by sleep. Solve this riddle for us and my master will pay you well." The spokesman addressed a few words to Nabok Shan.

The prince smiled and dangled a rope of superb pearls before the girl, intimating that in the event of her success they would become hers.

Now Zudora did not seek monetary reward; but she was wise beyond her years in understanding the oriental mind, due to the several years that her uncle had employed Hindus as servants. If she signified that she asked for no reward these dark eyed men would instantly begin to suspect her; and once they suspected her, her life would not be worth a snap of the fingers. Besides, it would not be such a very hard ordeal to accept such a magnificent gift. So she told the leader to say to Nabok Shan that she hoped to solve the mystery for the sake of the pearls, being a normal woman. But she must have free run of the house. This was agreed; but under no circumstance must she leave without being blindfolded. And, moreover, she must remain that night.

Zudora accepted the conditions philosophically. She never wore Nabok Shan's rope of pearls, however.

She would have liked very much, though, to acquaint her lover with her whereabouts. Her uncle's disappearance puzzled her. But perhaps he had already begun his investigations. The night passed uneventfully. Those who slept did so naturally. Zudora, however, wandered in and out among the curious alcoves and quaint balconies. She peered behind the grotesque statues, into the fountain. Whenever the ceremony began, sleep came. This fact kept ringing through her mind. She just must solve it. It would be another step toward her lover and happiness. One thing she ascertained for future use, and this was, the exit was more or less carelessly guarded. She might have to take to her heels.

And all the while, in the steel dungeon below, Storm saw the walls slowly and relentlessly contract. He had beaten upon the unfeeling steel until his knuckles bled; he had shouted until his lungs hurt. And smaller and smaller grew his prison. He recalled a certain tale by Poe, and touched the metal from time to time to see if it were growing hot. But it was evident that he was to be crushed only, not incinerated.

Morning came. The feast of the night before was resumed. Nautch girls danced; musicians played the sad and wailing music of the east. Zudora had quietly wet her handkerchief in the basin of the fountain; and at the moment the ceremony began held the wet cambric to her nose. She showed her foresight in this; for shortly after the music began the people in the octagonal room fell to nodding, and from nodding into peaceful sleep. Even with the aid of the dampened handkerchief Zudora could not wholly escape the subtle and amazing narcotic. She struggled blindly toward the exit. How she managed to reach the street was something she could never remember.

She was mighty glad to get back to New York again, for she had been 13,000 miles away in spirit if not in fact. Still, she determined to return and solve the riddle. She had already formed a campaign. What simple fools these orientals were in some respects!

Hassam Ali concealed his astonishment. Yet something deep down in his soul told him that she would return unhurt.

"But how did you escape, uncle?"

"They wanted you," he said glibly. "They blindfolded me again and sent me about my business. What did you learn?"

"Enough to determine me to see what I can do. Of course, it is a colossal trick of some sort; but it would not be wise to suggest that. It must be proved."

"My child, this is altogether a strange business. These orientals are quick to distrust. If they find you gone when they wake up it is quite likely they will try to kill you."

"I've made up my mind."

Then she ran upstairs. She was anxious to send a message to Storm by the carrier pigeon. She wrote a short note explaining the situation and liberated the bird. Storm's housekeeper received the bird and naturally read the message. She scribbled on the back of this message and informed her master's sweetheart that he had left the house in haste the night before and had not yet returned. The return of the pigeon left Zudora in a fair state of excitement. She immediately set out for Storm's apartments; but the housekeeper could add nothing further that Mr. Storm had sent a pigeon to her and it had come back with the note.

Zudora returned home and quizzed her uncle; but, of course, he piously denied having seen Storm. Surreptitiously she plied the Hindu servant. This man secretly worshiped the young memsahib, and by and by she got the facts from him. So! She had not only to solve the mystery of the sleeping house but to save her lover also. He would be without a mission in that fantastic house and it was quite likely that he would be made to suffer for his audacity.

Bravely she set out for the house of Nabok Shan and boldly she demanded admittance. The servant at the door recognized her, but it took a bribe to open the door wide enough for her to slip through.

The persistent ceremony was being started again. To Zudora it would have been laughable but for the new tragedy underneath. The man who had brought her to the house originally finally disclosed to her what had been done to Storm. His death had been decided on.

As Zudora gazed wildly about the room she saw a man in a garb quite different from that worn by those in the octagonal room. She stole up to where he stood and covertly watched him—and became suddenly conscious of the desire to sleep! She breathed through her handkerchief, never letting her glance waver from the hidden man. He turned, smiling ironically, and she saw him raise a stone in the flooring. He disappeared into a pit, letting the stone fall carefully into place.

Sleep had again attacked those determined upon the ceremony. One would think that they would have at least given her some chance to investigate before proceeding again in an endeavor which had so many times proved a failure. This very sleep, however, gave her freedom of action. She stole from the octagonal room, found the stone, raised it, and discovered a tunnel. It was not the safest tunnel in the world; but with John's life hanging in the balance she accepted her chances. The tunnel led to a room which was under the cellar. This room bewildered her far more than the octagonal. There was a large vat, which had the appearance of a distillation vat, with many little pipes leading up from it. The men gathered about this strange contrivance were evidently of a different caste than those in the upper room. A tall, graceful young man seemed to be directing the others. One of them, however, saw the shadow by the door, drew his knife, and stole quietly up to the girl. She was caught!

Ready witted she asked: "Do you speak English?"

The man paused. He nodded grimly.

"I am a friend. I would save your princess. I would defeat Nabok Shan. My lover is hidden somewhere in this house. Save him and I will save the princess."

The man turned to see if his comrades had observed him. They were all busy with the vat.

"I will go with the memsahib. If she has lied she shall die."

"I agree to that."

Once home she ran upstairs for her automatic. When she came down again the stranger had vanished. Amed refused to speak and Hassam Ali did not know what she was talking about.

"He came in behind me," she declared.

"Then he took to his heels the moment your back was turned." Over her shoulder, to Amed, Hassam Ali sent a terrible glance; and Amed knew that death awaited him if he opened his lips. He was still breathing heavily from the struggle.

Zudora left the house, more deeply puzzled than ever.

Two hours later she had cleared up the mystery of the sleeping house and rescued Storm from his dreadful prison.

The fact that the ceremony could take place only before the elephant-headed god made it a simple game to the enemies of Nabok Shan. Zudora did not go to the octagonal room, but proceeded directly to the secret chamber. For one brief moment death stared her in the eyes; but she spoke bravely. In return for the liberation of her lover she declared that, with the aid of one man she would bring the princess down to them. The young prince struck his forehead in rage. He had never thought of such a thing. His one aim had been to force Nabok Shan from the house and then to seize his betrothed.

When the princess awoke the next time she found her true lover gazing down into her eyes. Then they started out in search of Storm; and they were just in time. The steel chamber had become a box, coffin shaped, three feet square and eight feet high. Storm was in bad shape, but food and water and an hour or so in the outer air revived him.

"Will you be good hereafter?" he said to Zudora.

"Yes."

"You promise never to go anywhere without first sending the pigeon?"

"Yes."

"And now, what the dickens made those chaps go to sleep?"

She explained. The vat was a brew of an oriental narcotic, the vapor of which superinduced sleep. It was quite transitory and harmless. The pipes led to all the elephant trunks, and each time the ceremony began the vapor was liberated at a signal from the watcher above.

"That's the oriental mind, John. They cannot go at anything in a straightforward way. It must be all mystery and trickery."

"Do you know, Zudora?" he said, reflectively.

"Know what?"

"That I've an idea we'll be married before the year is out!"

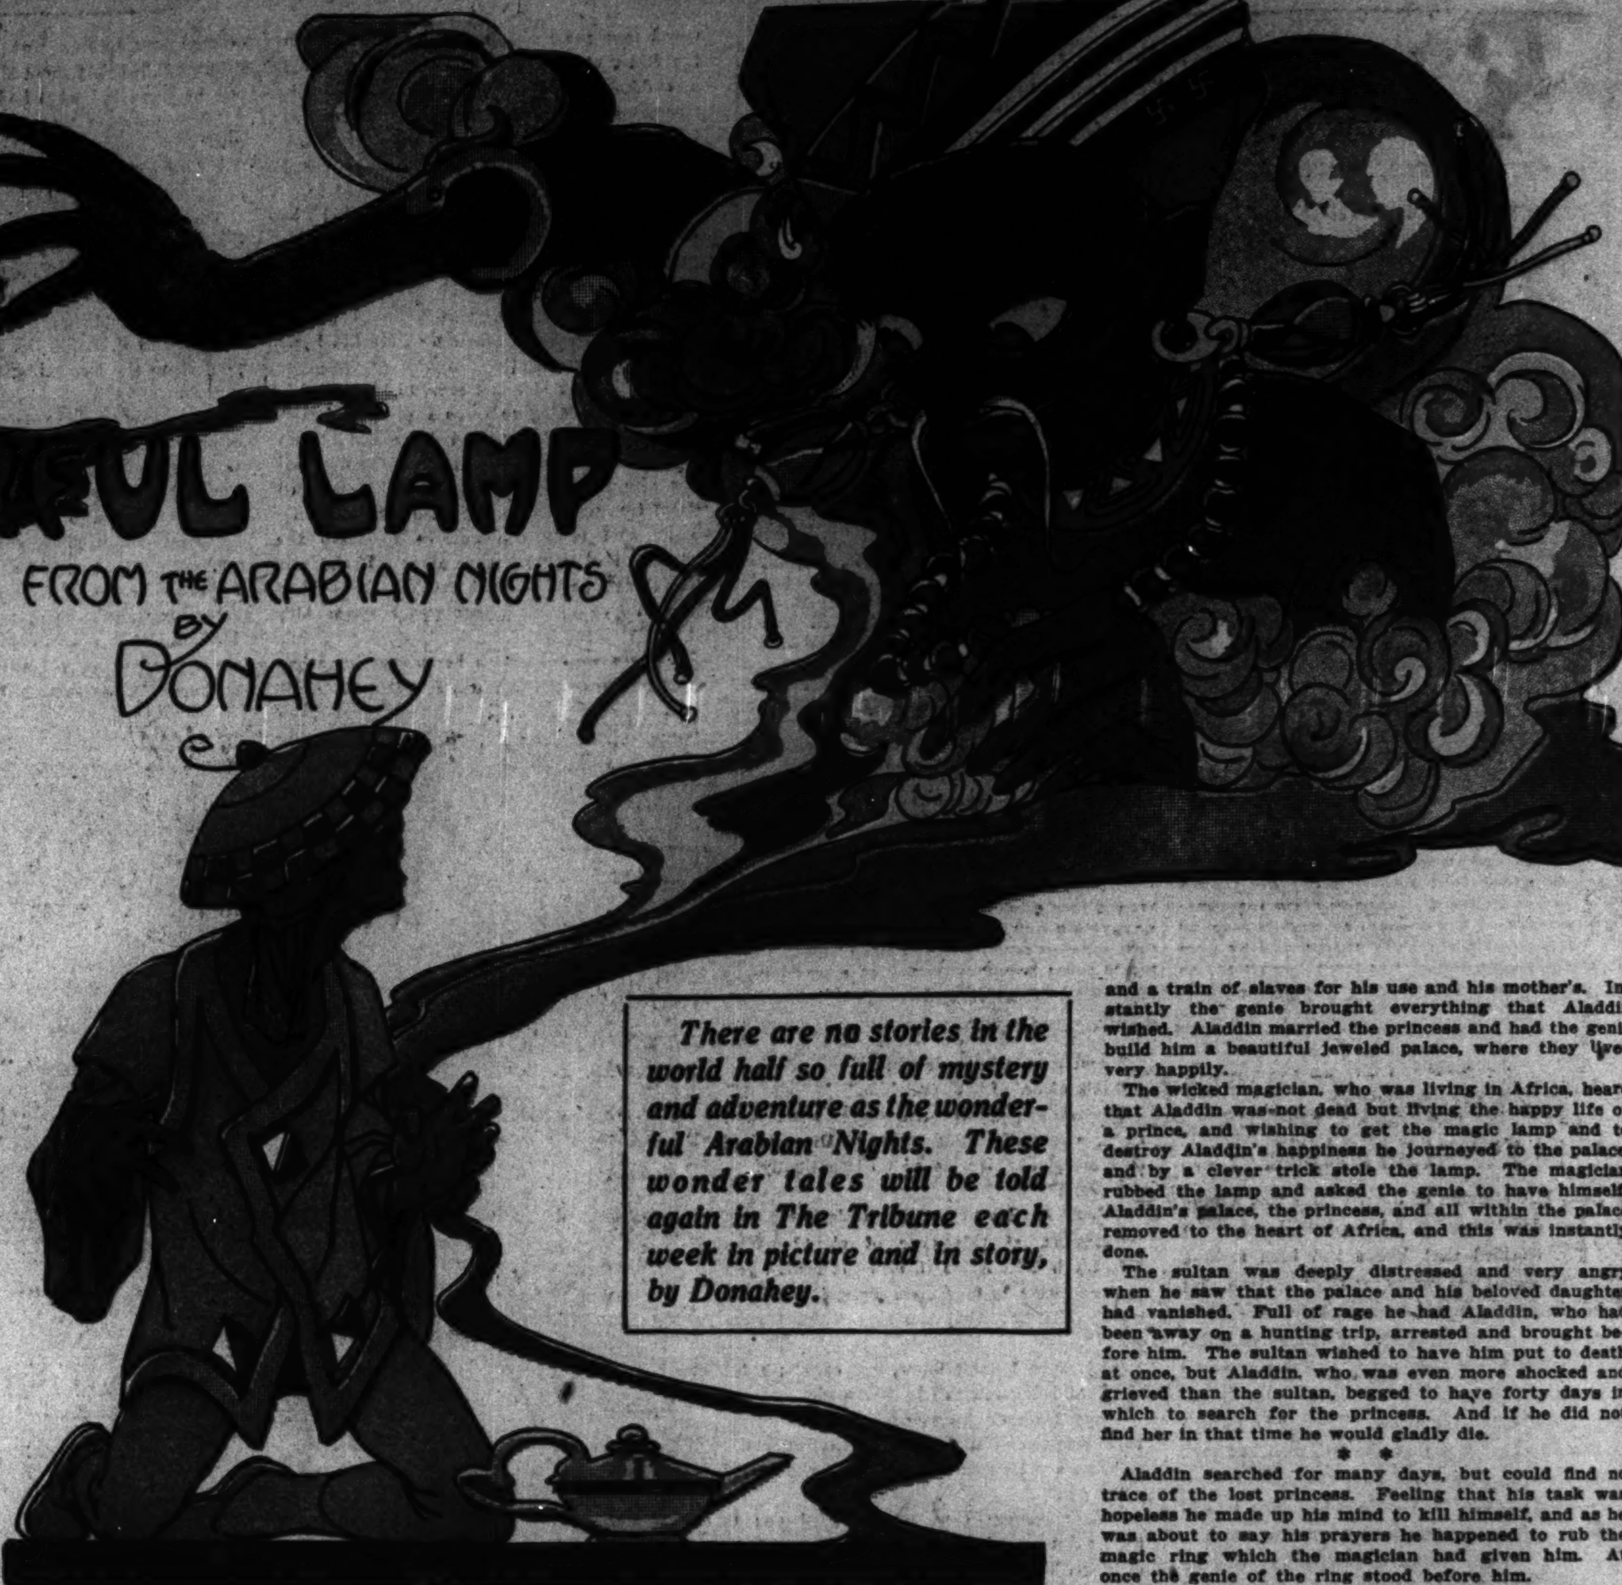
ALADDIN OR THE WONDERFUL LAMP

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

BY DONAHEY



There are no stories in the world half so full of mystery and adventure as the wonderful Arabian Nights. These wonder tales will be told again in The Tribune each week in picture and in story, by Donahey.

ALADDIN was a good for nothing, idle fellow, the only son of a poor Chinese tailor named Mustapha. His father tried to teach him tailoring, but Aladdin would have nothing to do with work. The worry and trouble of such a son caused Mustapha to fall ill, and he soon died. One day a stranger, passing through the street, paused to watch Aladdin as he played with his idle companions.

"That's just the boy I want," muttered the stranger. And after he had made inquiries and learned his history he called Aladdin aside and said: "My boy, are you not the son of Mustapha, the tailor?"

"Yes, sir," answered Aladdin, "but my father is dead."

To Aladdin's surprise the stranger threw his arms around his neck and wept.

"I am your father's brother," cried the stranger. "You are so like him I knew you at first sight."

The stranger then gave Aladdin a handful of small coins and told him to tell his mother that he would visit her home next day.

Aladdin ran home and told his mother all about the stranger. The poor woman decided there must be some mistake, as her husband's brother had been dead for many years.

The next night the stranger came, bringing gifts of wine and fruit. He told Aladdin's mother that he was her husband's brother whom she believed to be dead, and that he had been traveling about the world. Little did Aladdin and his mother know that this was a wicked story invented by the stranger, who was not Mustapha's brother, but a sorcerer known as the African magician.

Next day when the magician asked Aladdin to accompany him on a walk into the country he was glad to go, never dreaming of the wonderful adventures that would happen to him before he returned. They walked till they came to a narrow valley between two mountains.

"We'll stop here," said the magician. And gathering sticks, he built a fire. As the fire blazed up the magician threw incense powder into it, at the same time uttering strange magic words. Instantly the ground opened, showing a great stone with a ring fitted into it.

"You," said the magician, "are the only person in the world who would be allowed to lift that stone. Grasp the ring, and at the same time utter the names of your father and grandfather, and the stone will open and great treasure will be yours."

Aladdin pulled the ring, as the magician directed, and the stone rolled back, showing narrow steps which led down into the ground.

"Go down those steps," said the magician, "and through the three halls into the garden. Walk along the garden path until you come to five steps, at the top of which you will see a niche that holds a lighted lamp. Take down the lamp, put out the light, pour away the oil, and bring the lamp to me."

The magician took a ring from his pocket and put it on Aladdin's finger. "This ring will protect you from evil," said the magician, "but don't touch the wall or you will be instantly killed. You may pick some of the fruit in the garden if you like, but be sure and bring back the lamp and we will both be rich for life."

Aladdin ran down the steps into the hall. Great vases of gold and silver stood on either side, but he passed on into the garden to the top of the five steps, and there he found the lamp, just as his pretended uncle said he would. He put out the lamp and poured away the oil and then picked some of the wonderful fruit, which looked like beautifully colored glass. Little did Aladdin know that the fruit was not glass but really diamonds, rubies, and other precious jewels. He quickly filled his pockets and hurried back to the door, where the magician waited.

"Hand up the lamp!" called the magician.

"I'll give it to you when I crawl out," answered Aladdin.

"Give it to me instantly!" roared the magician. But Aladdin had stored so much of the fruit about his clothes he could not easily get at the lamp, so he told him to wait.

The magician flew into a violent rage, and throwing incense into the fire he uttered the magic words and caused the stone to fall back into place, burying poor Aladdin alive.

For two days he remained buried, and then feeling that he would soon die he clasped his hands together and prayed. In joining his hands he rubbed the magic ring, not knowing of its power, and instantly there arose out of the ground a great genie, who said to him: "What wouldst thou have? I am ready to obey thee as thy slave, and the slave of all who possess the ring on thy finger—I and other slaves of the ring."

The fear of being buried alive overcame any fears Aladdin might have had of the genie, so he answered at once: "Whoever you are, get me out of this place."

Immediately the ground opened, and he found himself in the very place where the magician had built the fire. Soon Aladdin found his way home, and after he had told his mother all about his adventures and had shown her the lamp and the fruit, he asked for food. His mother told him there was none.

"Well," said Aladdin, "clean up the old lamp and I'll sell it for enough to get a loaf of bread." No sooner had his mother rubbed the lamp than a monstrous genie suddenly appeared and cried in a loud voice: "What wouldst thou have? I am ready to obey thee as thy slave, and the slave of all who have that lamp."

The poor woman was so frightened that she fainted, but Aladdin snatched the lamp from her hands and asked for food. At once the genie placed rich food upon the floor in great solid silver dishes and disappeared. Aladdin and his mother, who had recovered, sat down and enjoyed the splendid meal. Aladdin's mother advised him to sell the lamp and the ring and to have nothing to do with such magic things, but Aladdin thought that would be foolish, so he hid the lamp, but always wore the ring to protect him from danger.

From time to time Aladdin sold the silver dishes to buy food, and when these were gone he rubbed the lamp and commanded the genie to bring more food in silver dishes, and in this way they lived very comfortably.

Having learned from merchants that the fruit he had brought from the garden was not glass but precious gems, Aladdin decided to send them as a present to the sultan and ask of him for the hand of his beautiful daughter, with whom he had fallen in love. When Aladdin told his mother he wished to marry the princess she laughed and told him he was foolish to think that a princess would marry a poor tailor's son. But when Aladdin told her of the great value of the fruit that he intended to send as a present she agreed to take it to the sultan and ask him for the hand of his daughter in marriage to her son.

When the sultan saw the dazzling beauty of the priceless gems he was far from being angry with the poor widow for asking such a thing of him, but said he would do well to marry his daughter to a man who held her at such high value. The sultan told Aladdin's mother that the princess would marry her son at the end of three months.

Aladdin was very happy when he heard the good news, but he soon learned that the sultan did not mean to keep his word. One day he heard that the princess was to be married that night to the son of the grand vizier. This was a great disappointment to Aladdin, but remembering the lamp he rubbed it hard. When the genie appeared Aladdin told him his troubles and asked the genie to help him. The genie bothered and annoyed the bridegroom so much that the vizier's son, seeing magic was at work, decided to give up the princess.

On hearing this Aladdin was full of joy and sent his mother to remind the sultan that the three months were almost up. The sultan told the widow that his daughter should only marry Aladdin on condition that he sent as a present forty golden vases filled with the same priceless jewels that he had sent before, carried by forty black slaves, led by the same number of handsome white slaves, all of whom were to be richly dressed.

When Aladdin learned this he took the lamp and rubbed it, and when the genie appeared he told him to supply all these and to give him fine clothes, money, and a train of slaves for his use and his mother's. Instantly the genie brought everything that Aladdin wished. Aladdin married the princess and had the genie build him a beautiful jeweled palace, where they lived very happily.

The wicked magician, who was living in Africa, heard that Aladdin was not dead but living the happy life of a prince, and wishing to get the magic lamp and to destroy Aladdin's happiness he journeyed to the palace, and by a clever trick stole the lamp. The magician rubbed the lamp and asked the genie to have himself, Aladdin's palace, the princess, and all within the palace removed to the heart of Africa, and this was instantly done.

The sultan was deeply distressed and very angry when he saw that the palace and his beloved daughter had vanished. Full of rage he had Aladdin, who had been away on a hunting trip, arrested and brought before him. The sultan wished to have him put to death at once, but Aladdin, who was even more shocked and grieved than the sultan, begged to have forty days in which to search for the princess. And if he did not find her in that time he would gladly die.

Aladdin searched for many days, but could find no trace of the lost princess. Feeling that his task was hopeless he made up his mind to kill himself, and as he was about to say his prayers he happened to rub the magic ring which the magician had given him. At once the genie of the ring stood before him.

"Bring back my princess," cried Aladdin.

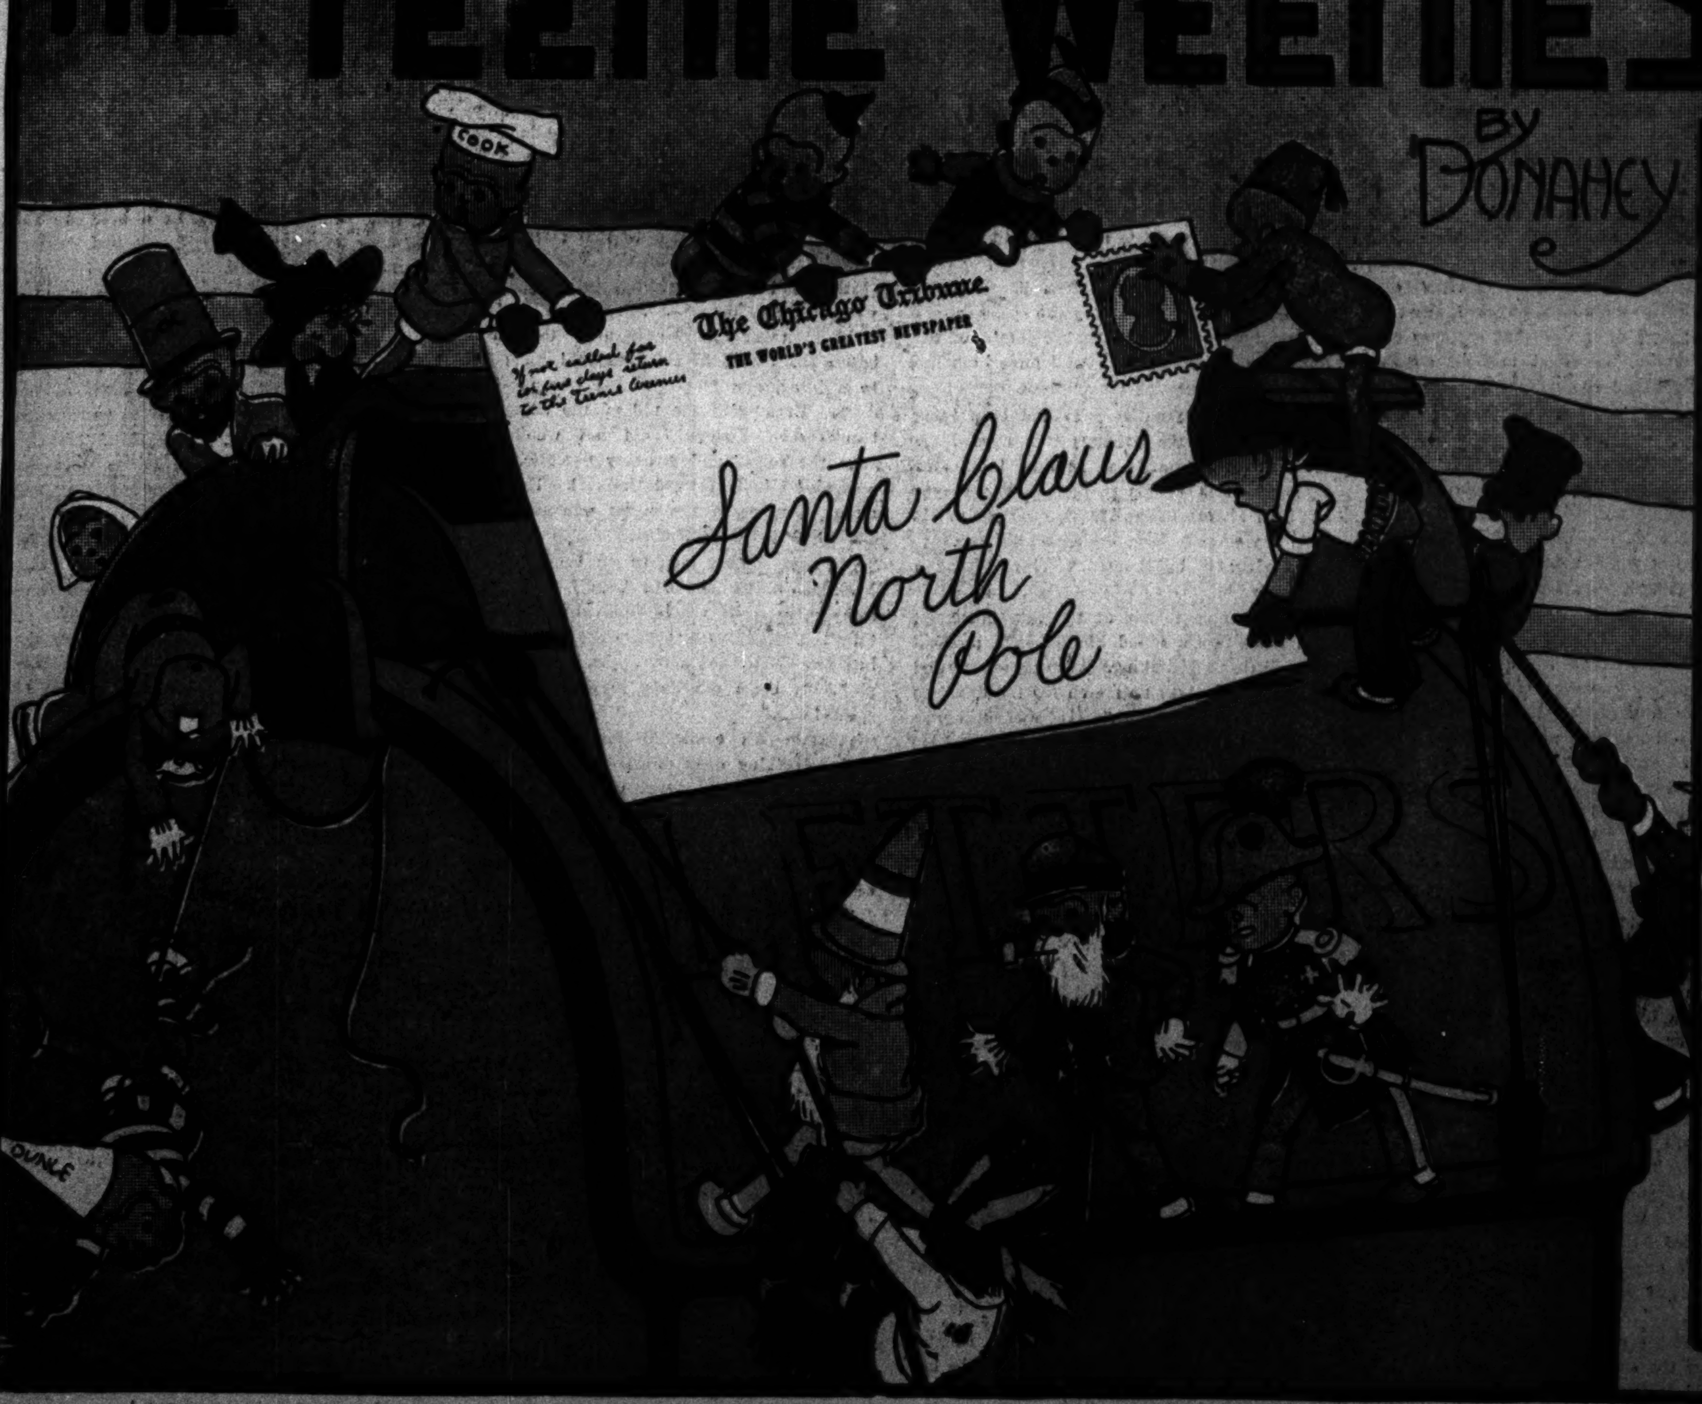
"I cannot do that," said the genie, "but I can take you to your princess." And at Aladdin's wish he was picked up and carried to his palace in the heart of Africa.

Aladdin killed the wicked magician, and rubbing the lamp, which he found hidden in the magician's girdle, he commanded the genie to carry the palace back to where it belonged. Which was done at once, to the great joy of the sultan and all his people.

The brother of the dead magician, a magician of power himself, tried very hard to avenge his brother's death, and caused Aladdin and his princess much trouble and sorrow. But he was discovered and destroyed, and after this there was no more danger to be feared. Aladdin and his princess lived in peace, and when the sultan died they ruled wisely in his stead.

THE TEENIE WEENIES WRITE TO SANTA.

BY DONAHEY



"WE'VE got an invitation to a Christmas party," yelled the doctor as he bounded into the Teenie Weenie sitting room.

"Vell, read it," cried the Dutchman.

"Dear Teenie Weenies," began the doctor, "I would like to have you come and live with me. I have a doll's house that you could live in. I would make you each a new suit of clothes. I would give you a big Christmas party. You could have a real Christmas tree, too. I would be very glad to have you. Please answer and tell me if you will come. If you do not, you see, I can not tell if you will come; if you were to come and not tell, you see, I would not have things ready. So please answer. Your little 9 year old friend. ADELAIDE TULL."

"Oh, isn't that a dear letter," cried the lady of fashion, "and wouldn't it be fun to go."

"Yes, it would be nice if we could go," nodded the general, "but it is quite impossible. Nevertheless we must write to the little girl and thank her for her kind invitation."

"Say," yelled the dunce, "we can have a Christmas party of our own, can't we?"

"Why, yes, I suppose so," answered the general.

"Well, I'll tell you what let's do," cried the clown, "let's write Santa Claus a letter and tell him what presents we want, and ask him to the party."

"Yes, yes, let's do it; let's do it;" chorused the Teenie Weenies. So they worked very hard, and soon had their letter written to Santa. "Now I'll read it," said the doctor.

"Dear Santa Claus:

"We hope you will remember all the boys and girls in the world, and give each one a Christmas present. And if you have any presents left, and you are not too tired, we'd like to have you come to our Teenie Weenie Christmas party.

"Very truly yours, THE TEENIE WEENIES."

"P. S.—The dunce would like to have a pair of roller skates. The lady of fashion would like a new opera coat. The sailor would like an auto. And please bring some candy."

The Teenie Weenies had a hard time dropping the letter into the mail box. They had to climb to the top of the box and then pull the letter up with ropes. They had to use very heavy ropes and pulleys to open the box so they could drop the letter in.

The dunce scared the Teenie Weenies half out of their wits by getting his foot tangled up in a rope and falling off the box, where he swung, high above the ground, until he was rescued by the policeman.

"You certainly had a narrow escape that time," remarked the doctor. "Why don't you take out a Teenie Weenie life insurance policy?"

"Yes—I suppose I—I ought to," chattered the scared dunce. "How—how far would I—I have fallen, if—if my foot hadn't caught in a rope?"

"Well, let's see," answered the doctor. "I should say from the top of a box to the ground would be about sixty inches. A Teenie Weenie foot is a quarter of an inch long. That would be four times sixty, which would be two hundred and forty Teenie Weenie feet."

"Jimminy," exclaimed the dunce. "If I hadn't caught my foot in that rope I—I'd now be a Teenie Weenie grease spot." And the dunce turned very pale at the thought of what might have happened.

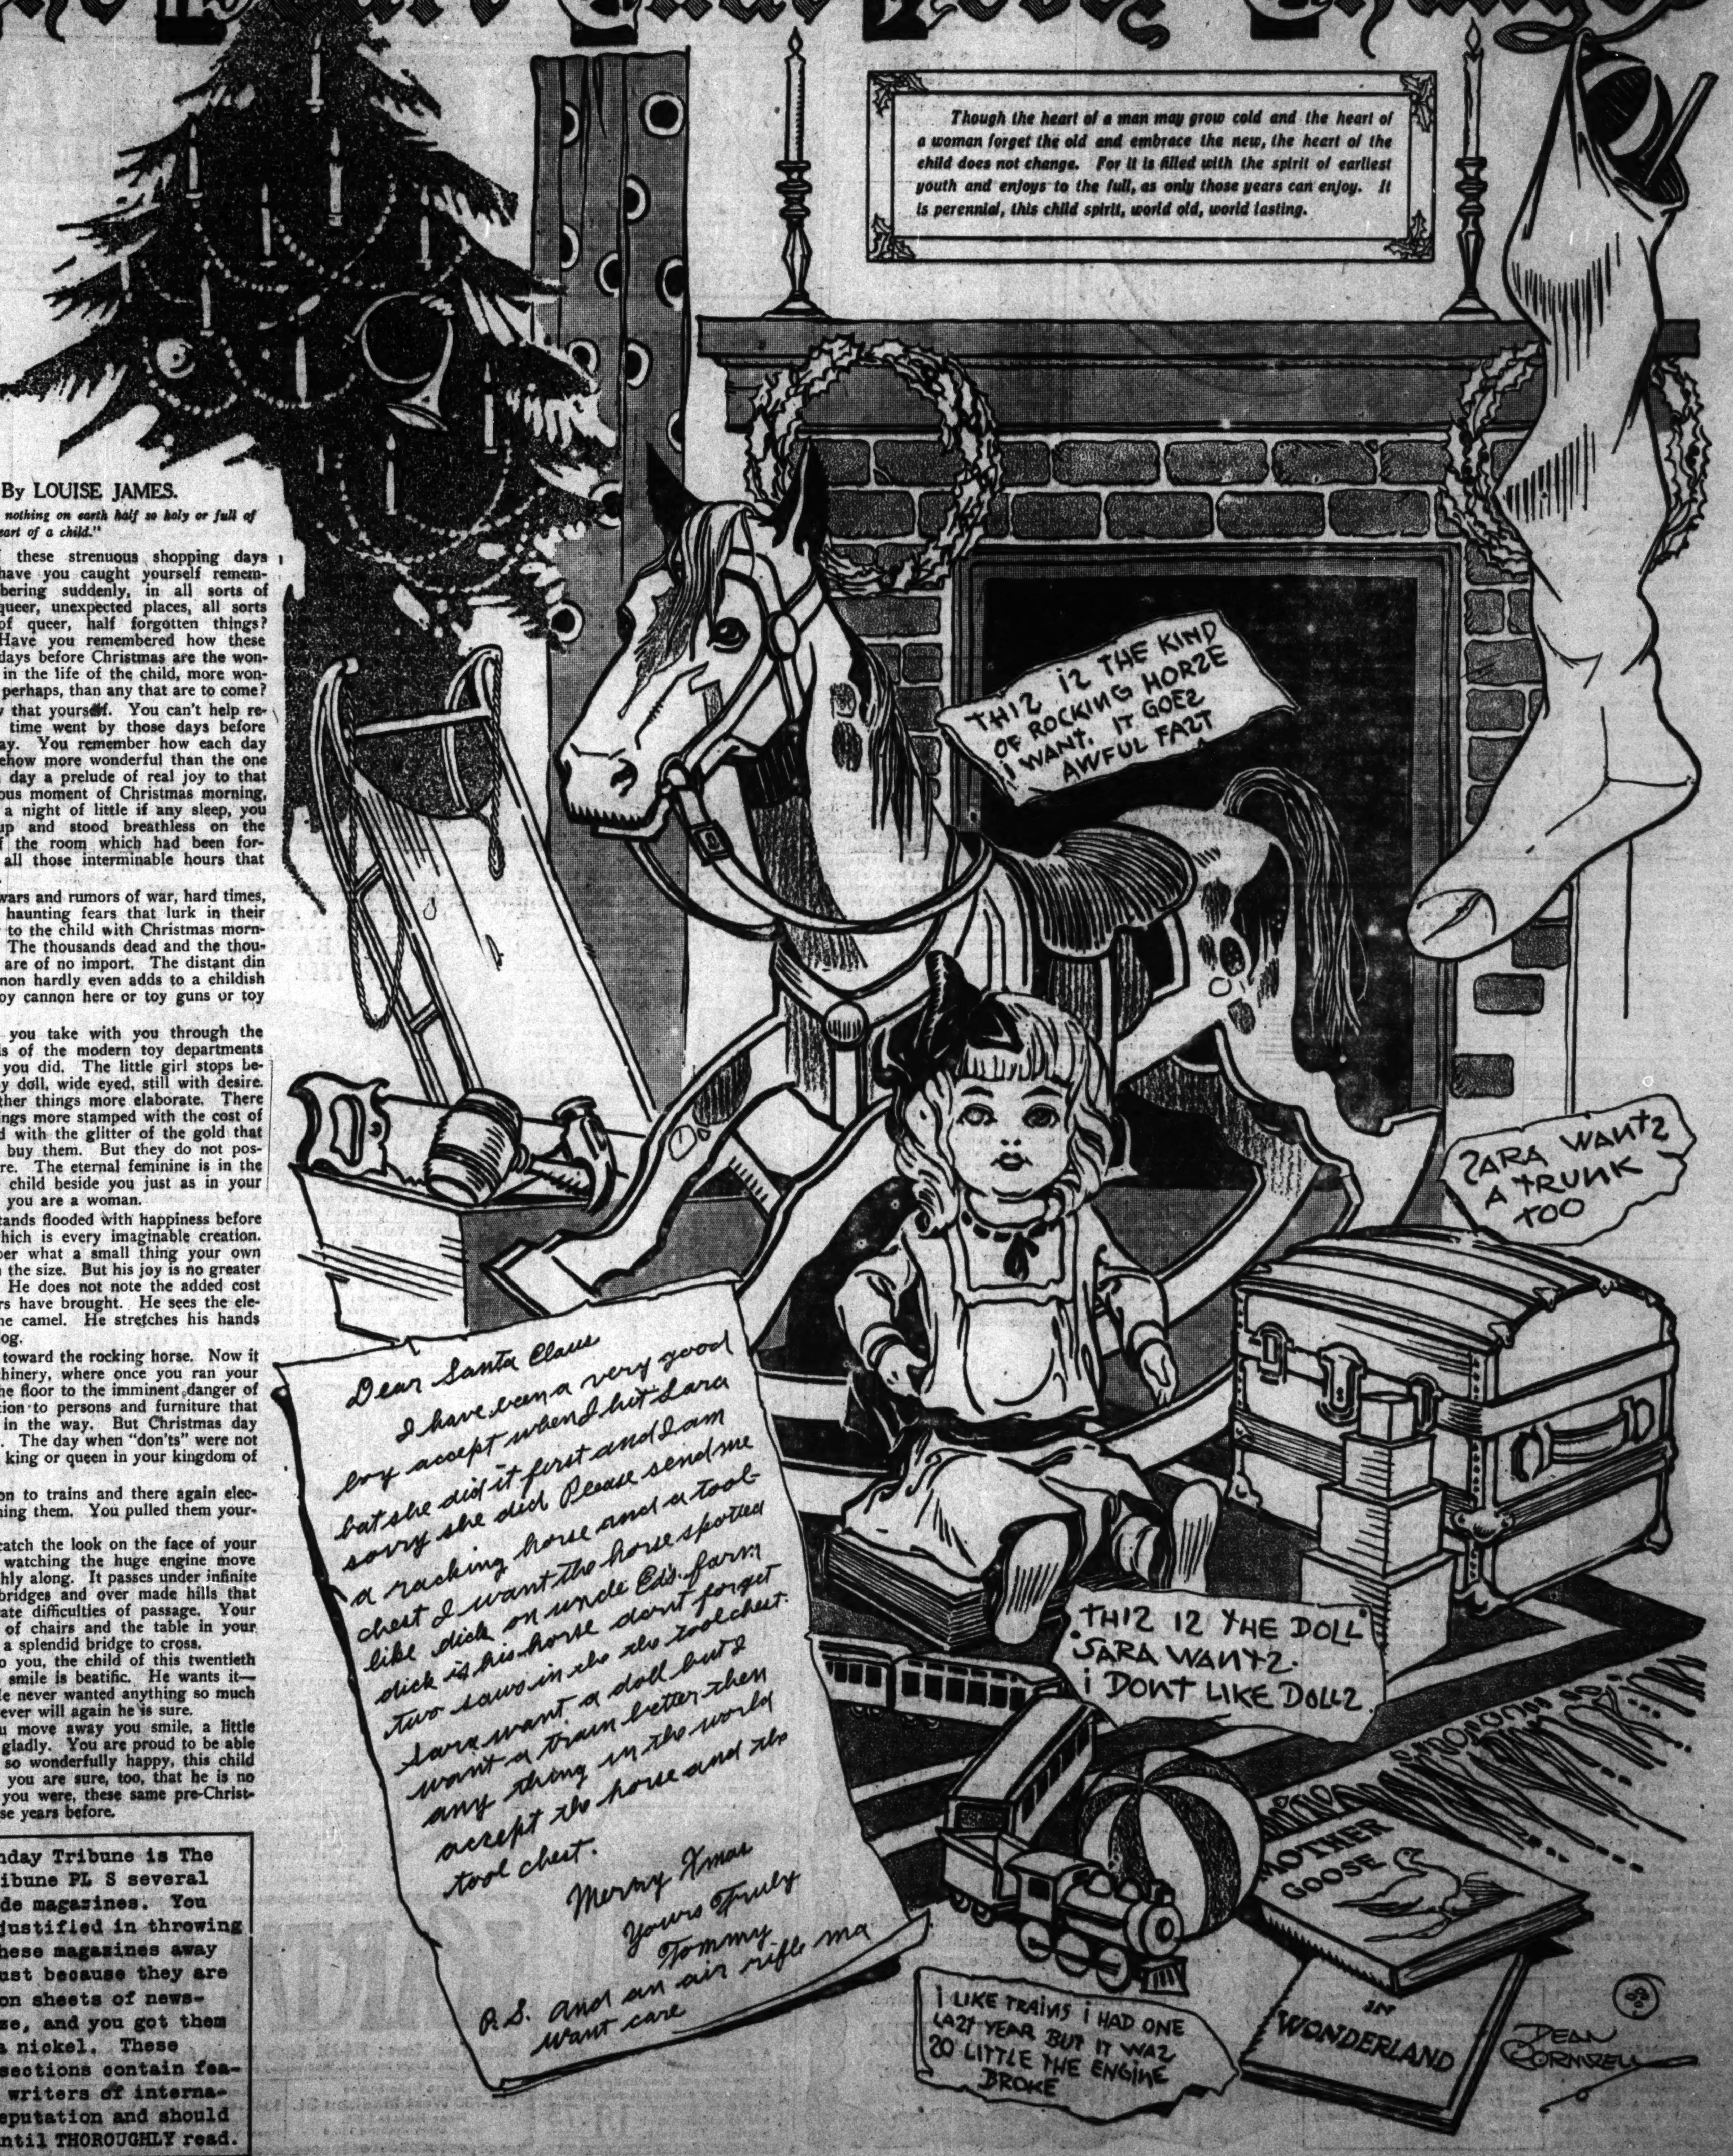
The Heart That Never Changes



Though the heart of a man may grow cold and the heart of a woman forget the old and embrace the new, the heart of the child does not change. For it is filled with the spirit of earliest youth and enjoys to the full, as only those years can enjoy. It is perennial, this child spirit, world old, world lasting.

P.S. And an air rifle ma want care

By LOUISE JAMES.

"There is nothing on earth half so holy or full of joy as the heart of a child."

IN these strenuous shopping days have you caught yourself remembering suddenly, in all sorts of queer, unexpected places, all sorts of queer, half forgotten things? Have you remembered how these days before Christmas are the wonderful days in the life of the child, more wonderful days, perhaps, than any that are to come?

You know that yourself. You can't help recalling how time went by those days before the great day. You remember how each day seemed somehow more wonderful than the one before, each day a prelude of real joy to that first marvelous moment of Christmas morning, when, after a night of little if any sleep, you scrambled up and stood breathless on the threshold of the room which had been forbidden you all those interminable hours that went before.

What do wars and rumors of war, hard times, and all the haunting fears that lurk in their wake matter to the child with Christmas morning ahead? The thousands dead and the thousands dying are of no import. The distant din of their cannon hardly even adds to a childish interest in toy cannon here or toy guns or toy soldiers.

The child you take with you through the wonder lands of the modern toy departments wants what you did. The little girl stops before the baby doll, wide eyed, still with desire. There are other things more elaborate. There are other things more stamped with the cost of living, gilded with the glitter of the gold that is needed to buy them. But they do not possess the allure. The eternal feminine is in the heart of the child beside you just as in your own heart if you are a woman.

The boy stands flooded with happiness before an ark in which is every imaginable creation. You remember what a small thing your own was, a fourth the size. But his joy is no greater than yours. He does not note the added cost that the years have brought. He sees the elephant and the camel. He stretches his hands out for the dog.

He pushes toward the rocking horse. Now it runs by machinery, where once you ran your own across the floor to the imminent danger of total destruction to persons and furniture that might stand in the way. But Christmas day was your day. The day when "don'ts" were not and you were king or queen in your kingdom of toys.

You pass on to trains and there again electricity is running them. You pulled them yourself.

Then you catch the look on the face of your boy. He is watching the huge engine move slowly, smoothly along. It passes under infinite tunnels and bridges and over made hills that present intricate difficulties of passage. Your tunnels were of chairs and the table in your kitchen made a splendid bridge to cross.

He turns to you, the child of this twentieth century. His smile is beatific. He wants it—that train. He never wanted anything so much before. He never will again he is sure.

And as you move away you smile, a little sadly, a little gladly. You are proud to be able to make him so wonderfully happy, this child of yours, but you are sure, too, that he is no happier than you were, these same pre-Christmas days, those years before.

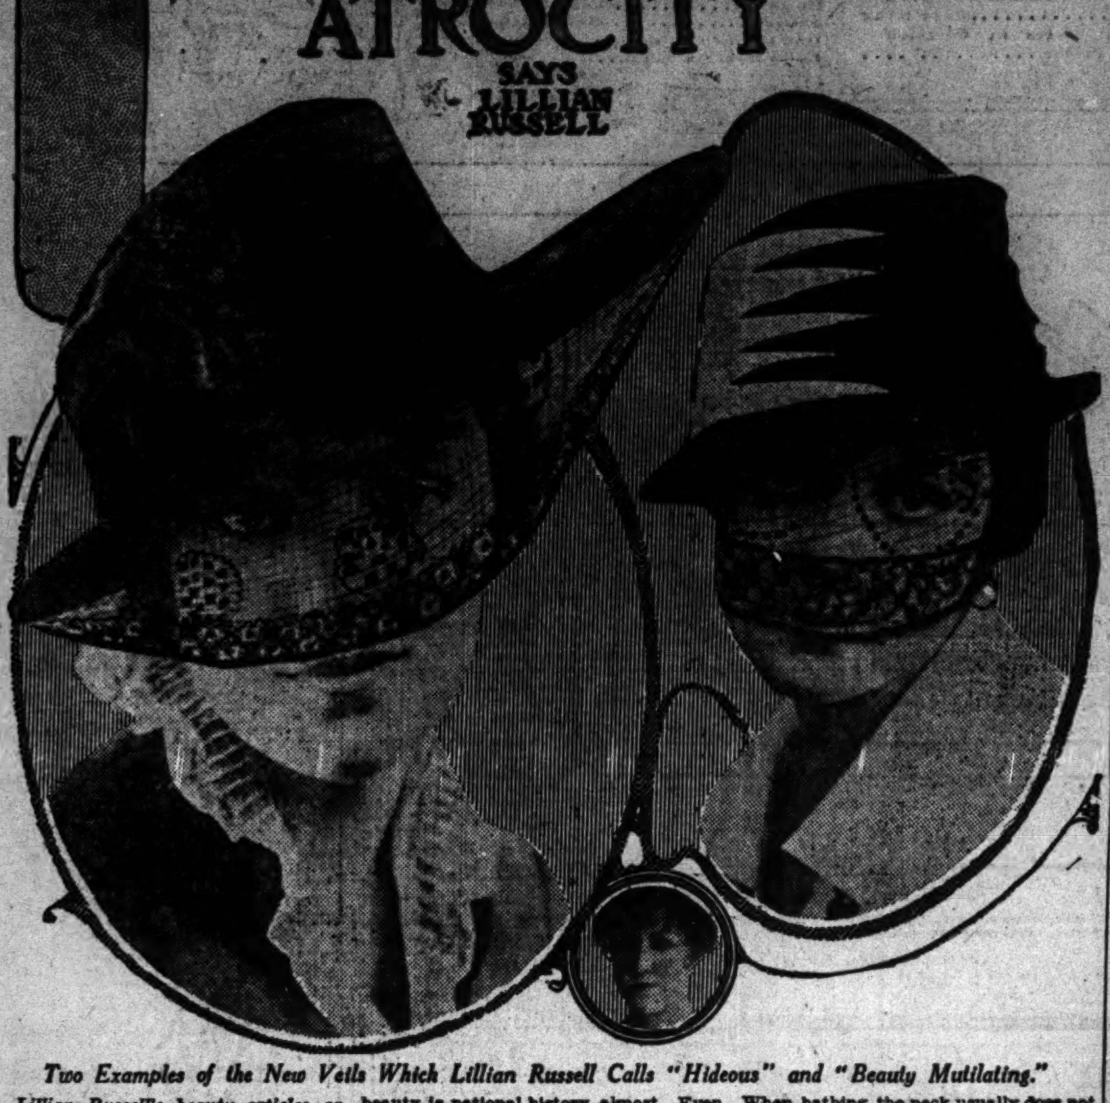
BEAUTY at HALF MAST for FASHION'S LATEST ATROCITY

SAYS LILLIAN RUSSELL



Two Examples of the New Veils Which Lillian Russell Calls "Hideous" and "Beauty Mutilating."

Lillian Russell's beauty articles appear every day in "The Daily Tribune."

[Copyright: 1914: By Lillian Russell.]

WOE is me! Beauty has come to grief! She was not strong enough to hold out against the mighty onsweep of fashion's last decree on veils!

And frightful atrocities have resulted.

Tragedy greets the sight and the sightseers at every turn!

They are not atrocities of hearsay and mooted veracity! No! I have seen them with my own eyes!

On fashionable avenues I have seen not one, but many, victims. In tearooms and hotel lobbies I have seen others with the evidence of the truth of these atrocities showing plainly—painfully plainly—on their faces!

And you, no doubt, have seen them, too—on the other woman, of course!

Just yesterday I saw a young girl, a member of a highly respected family, with her lovely face cut in two by a nose veil with an inch border of thick and heavy dots. 'Twas a painful sight, but fortunately for her she did not feel the pain or tragedy of it.

Again, I saw a charming matron of my acquaintance with a dragon design tatooed from ear to ear and across her nose. The effect was truly horrible!

I have seen faces brocaded in fruit designs and heathen scrolls. Their ludicrousness alone saved the tear that fittingly might be shed for loss to beauty's cause.

There is a society woman whose classic beauty is national history, almost. Even she has not escaped the tyranny of fashion's rule. I saw her in the theater lobby recently with a veil so mutilating and beauty destroying that I gasped.

I have seen tip tilted noses tilted up outlandishly with the aid of one of these half veil pulleys.

You don't have to be a beauty correspondent to ferret out these veiled and half veiled atrocities.

But then what's the use of sympathy for these atrocity victims when fashion has such a strong ally in milady's mirror and in milady's own willingness to be victimized.

"True beauty dwells in deep retreats," the poet sang—and we should chorus: "Indeed she does—and behind some very ugly veils."

Lillian Russell's Beauty Secrets.

MATTIE: I am sorry to tell you that I have no book on beauty. To shampoo the hair with egg, first break two eggs over the head and rub them thoroughly into the scalp. Go over the entire scalp. Rinse the hair thoroughly in cool water, not hot, for this will cook the eggs and it will be difficult to remove them from the hair. Next shampoo the hair with a shampoo made by dissolving a half cake of good white soap in a pint of boiling water. Shampoo your hair every two or three weeks. I shall be glad to give you any suggestions or formulas you wish if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope.

T. R.: Dark and sallow necks are not the result of age but the result of neglect. When bathing the neck usually does not come in for its share of the water, for one stretches the neck out of the water so as to keep the hair dry. Consequently the neck is defrauded of its share in the bath. The outer layers of skin are not shed, but remain, to become darker and rougher. If you would whiten your neck, wrap around it, while in the tub, a towel wrung out of hot water and keep it wet all the time you are in the tub. Rub the neck with your fingers after you have soaked it thus for twenty minutes or half an hour, and you will find the dead and dark skin will rub up in little rolls. Use a flesh brush after that, with plenty of soap, to make a good lather. If you will do this three times a week you will find the skin of the neck will whiten, unless it is tanned by exposure to the sun; then a bleach is necessary.

MRS. W. H.: Wax does not collect in a healthy ear. The only thing that is safe to follow in order to remove the wax from the ear is to gently douche the ear with warm water. If this does not suffice, a physician must be consulted.

* *

H. D. L.: Don't think of drinking vinegar for reducing flesh. Vinegar is an acid, and will ruin your stomach. The epsom salts, when used externally for reducing flesh, is made into a paste. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall send you instructions for reducing flesh and formula for the epsom salts solution for reducing flesh.

* *

E. A.: In a case of pimply shoulders look to your diet. Eat less pastry and sweets and drink more water. The daily bath and an hour's exercise in the open air will also help greatly in purifying the blood. In addition to this treatment apply a dab of the following lotion to the pimples several times a day: One dram precipitate of sulphur, one dram tincture of camphor, and four ounces rosewater. Salt baths are also good. Add a couple of handfuls of salt to the water when bathing.

* *

MRS. J. B. K.: Hard water, which is made so by the deposit of lime in surrounding soil, should not be used for bathing unless soft water cannot be obtained, for it cracks the epidermis and roughens and reddens it out of all semblance to beauty. But if it must be used it can be somewhat softened by adding to it just enough borax or ammonia to make the water feel smooth.

How I Reduced My Flesh.

New Game of Solitaire.

In order to make the bending exercises more interesting, I invented a new game of solitaire, which if played morning and evening reduces one's hips and waist line rapidly. Holding a pack of playing cards, place them one at a time, with the right hand, on the floor in four rows according to suit and also according to value from left to right, with the aces at the left end and the kings at the right end of these four parallel rows. When the whole pack has been so placed, pick up the cards with the left hand one at a time, according to either suits or value. Throughout the game the knees should be bent as little as possible. If this game of solitaire is played often enough the player can always win, for to win is to be able to play it to the end. MRS. W.

Walks to Work.

I had been taking three hearty meals a day and found out all of a sudden that I was getting too stout.

I took a room about one and one-half miles from my place of business and walked that twice a day. For breakfast I took toast and one cup of coffee. At noonday luncheon I took a bowl of soup, one vegetable, and one piece of bread and butter. At night I had a good dinner, taking everything I wanted at a first class boarding house. I also made it a rule to walk about twenty minutes after my evening meal.

I found after a short time that I was getting back to my normal weight. Besides I feel better than in a long time before. M. H.

Will Power Needed.

In less than five months I reduced from 192 pounds to 160. I have found the main requisite is will power and only by that means can you accomplish anything.

I used to start on a diet about once a month, keep it up until I saw something I especially liked and then I would forget all about my size. As I am a young woman I looked ten years older than I do now. My hips were large and nothing looked well on me. So I started in with all my heart to reduce.

This is what I did and stuck to:

For breakfast, one cup of tea minus sugar or cream and one slice of dry toast. Every night after my bath and the first thing every morning I exercise, bending from the waist down so as to touch fingers to the floor. I started doing it for three minutes, then five, until I could do it fifteen before I felt tired.

Whereas I used to take the cars if I wanted to go a distance of one or two miles, now I "hike" rain or shine and feel fine. I used to be a fiend for rich food; everything that would make fat it seemed I cared for. I "cut out" potatoes, gravy, and all sweets and the beauty of it is I no longer care for them.

The reward of following your advice and using will power is, I not only look and feel better, but every one I know can notice the great change in my appearance. MRS. G. B.

Drank Sassafras Tea.

Several years ago when I found I was fast losing "my girlish figure" I purchased sassafras bark and kept it always brewing, so that whenever I wanted a drink I went to the teapot and drank the sassafras tea—of course, eliminating the tea or coffee that I had always been accustomed to have at meal times. It has a very pleasing taste and I soon got into the habit of drinking five or six cupfuls a day. The first week showed no perceptible change, but after that I lost from two to five pounds weekly, till now I am back to normal, and only once in a great while do I go back to my sassafras tea. E. B.

Climbed Hills.

I have tried your common sense rules for reducing; namely, eating less and walking. About six weeks ago I had a good chance to try this method. I was visiting among the hills of Pennsylvania and every day walked and climbed the hills for recreation and I had in mind it would be a good time to try reduction.

I was happily surprised to find at the end of two weeks that I had reduced both waist and hip measure two inches. I had tried walking in Chicago, but the hills caused more strenuous efforts, with the above pleasing results, besides a lighter feeling.

I will continue this and know I can accomplish results as desired. MRS. R. L.

For over three years through "The Tribune" I have been recommending various exercises, dietaries, and baths for flesh reducing. Now I want my women readers to write to me and to tell me just what they have accomplished in the way of flesh reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Lillian Russell, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Bright Sayings of the Children

George, 4 years of age, whose activity and imaginative stories have made him a favorite, rushed to me crying anxiously over his new pet, saying, "Mamma, quick, get Jill in; the dog catchers are on the boulevard!" And I in a most consoling manner said, "Never mind, son; I'll go down town tomorrow and get Jill a license; then no one can touch him." But George, still in doubt as to surety, answered, "Oh, mamma, get two, one for the front and one for the back, like an automobile." MRS. SCHWERIN, 2714 East Seventy-fourth street.

Five year old Elsie is much given to the use of words unusual for her age. One day her mother was looking for Elsie's small brother to do an errand for her and called him repeatedly, but received no answer. At last Elsie remarked in a tone of grave finality, "Well, mamma, I guess Johnny must have mislaid himself." E. K.

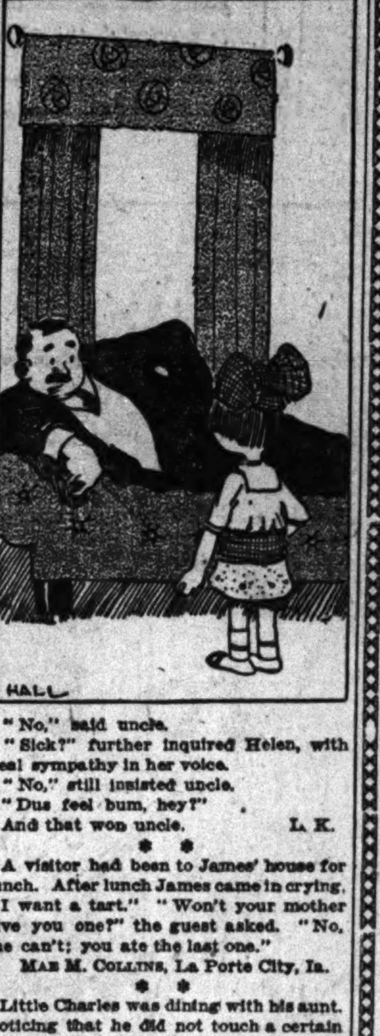
* *

Uncle Henry was a bachelor and not fond of babies. Even our 4 year old Helen failed to win his heart. One day as uncle was stretched out on the sofa, Helen leaned over him and softly inquired:

"Feefy?"

"No," growled Uncle Henry.

"Tired?" ventured Helen.



"No," said uncle.

"Sick?" further inquired Helen, with real sympathy in her voice.

"No," still insisted uncle.

"Dus feel bum, hey?"

And that won uncle. L. K.

A visitor had been to James' house for lunch. After lunch James came in crying, "I want a tart." "Won't your mother give you one?" the guest asked. "No, she can't; you ate the last one."

MAE M. COLLINS, La Porte City, Ia.

Little Charles was dining with his aunt. Noticing that he did not touch a certain dish, which was her especial favorite, she said: "Why Charles, why don't you like creamed carrots?" Not wishing to disapprove of her taste, he quickly replied: "O, yes, aunty, I just love them, but I never eat them." MISS LYDA KING, 6623 Laflin street.

At the supper table the family were discussing the number of victories of a well known wrestler. Little Robert, aged 4, sat thinking it over a moment and then exclaimed, "I just wish my papa could get a whack at him." MRS. C. P.

My little niece, Fay, is fond of animals, especially cats and dogs. The feeling is usually reciprocated, but one day our neighbor's dog seemed to be in a particularly bad humor and gave vent to his feelings by sitting in a corner of the yard, barking and howling to his heart's content. All of Fay's coaxing and petting only had the effect of making him bark louder. Hearing the commotion, I went out and asked Fay what was the matter. She replied, "O, Carlo's mamma is gone downtown and he is just cussin' about it!" S. O.

Four year old Harry was seized with the "wanderlust." His mamma brought him home four times one day and in a fit of desperation took a piece of twine and tied it to his wrist, then fastened it to the leg of her chair in which she was sitting sewing. He crawled behind the chair and was so quiet she forgot him. After a long time in a subdued voice he said: "Mamma, when little boys don't run berry far I don't fink they ought to be tied berry long." E. A. MCMARLIN, 136 North Kedzie avenue.

Little Sallie had been keeping up a forced cry for some time and, seeing that I paid no attention, she stopped suddenly and said, "Mamma, I don't see why you don't try to 'muse me. Most any little thing would 'muse me." MRS. T. M. A.

When Robert was 2 years old he went to Joseph's party. Upon his return I said: "What did my little boy do at the party?" To which he promptly replied: "I slapped Doseph." C. M. G.

My small cousin was invited to a party at our house. While there he was called away by his mother. Before leaving he turned around and said: "Don't eat all the party; I'll be right back."

A. M. DIEFENBACH, [illegible] Cottage Grove avenue.

Little Willie had seen the electric lights turned on and off, so a few nights ago when he had been tucked into his bed he pointed to the electric light switch and said, "I'm ready now; turn on the dark." MRS. W. H. H.

"The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings plainly to Aunty Bee, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Each letter must have the name and address of the sender.

Do You Know a Tightwad?

You've heard of the man who always climbed over the back fence to keep from wearing out the front gate, and of the millionaire who pretended he was blind in one eye in order to get half fare rates to the nickel shows, but perhaps you have your own pet case of champion tightwad—perhaps you have known a man or woman who could qualify for a front place in the ranks of tightwads. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject of "The Greatest Tightwad I Ever Knew." Address your letters to the Editor of the Tightwad Contest, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

New in the Realm of Fashion.

Massive necklaces of cut jet are worn.

All finely ribbed fabrics are in vogue.

The collar retires to the back of the neck.

The circular skirt is rapidly finding friends.

The strap slipper has danced itself into fashion.

A purplish red, like raspberry, is said to be coming in.

Sulzer's Raisin Bread

makes the children jump in eager anticipation when it is brought to the table. The full flavored whole wheat bread packed full of big, meaty, tasty, seedless California raisins makes a combination that they like better than cake.

And mother is glad they like it for it is sheer, wholesome nutriment. The more they eat the stronger and healthier they get.

Sulzer's Bran Bread

is distinguished from other bran breads by its delicious flavor and palatability—the result of eight years of experiments. Your doctor will tell you that bran bread is the most healthful and efficient of laxatives.

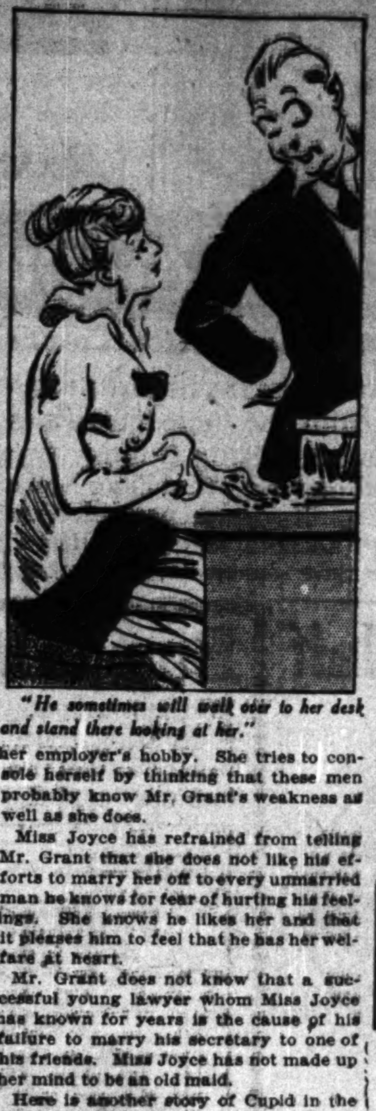
For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.



"He sometimes will walk over to her desk and stand there looking at her."

This Boss Plays Cupid.

THE principal form of amusement of Mr. Grant, a successful business man, is playing cupid to his unmarried friends. The fact that his secretary, Miss Joyce, is 24 years old and still unmarried worries him a great deal. It is his belief that all girls over 18 should be married, and it surprises him that a nice girl like Miss Joyce should be single at her age. Miss Joyce is a wonderful help to him and he realizes it, but he is willing to put up with the inconvenience and annoyance of having to train a new secretary if Miss Joyce were happily married.

Every eligible man that comes into his office, whether it is a personal friend or a business acquaintance, is introduced to Miss Joyce. The introduction is usually made in this way: "Miss Joyce, I want you to meet Mr. Green, who has a splendid position and would make an excellent husband."

It does not occur to him that he embarrasses both Miss Joyce and the man. He feels when he has introduced a man to Miss Joyce and has told him what a fine girl she is, that all Miss Joyce has to do is to be nice to the man and accept the invitations he is sure the suitor he selected will extend to Miss Joyce.

He has presented at least ten eligibles to Miss Joyce and her indifference to all of them makes him rather impatient with her, but does not discourage him. He thinks she is rather too particular, but has made up his mind to find just the kind of man he thinks she would like and is confident that eventually she will succumb to the attractions of one of his selections.

Miss Joyce is not as surprised as Mr. Grant is that the eligibles do not flock to her desk when they come into the office. She hopes it is embarrassment that causes them to hurry past her desk into Mr. Grant's office with a murmured "How do you do." She often wonders what the men really think of her—if they believe she is a regular man hunter or is, just as they are, an innocent victim of her employer's hobby. She tries to console herself by thinking that these men probably know Mr. Grant's weakness as well as she does.

Miss Joyce has refrained from telling Mr. Grant that she does not like his efforts to marry her off to every unmarried man he knows for fear of hurting his feelings. She knows he likes her and that it pleases him to feel that he has her welfare at heart.

Mr. Grant does not know that a successful young lawyer whom Miss Joyce has known for years is the cause of his failure to marry his secretary to one of his friends. Miss Joyce has not made up her mind to be an old maid.

Here is another story of Cupid in the office. In this case the manager played Cupid to himself:

"Dear Miss King: If you are interested in office romances my employer's love affair, I am sure, will amuse you as it does everybody in the office but the girl he is in love with. One of the men found out through a friend of his who knows the boss that he is engaged to Miss Smith, who is pretty and attractive. They think, however, that they are cleverly keeping the fact a secret from the others in the office.

"Their belief that nobody in the office has the slightest suspicion that they are interested in one another is almost an insult to our intelligence. Most of the time they are extremely formal to one another, but occasionally they forget and call one another by their first names. Sometimes they do not realize that they have done so, but when they do and then notice that we all appear perfectly oblivious they think it has gone over our heads and they smile knowingly at each other. He calls her into his office and consumes over an hour dictating two or three short letters which she typewrites in about ten minutes.

"One day in passing my desk she accidentally dropped her notebook and it opened at a page that was covered with the manager's name in her writing. He sometimes will walk over to her desk and stand there looking at her and then evidently realizing that it is not the thing to do, he rushes into his office and slams the door. Miss Smith goes to lunch always two or three minutes before or after the manager does and her excuses for declining the invitation of the other girls in the office to go to lunch with them are funny.

"We are all interested in the fiancés, as they are well liked by everybody, and we can understand why they do not wish to make their engagement known to the office force until they are about to be married, but their calm assurance that they are fooling us all beautifully, while it does amuse us, is rather irritating.

"T. V. R."

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Doris Blake Says

"December's Stone Is the Turquoise; Her Flower the Holly."

Articles by Doris Blake and her replies to letters appear every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF your birthday falls in the Christmas month you have many interesting characteristics. Would you like to hear what the stars say of you? You are apt to be impulsive and generous, also hasty of temper; but in spite of your impulsiveness and hasty temper you are earnest and resourceful. You have artistic tastes and if you had wealth you would be a generous patron of literature and art. No undertaking is too large for you to plunge yourself into, but you have an impatience with detail that is apt to result disastrously for your business ventures unless you overcome it.

You have also a love of luxury and find it difficult to live within your income. Your generosity will also lead you into extravagance. You should discipline yourself in the matter of economy, as even large sums will be as nothing to the extravagant children of this gorgeous month.

In conversation you are apt to be quick and straightforward, often causing pain by your bluntness, but to those who understand your nature it only bespeaks your innate honesty and should not give offense. This very bluntness often establishes a reputation for hardness of heart in those who are extremely generous.

Many public speakers are born in this month and the children of December are naturally good conversationalists, having a talent for oratory and being naturally witty. The chief faults of those born in this month are a tendency to be overbearing, blunt, and extravagant.

The women of December are not especially domestic, but they have splendid social gifts and crave appreciation above all else. They make brilliant wives, but should not bury themselves in the homes of men who are not likely to make something of themselves, although they can be of valuable assistance to men with careers. Those born in December should choose their life partners from those born in April and August. For the sympathetic signs for December are Aries and Leo, the Ram and the Lion, while the signs for December itself are Sagittarius the archer and Capricornus the goat.

If you are born before the 22d of December, your birthstone is a turquoise, if you are born after the 22d your birthstone is a garnet, a fitting symbol of the festive time of year. If you were born in the first part of the month you should remember this little verse:

If cold December gave you birth,
The month of snow and ice and mirth,
Place on your hand a turquoise blue—
Success will bless whate'er you do.

If you were born after the 22d remember that—

By those in sign of Capricornus born
No gem save garnets should be worn.

The flower for December is holly and seems especially fitting as the symbol of domestic happiness. Those born in December are also blest with the forecast of good health. There is also a prophecy that you will be unhappy if you marry on the 1st, 6th, 7th, or 9th of December, but to counterbalance this ill omen the sage says that the luckiest days in the year are the 10th, 19th, 23d, or 29th of the month. Of these days he says:

Married in days of December's cheer,
Love's star burns brighter from year to year.

She's Tired of Work.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a poor working girl, have no parents or friends, and am earning very little. Dear Miss Blake, I want your advice; be a mother to me and send your advice. I became acquainted with a fellow that our firm deals with. He is a very nice man, and I love him dearly. Since I met him I never have been out with steady fellows. I was 19 last month, and am tired of working, because I have been working since I was 10 years old. I very seldom see him because the salesman comes in for the orders, but he himself comes in when the salesman is away. He is very smart and a neat dresser. He is a man that you can trust. K. B."

Are you sure that it is not because you are tired of work that you are anxious to win him? Do not make the mistake of marrying just for a home. There is much misery in married life due to this cause—girls tired of work looking for an escape through married life. However, the way to win the man is not to appear overanxious. Do not let him suspect that your heart is at his disposal.

If he is a nice young man, why not ask him to your home and let him understand that you like him as a friend? It is hard, indeed, to be alone in the world as you are, and it makes me happy to be able to be of any service to you.

You have been a brave little girl to be self-supporting since you were 10, and you certainly deserve all kinds of happiness, and I am sure that it will come to you in time. You must not be impatient, though.

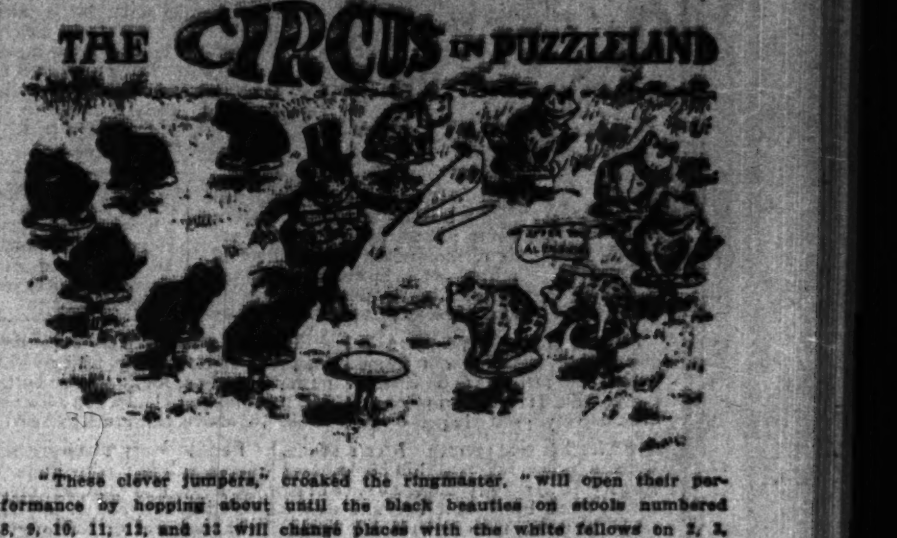
He's a Railroad Man.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am much in love with a young lady who some time ago was a schoolgirl friend and would like your advice as to how I could win her love. My only two reasons for not continuing our friendship were because I was not in a position to dress well until after I left school and I did not have an excellent education. Do you think because I am following the railroad line that that should interfere at all? C. A. H."

Of course, the fact that you are a railroad man would make no difference in the possibility of your winning the girl. She would probably be much more pleased to accept your attentions than those of some other man who did not have so steady a position as yours. Why don't you just go ahead and try to win the girl? You probably will be successful.

Have you a perplexing love affair? Do you need the advice of a sympathetic, capable woman? Write to Doris Blake, care CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

"IN PUZZLELAND."



"These clever jumpers," croaked the ringmaster, "will open their performance by hopping about until the black beauties on stools numbered 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13 will change places with the white fellows on 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7, and they will observe this rule in their movements: No jumper will go except in the direction he faces and none will in one jump go more than two stools away; that is, he may move to an adjoining vacant stool or hop over his neighbor to the vacant stool."

You see, in the first jump one of the froggies on stools numbered 2, 3, 12, and 13 might jump to that vacant stool No. 1. Now, then, can you describe the series of jumps as they must be made to carry out the performance? After this first feat the froggies resume their original positions and go through a second performance, which consists in hopping about until they are arranged alternately around the circle, black and white; that is, no two blacks or two whites are together, and stool No. 8 is the one left vacant.

In this performance the same rule is observed, that a froggie has the choice of jumping either one or two stools away to the vacant stool, but jumps may be made backward as well as forward.

The third and last performance consists in proceeding from the last position, where they are ranged alternately, black and white, with No. 8 stool vacant, to jump until they are, in this instance, paired around the circle; that is, two whites and two blacks, and so on. In this last performance, likewise, the jumps may be made forward as well as backward.

In working out the three little puzzles, it is well to keep a record of the jumps by writing down the sequence of the numbers as they move.

If you can't figure this out the answer will be found on page 9.

Love Letters

Women and War.

Following is a love letter written by a woman to her husband away at war, submitted by Mrs. Norvel Eberle, 189 Lewis street, Hammond, Ind.:

"Dear Tom: When you went marching away to war so bravely and so gallantly, so long, so long ago, do you know that you left behind you a miserable coward? I held up bravely for your sake, and determined that you should never know my anguish and my cowardice. But I cannot keep it any longer.

"I am not patriotic, Tom—I am not loyal to my country. Not when it comes to sending you to kill and maim the fathers, brothers, husbands, and sweethearts of other women—to have them try to kill you! The words 'he gave his life for his country' mean nothing to me. If you are killed what will a 'country' mean to me? I will be left a broken woman.

"The days with me are days of numbness and the nights are nights of horror. I picture you in dank trenches, surrounded by dead and dying, maybe horribly wounded yourself; and I am powerless to aid you. I see you fighting ferociously, trying to kill men that never harmed you. Remember when you kill you are blasting the lives of women and children. I am not so selfish in my grief that I consider only myself in these wholesale murder. I dare not think of the thousands of other women who are suffering as I am. It seems to me that if one woman should wail aloud in her sorrow her cry would be taken up by all the other women of this afflicted earth, and there would be such a reverberation of anguish that the very heavens would quiver with the awfulness of it.

"And I am begging of you, Tom, to be a coward. Do not expose yourself needlessly; let others take the honors. All the honors ever conferred would mean nothing to me with you dead. Not that I would have you desert. What little pride is left in this wreck of a woman revolts at that! But if the women could have their way every man would drop his gun and face about homeward, and the war would be ended. But had the women been consulted the war would have had no beginning.

"If you'll only come back to me, Tom! I've lost all interest in the old things that used to please me. If you'll just come back no station in life will be too lowly for me. All our possessions are gone, but I don't care for that. Material wants don't bother me. I get things to eat sometimes and I have the clothes I am wearing. I share a nice warm shed here at the edge of our shattered town with a mother and her three children. We do not speak the same tongue, but the language of the heart is the same. Just wishing for 'his' safe return.

"Now, dear, you know your wife for what she is—a miserable, shameless coward. And considering what a frail creature she is, won't you be as careful as you can for her sake? So you'll come back to me, won't you, dear Tom?

"Be careful, dear, not brave.

"Your loving wife, MARY."

Blues on a Holiday.

G. E. Tucker of Centerville, Ia., sends the following love letter, from a man to a woman:

"Dear Girlie: This is Thanksgiving night and I feel so lonesome and blue that I just have to write to you. I have spent a miserable day. Had my Thanksgiving dinner sitting on a stool at a lunch counter. Probably fifteen or twenty other fellows were eating at the counter at the same time. I know they felt just as I did, for they all had a lonely and forsaken look. But tomorrow they will feel different—tomorrow will not be Thanksgiving day.

"The people where I room had a big dinner. The house was full of happy people, but they were too happy and thankful to think of asking a stranger to share their feast. When we have our home I am surely going to give you an opportunity to show off your cooking to some poor, lonesome devil every Thanksgiving day and Christmas, and, if you will permit, occasionally on Sunday.

"Aside from the blues and that lonesome, forgotten feeling, I am perfectly all right. Since starting this letter I do not feel so bad that way, either. It is peculiar how the thoughts of a dear little girl will stir a fellow up. Before I met you it sure meant the blues right when I did get into a blue funk. But now I can write you a foolish letter and my dreams become rosy again, for when I dream of you I have you with me. You may not believe me when I say it, little girl, but you mean a lot to me.

"We got paid off yesterday, and I added my usual bit to the postal savings account. Got $346 there now, and the lot I told you of is all paid for. You bet that bungalow is going to be ready next fall when the big day comes that I take you for my mascot.

"Give my love to your father and mother—and be sure to tell your father about the $346 and the lot. I want him to have a good opinion of the man who is going to take his little girl away.

"Your mother does not need to be shown. I think mothers always understand and size up a fellow sooner than the fathers do. I got a letter from my mother yesterday. She is eager to see the daughter I have picked out for her. I want you to arrange matters so that I can take you to see her during the Christmas holidays. I know you will love her, for she sure is a good mother.

"Well, this is enough for this time. I will put in the remainder of the evening 'dreaming, dreaming, dreaming of you, dear.' Do you dream much? I do—lately. I find it mighty pleasant.

"Good-night, dearie. Let me have one of your kind, sweet letters soon, for I cannot help becoming lonesome sometimes here among strangers and so far away from you. Yours, T.

"P. S.—I notice several mighty pretty cottages and bungalows around here. I am mailing you some plans which I received the other day. Let me know which one you like best. I will tell you my choice when I learn yours."

For over six months I have been conducting a love letter contest in "The Sunday Tribune." During that time the popularity of this feature has grown to almost unbelievable proportions. Because of this fact, and also because the letters are of such heart interest and unusual merit, I am making a daily as well as a Sunday feature out of them. There will be published daily one letter, for which a prize of $5 will be awarded, and on Sunday two letters will be printed, for which an award of $5 each will be made. So if you know how to write a love letter or if you have one in your possession that you think has heart interest, or comedy, or lots of love in it, send it to me. You may submit as many letters as you like. They may be either real or imaginary. No letter copied from a book or magazine will be considered. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, WHAT CAUSES IT

Nature does not produce coarse, stubborn growths of superfluous hair. Such growths are brought about by the unwise use of so-called hair removers because they stimulate and increase hair growth after each removal. The proper way to remove superfluous hair is to devitalize it. This result can only be accomplished by the use of De Miracle, which does more than merely remove the surface hair. It attacks the hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Therefore, results from its use are immediate and lasting.

Protect yourself. Insist on De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover. Refuse worthless imitations. Remember, you are not asked to buy De Miracle on a mere promise of your money being refunded if you are not satisfied. When you buy De Miracle you get the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails.

De Miracle can be purchased at all good drug and department stores, including Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner and Consumers Drug Co., or will be mailed in plain sealed wrapper direct from De Miracle Chemical Co., Park Ave. and 129th St., New York, on receipt of $1.00.

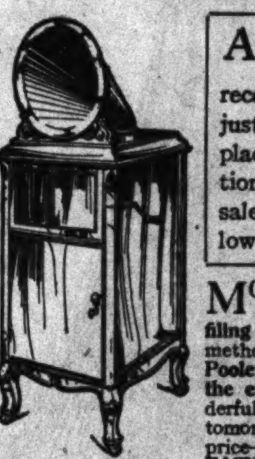
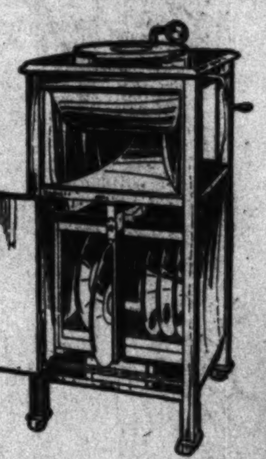
Big Sale of Talking Machines

This is a great opportunity to give an ideal gift—what is most interesting is the fact that you are permitted to buy these talking machines on our Extended Payment Plan—easy terms of credit, mind you.



ANOTHER shipment from our recent big purchase just reached us, placing us in a position to repeat the sale at sensationally low prices.



MOST of these machines are fitted with the Pooley record filing cabinets—a system that does away with the old troublesome methods and gives you the record by just pressing a litttle lever. Pooley cabinets alone are worth almost as much as we ask for the entire machine—but that's because we made such a wonderful purchase. So don't let another day go by—come here tomorrow, and buy your talking machine at about ½ its regular price—get a POOLEY CABINET and pay for the machine on EASY TERMS OF CREDIT.

How the Girl in Her Teens Can Redecorate Her Room.

Anita de Campi

FOR the girl in her teens who is just a little too old to want toys at Christmas time, the idea of redecorating her room as a gift may solve the problem of the Christmas shopping. It is such a big idea, too, that ever so many of the aunts and uncles and friends can be let in on it. It has an educational value as well, inclining the child's esthetic sense to a love of good surroundings that may go with her through life. There is no pride so easily cultivated as the pride of possession. Beauty possessed is doubly beautiful.

If it is impractical to do over the whole room, or even to furnish it anew, old furniture might be repainted and new paper bought, or certain other things might be supplied, some dainty toilet articles, or one new piece of furniture. A little work table fitted out, perhaps, or the shelf graced with a pair of candle sticks. A fancy clock (with an alarm to wake us up in time for school) is a practical possession. The range is unlimited.

One really good piece of furniture becomes in time invested with a sentimental value. It may be handed down as an heirloom, when the little girl with the flying hair is a woman grown—something that she will treasure with reminiscent tenderness—a gift later to be yielded with this admonition: "Be careful of it, dear. I wouldn't part with it to any one in the world but you. It may be a bit old fashioned, but it's lovely, and my mother gave it to me when I was 14—just your age."

When it is known that the small daughter takes an interest in her room it is wonderful how the gifts accumulate. Relatives and friends seem to conspire to encourage the idea. So many things suggest themselves as "just the thing," for the almost debutante's quarters—a bowl of Japanese lilies, a pair of sconces, a pretty coverlet, a screen, a new rag rug, a writing desk.

I know one mother who will give her girl a bundle of wall paper and I believe the child will value it. She will probably remember it in her old age. It is not ordinary paper, but something exquisitely hand blocked in the most delicate tints. The pattern faintly traced is of Easter lillies conventionalized, than which, it seems to me, no flower could better symbolize virginity—such chaste and fragile beauty.

The furniture in this room is pale gray enamel. The carpet is gray with a dull mauve border. The white muslin curtains are overdraped with straight curtains and valance of pearl colored rep silk, lined with pale yellow. The bowl shaped center light is of alabaster, and the side lights are shaded with white silk. The whole scheme is as delicately gray and white as frosting on a window pane. There is something almost sacred about it, like a little sanctuary.

Young girls seem to have a preference for pink and for blue, and these colors if not too clearly crude (for nothing could be uglier than bright rose pink or milkmaid's blue) make up well in bedrooms, when judiciously handled.

A room with a simple pearl gray calcimined wall and white painted woodwork is fascinating with pink and white or blue and white striped chintz curtains, bed spread, and cushion covers. Light wedgewood blue has a fine color quality, as have certain shades of old rose, or slightly grayed saffron pink, and turquoise blue if not too clear is pleasing.

A dull turquoise room with ivory tinted woodwork and ivory enameled furniture has the bed on a raised platform in a small alcove. The side walls of the whole room are in plain ingrain paper, but the alcove is gayly "papered" in bright flowered chintz, and the same chintz is used for cushions, curtains, etc. A cunning dressing table in this room is made of a chintz covered box with a sheet of plate glass on top of it, and above it a good mirror in an ivory enameled frame, hung from the picture molding with heavy silk cords.

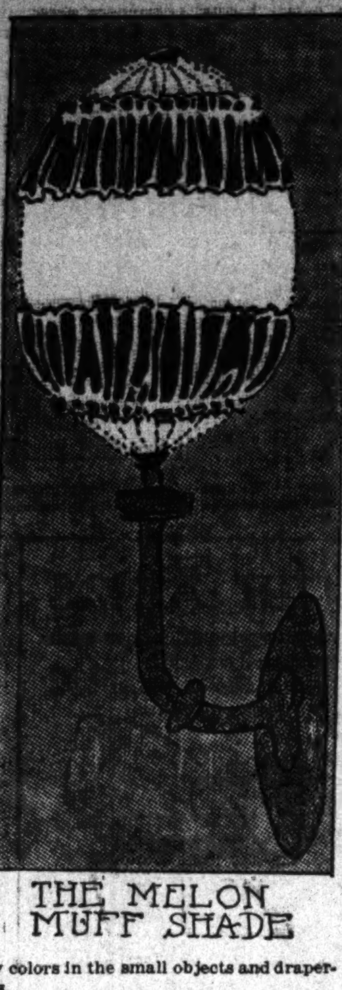
Another bedroom has the four poster bed hung with blue linen, sprayed with small flat roses. The furniture to correspond with this is too well known to need description. There is a high boy, a low boy, a small tip table, a bedside stand, and several Windsor chairs.

The honors of popularity are about evenly divided for the furnishing of girls' rooms between colonial furniture and simple modern cottage furniture, painted in light colors.

Children love variation, and to this end it is well to have several sets of curtains, spreads, and covers of distinctly different materials—all wash stuffs—two sets to send alternately down to the laundry and one set in reserve for special occasions.

Very pretty in a neutral light colored room, for example, is pink, or blue, or yellow seersucker. No more serviceable little window curtains can be imagined. They wash well and don't have to be ironed. The second set could be made of Japanese toweling—white stenciled with a dark blue design of bamboo and birds, or little pine trees. These are unlined and untrimmed and are quite inexpensive. The decorated linen comes at about 75 cents for twelve yards, and does not fade in the washing. A third set of gay flowered chintz could have the curtains faced with solid colored near silk and hung sometimes right side out and sometimes wrong side out.

Of late there has been a remarkable return to plain tinted walls, or one colored papers in cloth effects, ribbon stripe, and diaper patterns in all sorts of self tints. The monotony is to be relieved by colors in the small objects and draperies.



THE MELON MUFF SHADE

While much of what was formerly accepted in the way of bric-à-brac, is utterly taboo now, one thing is certain, that lamps and lights and all that pertains to them have come to stay. One can hardly have enough candlesticks, etc., and all of the vases that were worth saving from the general banishment of bric-à-brac have had lamp shades added to them, and have so been converted into lamps. It is the fashion now to have absolutely no glare of light. All of the lights are, you might say, smothered into mere glows, and many are required. They are employed not so much for the sake of supplying illumination as of supplying luminous ornaments. Many of them could be made at home. Some it must be admitted look more like mushrooms than lamp shades with their round tops and their gathers underneath. Some are made on wire frames and some have the silk gathered directly on top of the old glass and china globes that are now considered so hopelessly out of date.

But to return to our bedrooms for girls several things must be kept in mind. One is that if the studying is to be done in the bedroom, a bookcase and writing table are necessary factors. There should be one easy chair in the room, several stools, a bedside stand, and a chest of drawers in addition to the bed and dressing table. A good sized writing table with a drop light over it, large enough to allow of spreading out papers and books, is vastly preferable to a small ornamental desk.

Where two sisters have adjoining bedrooms it is a good idea to change the two bedrooms into one bedroom and one day room. Choose the smaller room for the bedroom, and have nothing but the bare essentials to good, comfortable sleeping in it. Let the dressing, lounging, studying, and playing be done in the day room. When the sisters are a little older they will call this arrangement the bedroom and boudoir.

Above all things, avoid clutter and crowding. Keep all objects excepting a few important ones put away in drawers. Remember that the whole tendency of modern good taste is toward restraint and simplicity. Teach the young to recognize and dislike trashy ornaments and gew-gaws. Show them how a room depends for its adornment on the harmony of its parts, and on the artistic quality of the few well selected objects that are really necessary to its good furnishing.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. M. J. D.: The object of the sun parlor is to let in as much sunlight as possible, therefore the less curtaining the better. For the sake of privacy short sash curtains are most often used. These need not be more than about half a yard in width and should be arranged so that they may be easily drawn back. I refer you to the article on sun parlors published Nov. 29 for other suggestions.

C. T. R.: Your furnishings seem to be in such excellent taste that they seem to call for a good quality of material for drapery to correspond. The four windows should have four pairs of inside curtains. Put a valance clear across the top of the group of windows. Let the draperies be made of rose colored rep silk the shade of the rose in your combination old rose, black, and tan rug. This rep silk comes brocaded in fine diaper pattern, self-colored. It may be finished with one-half inch fringe to match. Could you not have the plate rail in your dining room removed, placing a simple molding in its stead?

A. B.: For crocheted rugs, other materials besides gingham that are used are canton flannel, outing flannel, heavy unbleached muslin, and any other cotton rags. The rope is not crocheted; the stuff is crocheted over it. To make a round rug, begin with a chain of four stitches and join, increasing round to eight stitches, increasing eight stitches every round. If this seems too full, work around plain. Take up both veins of stitch and work single crochet. Rugs of this kind may be made a yard or more across, and are practically indestructible. If Shaker flannel or some similar material is used it can be dyed after making.

I. S.: Could you not enamel your cherry wood molding white, to correspond with your picture frames? Make your side walls blue to match the dresser articles you mention.

* *

MRS. J. S. Y.: Both of the window curtain arrangements inquired about in your letter are in good taste. I had not understood that you have double shades to your windows. However, that would in no way interfere with the arrangement of the mulberry silk curtains. The double shades would merely be superfluous. It may be well to leave the double shades in the window, however, for the sake of the uniform appearance from outside.

* *

B. F. C.: I should advise casement curtains. This curtaining is made of thin white or light colored woolen material, something like challis, and does away with the necessity of window shades, as the curtains which are disposed across the group of windows may be drawn back in the daytime and drawn together at night. They are sewn to rings over the rods and handled with pulling cords. They must just clear the window sill, and are set quite close to the glass inside of the window frame.

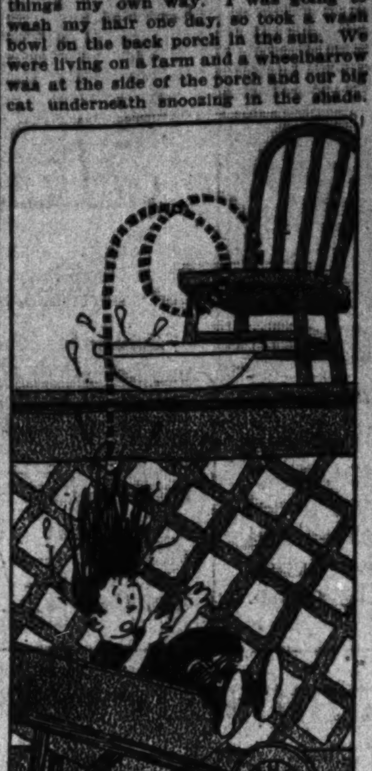
My Most Embarrassing Moment.

An Acrobatic Feat.

As a girl of 12 I had a mania for doing things my own way. I was going to wash my hair one day, so took a wash bowl on the back porch in the sun. We were living on a farm and a wheelbarrow was at the side of the porch and our big cat underneath snoozing in the shade.



All went well until I went to rinse my hair in cold water and, kid fashion, I sat on a chair with the bowl on the floor in front of me. I stooped over and tried to put my head into the bowl, and of course I lost my balance. I turned a complete somersault, turning the water down my neck, and landed sitting upon the wheelbarrow. MRS. F. O.

A Graceful Pose.

I am a rather stout man and the most embarrassing moment of my life was when I was going through some daily exercise in my office, one of such exercises being performed by lying on my back on the floor and then bringing my feet up and back as far as possible towards my head. While in this position a young lady walked into the office—and then walked right out again. I haven't had an opportunity of explaining to her the reason for this graceful pose. N. F.

Harold Had the Soap.

One day a few years ago one of my school chums came to visit me, bringing her young son Harold with her. During her visit we planned to go downtown for lunch and attend a matinée afterward.

As we left the house a man came up the steps delivering samples of soap. I gave the soap to Harold, who put it in his pocket.

We went to lunch and this was the first time Harold had eaten in a fashionable restaurant. Everything went on famously until the advent of the finger bowls. Harold, after watching us for a moment, calmly extracted the soap and washed his hands! Then, to our horror, he politely offered the soap to us. G. L.

A Large Size.

I was sent to a mail order concern to purchase a garden hose. I asked to be shown their selection of hose, and the clerk asked me what size, to which I replied sixteen feet. This seemed to amuse him. He said they had none that large, as the largest pair of hose they carried was nine inches. H. A. S.

She Wasn't Embarrassed.

In the days when hoopskirts were worn I was hurrying from a building behind a very dignified elderly lady, fashionably garbed. We began to descend the stairs together, but I miscalculated the length of my footsteps and, to my horror, found I had slipped my foot through one of the hoops of her skirt.

She barely turned disdainfully toward me and continued on her way down the stairway, I following as gracefully as my imprisoned foot would admit. At the bottom of the stairs she paused long enough for me to extricate my unfortunate member, then stalked ceremoniously away.

As there were several acquaintances among the witnesses the episode was the most embarrassing of my life. E. H. F.

Use "Gets-It," Corns Shrivel, Vanish!

It's the New Way, and You'll Forget You Ever Had Corns.

"Two drops put on in two seconds, corn shrivels, comes clean off!" That's the marvelous story of "GETS-IT," the new-plan corn cure. Nothing can be simpler for the cure of corns—and it never fails.

No Corns to Bump; No Pain, If You Use "GETS-IT."

That's why millions of people are using "GETS-IT" today and throwing away their fussy plasters, sticky-tape, toe-eating salves and "wrapping outfits" that make a bundle around the toe and choke it into pain by pressing either on or around the corn. There is nothing to stick to your stockings, nothing to cause inflammation or rawness, nothing to press on or around the corn. You apply it in two seconds. No more knives, razors, scissors or files, with their blood-poison dangers. Try "GETS-IT" for that corn, callous, wart or bunion.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

"GETS-IT" is sold in Chicago by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel, Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. Were You Married Through Flirting?

On a Bet.

When at college I bet on an election with one of the co-eds. The loser was to walk three blocks on Main street bowing and smiling at every man met. I had traversed two and a half blocks with no other results than causing the men to lift their hats and look surprised, when a handsome young man to whom I had bowed graciously and given a winning smile wheeled and extended his hand, then flushed and begged pardon, saying he had taken me for some one else. I had to confess the same. After a few more remarks of apology we passed on, but later met again and the acquaintance ripened. Two months after I graduated we were married. O. C. S.

Not a Country Girl.

My sister and I had never lived in the country; also, we were emerging from our early girlhood without having done much shopping. One day, however, at mother's request we stopped in on our way to high school to order a chicken for dinner.

"Want a pullet?" queried the clerk.

"No, no," I chirped, "you can just send it out in the wagon."

The clerk doubled up and when my sister had whispered in my ear I tumbled. That was my most embarrassing moment. J. S. D.

Vaudeville Wit.

One evening I attended a vaudeville show with my best beau. A comedian on the stage was asking all the girls who loved their beaux to stand up, then all the beaux who loved their sweethearts to stand up. At that moment some people arriving late compelled my friend and I to stand to let them pass. The comedian laughed and said he was glad to see one happy couple. F. G. C.

I want letters giving personal experiences in flirting. Did you find flirting a losing game or not? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune," Chicago.

The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For.

An Acrobat When He Dictated.

He dictated at an impossible speed. Sometimes I doubted if he really knew what he was saying, so incoherent was his dictation. What amused me most about this man was his wonderful gymnastic stunts during the dictation. One day when he was muttering all kinds of inarticulate sentences, I noticed that his voice was coming from a different angle and took time to glance up at him, losing three sentences by so doing. To my surprise I saw my employer sitting on the back of his chair with his feet in the seat. He had a high backed leather chair and the effect was grotesque, to say the least.

He had become excited in describing a machine he wished to sell and was utterly unconscious of what he was doing. This is what ensued: "This machine is the most wonderful ever seen for the money [standing on the seat of the chair and emphasizing with fervid gesticulations]. No other machine on the market can excel it in any one particular [crossing one leg over the back of the chair]. You will never again in all your life have an opportunity to secure a bargain like this [crossing the other leg so that now both feet hung over the back of the chair]. It is wonderful, miraculous, in its versatility, perfect in construction" [lightly vaulting to the floor]. E. M. S.

His Test.

The queerest man I ever worked for was the proprietor of a fair sized department store. Before he ever hired a person he engaged the applicant in conversation and then, following an invariable custom, he told her an old, old story. If the person laughed, as she usually did, the proprietor politely told her that he had no place open; if she did not laugh, she was hired, regardless of other good or bad traits. In one case I know that this man turned a girl down in the morning when she laughed at his joke and hired her that afternoon (she had been told of his eccentricity) when she refused to laugh at the same joke. A. M.

"The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of "The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For." Address letters to Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

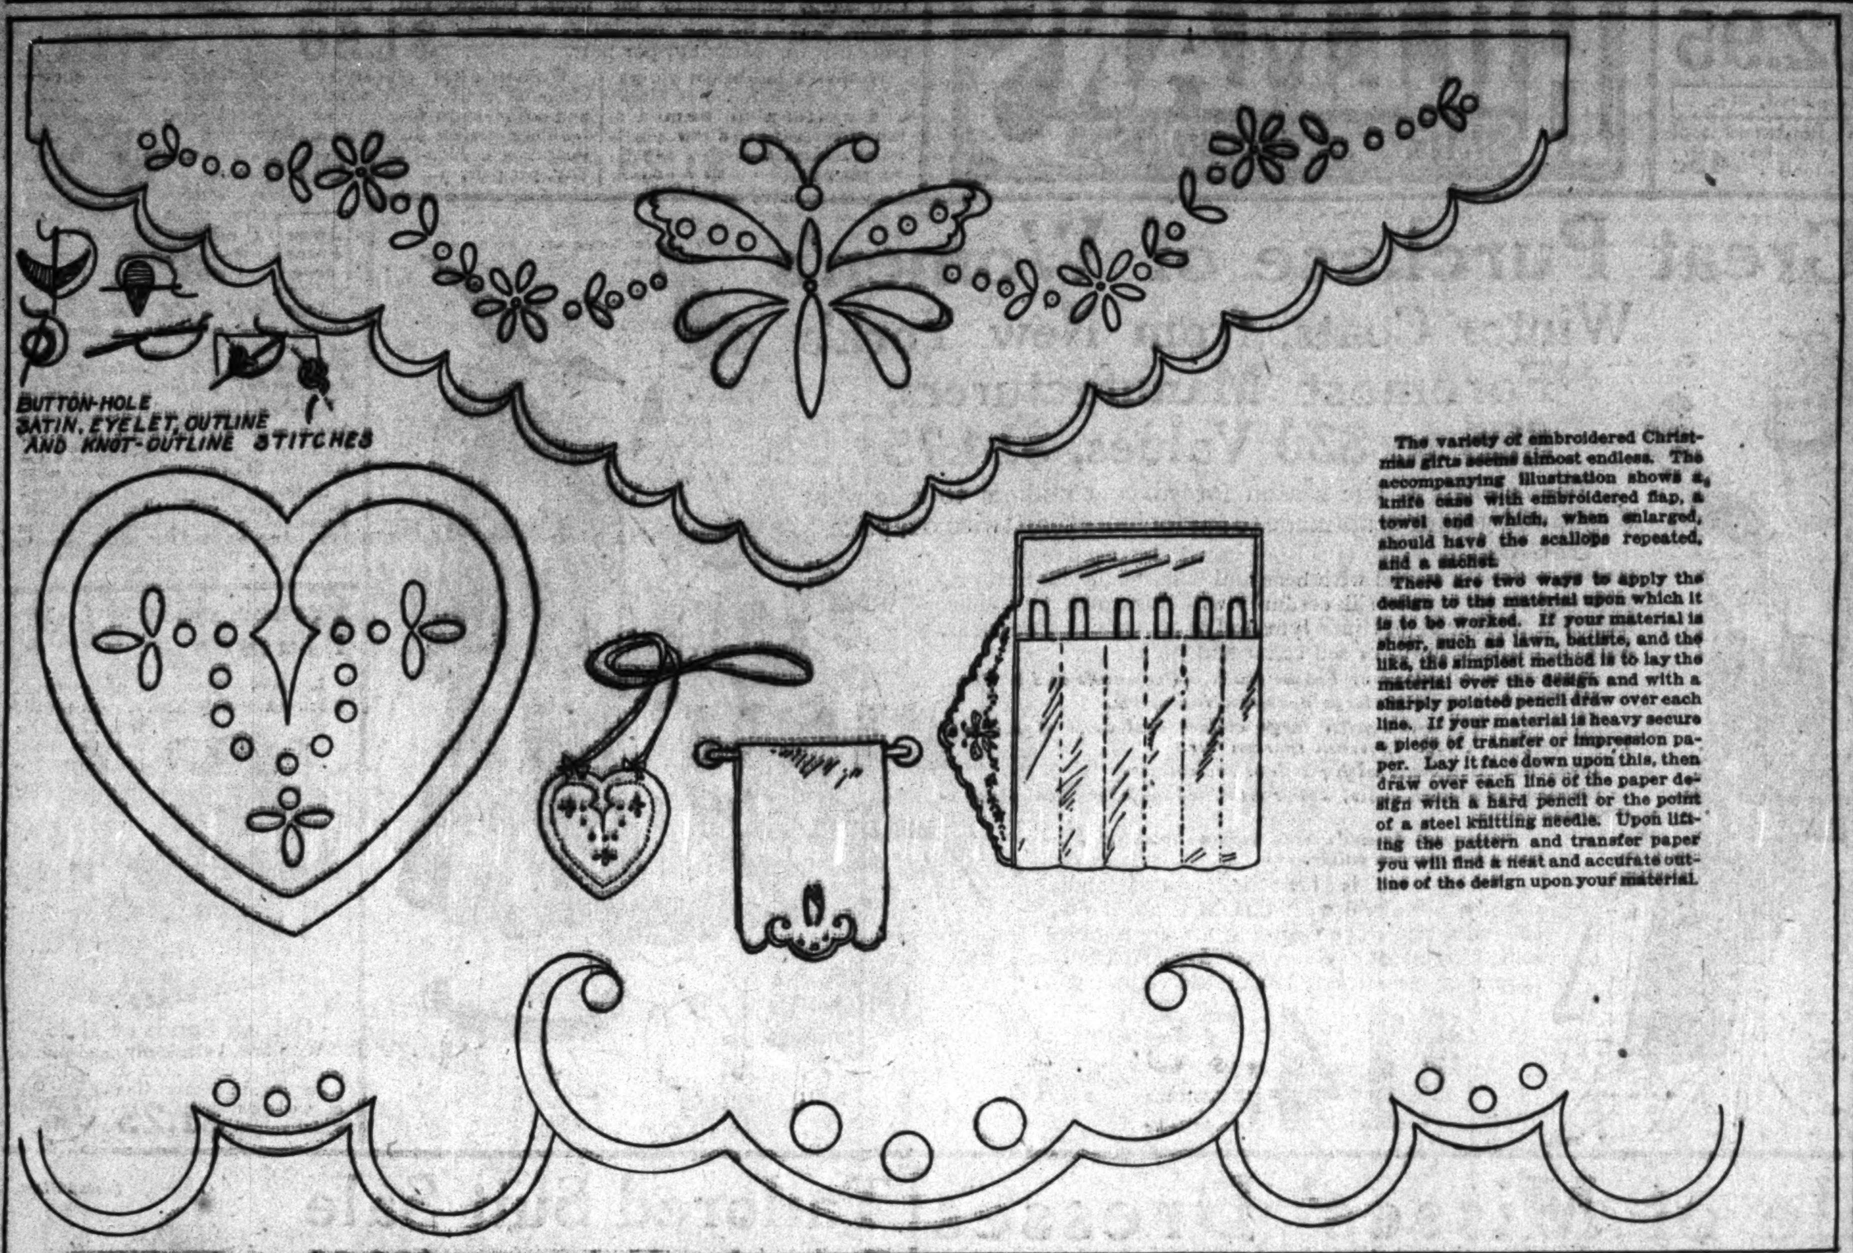
Embroidered Knife Case, Towel End, and Sachet for Christmas Gifts.



The variety of embroidered Christmas gifts seems almost endless. The accompanying illustration shows a knife case with embroidered flap, a towel end which, when enlarged, should have the scallops repeated, and a sachet.

There are two ways to apply the design to the material upon which it is to be worked. If your material is sheer, such as lawn, batiste, and the like, the simplest method is to lay the material over the design and with a sharply pointed pencil draw over each line. If your material is heavy secure a piece of transfer or impression paper. Lay it face down upon this, then draw over each line of the paper design with a hard pencil or the point of a steel knitting needle. Upon lifting the pattern and transfer paper you will find a neat and accurate outline of the design upon your material.

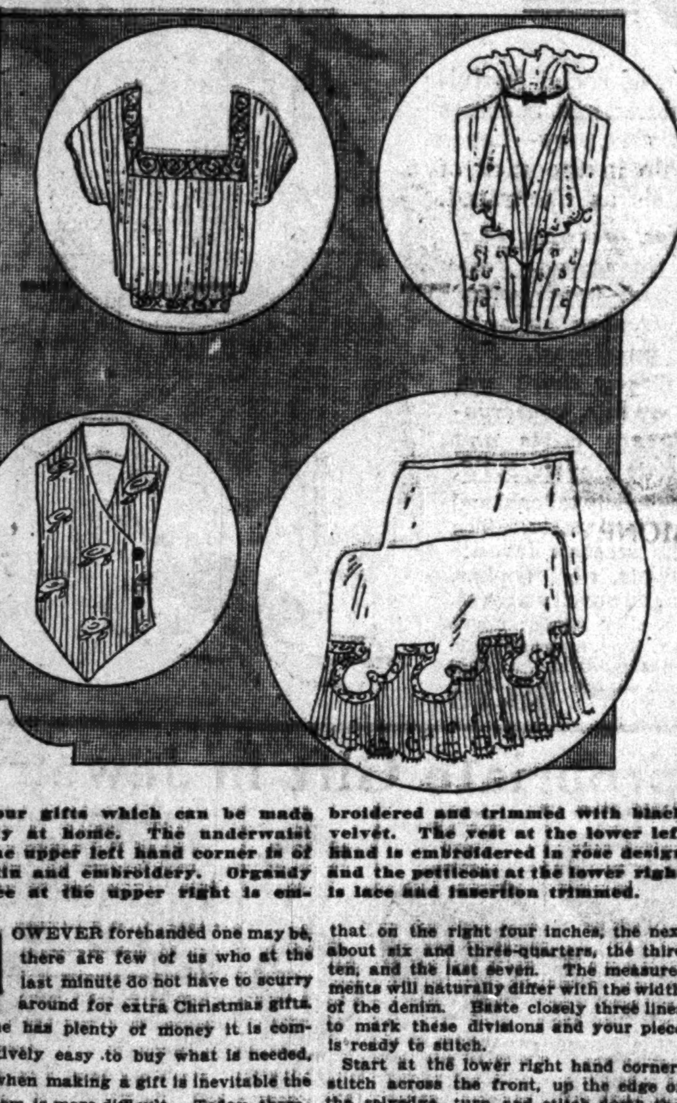
Last Minute Christmas Gifts.



Four gifts which can be made easily at home. The underwaist at the upper left hand corner is of muslin and embroidery. Organdy vestee at the upper right is embroidered and trimmed with black velvet. The vest at the lower left hand is embroidered in rose design and the petticoat at the lower right is lace and insertion trimmed.

HOWEVER forehanded one may be, there are few of us who at the last minute do not have to scurry around for extra Christmas gifts. If one has plenty of money it is comparatively easy to buy what is needed, but when making a gift is inevitable the problem is more difficult. Today, therefore, I shall describe some presents that take little time to make.

If you have a gardening friend who loves to do her own work over flowers and soil she should like a gardening apron. The materials needed are three yards of dark blue denim, a yard and a half of black tape, and a black button.

For the front cut off a yard and six inches, fold lengthwise, keeping selvedges together. Start at the selvedge about twenty-eight and a half inches from the bottom and cut the doubled material in an easy curve to the top, which has previously been measured to five and a quarter inches on each side of the fold. Curve the top toward the fold about half an inch deep.

Measure off another twenty-eight and a half inches deep in the selvedge for the two back gores. At the bottom, starting at the fold, mark a diagonal line with a yard stick or tape measure to a point measured nine and a quarter inches from the selvedge and three inches below the top. Curve slightly from there to the remaining three inches of the selvedge. Place these side pieces selvedge to selvedge on the folded front and slope the botton to the depth of three and a half inches at the diagonal edge.

Baste the selvedge of each back gore flat on the corresponding selvedge of the front and stitch flat on the machine, first on the right side, then on the left. Put on the quarter inch hemmer on your machine and hem around the sides and top of the apron. Use white thread No. 50. Turn in about a quarter of an inch at the bottom and baste a hem an inch deep and stitch across on the machine.

Cut a strip seven and a half inches deep, turn the top in an inch deep hem, allowing for a narrow turn in stitch across, and turn up a quarter of an inch on the bottom. Baste this strip across the front of the apron, placing selvedge to selvedge. It should be set four and a quarter inches from the seam at the top.

Measure four pockets of unequal width, that on the right four inches, the next about six and three-quarters, the third ten, and the last seven. The measurements will naturally differ with the width of the denim. Baste closely three lines to mark these divisions and your piece is ready to stitch.

Start at the lower right hand corner, stitch across the front, up the edge of the selvedge, turn and stitch down the width of the foot, keeping this width all around. At each basting line turn, stitch to the top, turn again and go to the bottom, again repeating, until the stitching finally ends on the bottom of the right selvedge at the starting place. This makes quite an effective trimming if the stitching is evenly done.

Cut your tapes in two pieces and fasten firmly to the top corner of each back for ties. Cut a strip of the denim an inch and three-quarters wide and a half yard long. Hem both sides in the narrow hemmer. Sew one side flat to the right hand corner of the top and hem the other end about an inch deep. Sew the button just below this hem and work a buttonhole lengthwise at the left corner of the top.

If you wish to give something more than the apron you might slip in one pocket a package of seed of your favorite flower, in another a garden notebook, in the third pruning shears, and in the last a package of wooden or tin labels for seedlings.

There will be pieces left from this denim which may be made into a laundry bag. Cut as large as you can manage, making the two halves separate. Baste together and bind round the edges and across the top with inch wide linen or mercerized tape. The tops may be left open at the seams for an inch and a half. In either case the top is bound across the front before the sides are joined. With the opened seams start at the side the desired depth.

Cover the joining of this binding by pieces of half inch tape stitched across each side, on the outside of the bag, for casing. Run in a draw string of the tape in the opposite direction and sew the ends flat together.

On the front section work three block initials about an inch long in white mercerized cotton. These initials may be merely chain stitched but are handsomer and do not take long to do if they are padded and worked in satin stitch.

A charming short negligee may be made from one yard of crepe de chine, satin, or mercerized materials, forty inches wide preferably, and three yards of plaited ruffling. This can be had in fine qualities for 25 cents a yard.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND
By MARION HARLAND

Marion Harland's Helping Hand Corner appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"SOME time ago I wrote asking you to help me find a home for my 8 year old boy. You published my request, but the only reply came from too far away to be of any help to me. It is almost impossible for me to keep him with me and make a living. I could perhaps find a home for the boy through some charity organization, but I don't want every one to know my business. I hate to give the child away, but I would not interfere with the management of any one who took him to a good home. He is a healthy, good looking, and intelligent boy, and I want to give him every opportunity possible. I know I can't give him the attention he needs, and no matter who has him, I would still be his mother. You can see the confidence I place in you when I think you can get this matter straightened out, but I hope the request will be printed soon, so that I can get an answer and settle the question before long.

"AN ANXIOUS MOTHER."

In the first letter which came from this correspondent she stated that the boy's father had been dead three years, that she is anxious to raise him up to be a useful citizen, and that she hoped there may be some couple living in the country who would care to take the child for their own and bring him up well. I print this request here in the hope that some one may see it and feel disposed to take the boy. It is a terrible strain for a mother to yield her child under any circumstances, and the only thing that makes it tolerable is the faith that he will be better cared for by strangers than at home, and that they can give him the opportunities she is unable to provide. I will be glad to give this address of "An Anxious Mother" to any one who wishes to correspond with her with an idea of adopting her boy.

Substitute for Ear Trumpet.

"To the deaf who cannot afford ear trumpets I wish to say that they should not be discouraged. I have had several relatives who were deaf and spent many dollars trying to secure something which would enable them to enjoy conversation in the hame and with friends, but nothing ever proved so helpful to them as a pasteboard tube, such as calendars are mailed in. These are known as mailing tubes and cost practically nothing. I am sure you can easily get one, and I would suggest a tube of medium size as being easier to handle. You can cover it with black ribbon or silk and tie a piece of ribbon around the middle, to hang it over your arm when you are shopping. I know the tube to be satisfactory, as one relative who lived in our home used it entirely.

E. E. H."

Such advice as this is bound to be helpful and I only hope many may see it and make use of it. A while ago a correspondent advocated rolling a thin sheet of celluloid into a cornucopia and using this instead of the ear trumpet manufactured especially for the deaf, and the suggestion seemed excellent. The counsel given by E. E. H. is even simpler, and I shall be interested to learn if it is followed and with what success. While any appliance of this kind is less valuable than the ability to read the lips, it may yet serve as an assistance to those who have not acquired lip reading.

Wants Embroidery Patterns.

"Will you kindly send me some of the embroidery patterns offered recently by Mrs. J. G. M.? I would like very much to have them.

MRS. G. M. O."

I regret to say that all these patterns have already been given away. Perhaps some other correspondent may be able to send you patterns. The last portion of your letter it is impossible for me to answer in the paper, as it is against the rules of the Corner to give business addresses or to offer articles or work for sale.

Color for Girl Baby.

"What is the correct color for a baby girl, pink or blue?

A READER."

Pink is the color for the girl. I fixed this in my mind a long whole ago by two methods, the simpler beng that boy and blue begin with the same letter. The other way to recollect it is that blue is supposed to be the soldier color for Americans, as tstified to by the song, "The Boys in Blue."

Sits All Day with Nothing to Do.

"I am a shut-in and never get anything to read except when some one gives me something of that kind. If any one will send me some magazines I will read them and pass them on to some one else. I am a bookworm and I just sit all day with nothing to do, so that if it were not for books and papers I believe I should go crazy. I will be so grateful for anything of the sort and will pay charges on them.

"MRS. J. E. C."

Here is a chance for some one to gather a "fragrant memory." I hope the shut-in may be aided by the books and magazines she longs for and that she in turn may be helped by the example of which the story is told in the preceding letter to make friends for herself who will cheer her loneliness.

Magazines to Give Away.

"If a Catholic womanor girl would like a number of fine Catholic magazines and is not able to subscribe for such, I wish she would communicate with me. I have some to give away.

"MISS M."

We have many Catholics among our readers and I will gladly give the address of Miss M. to any who wish it.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff.

Makes hair soft and fluffy. Stops itching of the scalp.

DON'T BLAME YOUR MIRROR

Many ladies compel their mirrors to bear silent witness to needless hair destruction. Day after day they see beauty and attractiveness despoiled by the removal of great combfuls of slightly diseased hair that could be saved. If your mirror could talk it would plead with you to "save your hair—not the combings." It can be done with Newbro's Herpicide which eradicates the contagion that causes dull, brittle and lusterless hair, also dandruff and falling hair. Correct this and the hair's natural luster and abundance will return. Almost extraordinary results. An exquisite hair dressing.

Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Company, Dept. 107B, Detroit, Michigan, for sample and booklet.

Two Sizes—50 cents and $1.00. Sold and guaranteed at all Toilet Goods Counters.

When you call for Herpicide, do not accept a substitute. Applications at prominent Barber Shops.

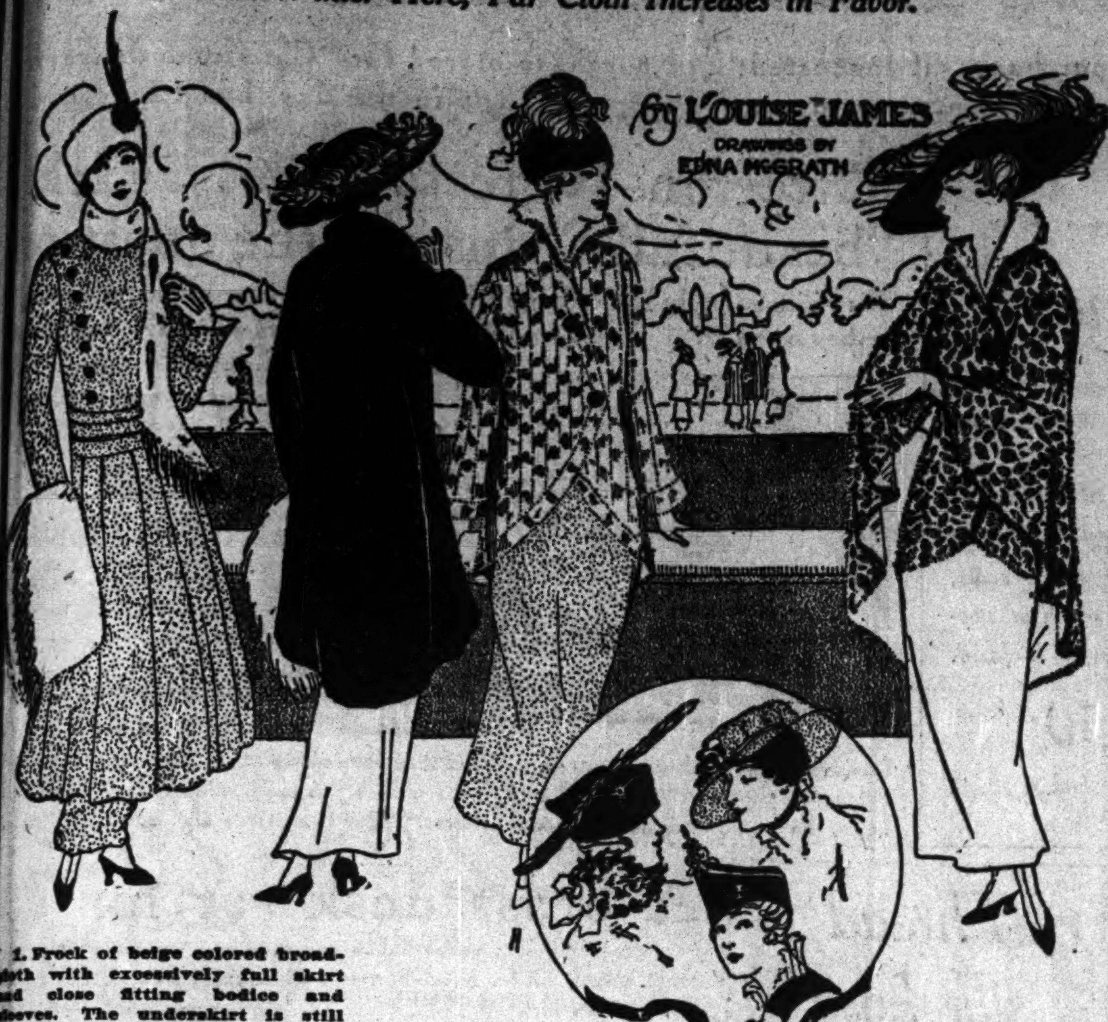
With Winter Here, Fur Cloth Increases in Favor.

By LOUISE JAMES

DRAWINGS BY EDNA McGRATH



1. Frock of beige colored broadcloth with excessively full skirt and close fitting bodice and sleeves. The underskirt is still glimpsed. The buttons are covered with broadtail fur cloth. And the fur set of ermine adds distinction to the whole costume. The shoe tops are of the same beige color cloth with patent leather vamps.

2. Striking coat of black velvet, with fur cloth used for collar and cuffs. It is lined with a gorgeous shade of peach color silk. The hat is of the same black velvet, flaring wide, according to many of the latest fashions. The ostrich feathers which curl about the brim of the hat are tinted the same gold shade. The skirt which shows beneath the coat is of Burgundy red faille, which combines handsomely with the rich blackness of the wrap.

3. Rather short and yet in perfect fashion is this coat of baby lamb cloth. This cloth is one which it has taken an American manufacturer to be most successful with, and there is something both serviceable and attractive in any garment which is made of it. The hat is small, close fitting, and is of black velvet with ostrich trimming upon it.

4. Military in shape, this snug little hat fits the head in demurest fashion and then permits is trimming to flare wide in fantastic fashion.

5. On shape alone depends this hat for its style and general effect. The tiny ornament in front is of ribbon and jet combined.

6. Picturesque in its soft curves, which frame the face becomingly, this hat possesses a youth and charm not to be excelled in many models of higher price and more expensive trimmings.

7. Part cape, part coat, this wrap of broadtail fur cloth flares wide enough to satisfy Dame Fashion and yet clings close enough for warmth. The hat is one of the wide brimmed sailors with the stiffness of its brim atoned for by the softness of its feather trimming.

THERE is no substitute for fur like fur cloth. And since for the most part furs are expensive, and since the majority of women are trying to economize in some way or other, there has been an added impetus to the use of fur cloths this season. Indeed, it only seemed to take the arrival of the first cold spell to lift this same material on a tremendous wave of popularity.

Perhaps, too, this popularity has been largely due to the success that the American manufacturer of textiles has had in his production of the different goods. His baby lamb cloth is of such wonderful weave that only the most minute eye can detect it from the actual baby lamb skin. And the same is true in the case of the broadtail cloth.

Of course the woman who does not have to consider cost in the buying of her clothes probably will prefer under all circumstances the real fur, not so much because of the difference in looks, but because she always prefers the real to the substitute. But even these women are adopting the fur cloth for trimmings and are finding that they can get very handsome effects from them.

I have seen some tailored frocks of wool and velvet and even of satin which are stunningly trimmed with this fur cloth. One of them was of striped velvet. The skirt was plain, a circular model, and bound about the bottom with the broadtail fur cloth. Over this there was a tunic which fell at some points below the hem of the skirt and at other places rose some feet above it. Fur cloth was used for the collar and also for the vest.

The hat which was worn with it was of the same broadtail cloth, of the best quality, which is as light and supple as satin. This same broadcloth fur is figuring largely in millinery just now, and it is extremely serviceable, wearing an endless time.

Again, fur cloth is being worn considerably for belts. It is particularly soft and clinging and gives a note of festivity to an otherwise simple frock. This fur cloth, however, should be used sparingly. Some people think that it should be less abundant than fur, but from all the prettiest models I have seen it appears to fill the same rôle as fur and to stand the same methods of application.

In these tailored frocks, which are for the most part fur or fur cloth trimmed, it is interesting to watch how, with the dress made on close fitting lines, the underskirt, wherever there is one, is always made to take the place of the petticoat. To have the overskirt gathered about the hips and then fall wide between three and four yards about the hem and finished either with scallops or with a picot edge is one of the essentially fashionable modes. In this case it is preferable to have the underskirt of some soft silk and then at the knee point have the fur or cloth band set on.

Now that the fashions show every sign of sobering, and since a greater value is being set upon the practical side of dress, the woman who has left youth behind her and who leans more and more to the quiet, womanly styles finds that she has a wide field to choose from. The ultra girlish fashions are being thrust aside.

For instance, there are the three-quarter coats and fur hemmed mantlets, which are essentially the prerogative of the staid and yet which are so touched with an appealing novelty and grace that the daughters as well as the mothers are adopting them. There are the widened skirts, the deep basques, the collared blouses—all of these the precise opposites of the modes of a season ago, definitely feminine, and yet absolutely for the woman who acknowledges frankly that she and girlhood are many years apart.

Then, too, the way fashion is softening the outlines this season is universally becoming. The new sleeves cloak the arms without exaggeration and the wrist frills and pointed cuffs add to their delicacy of outline the daintiness of new textures, while the question of a collar is left entirely to the individual woman and her own particular type.

Among some of the other fashion items that only await a trial from women of advancing years and who still have every reason to want to be stylishly and attractively dressed are the following:

One is a black pin spot net corsage blouse to be worn in the house with a soft silk skirt. The pointed pelerine collar of delicate ivory lace rises at the back of the neck in a modified medici form and in the front is folded en fichu. Above it is a black moire neck band ornamented with jet or rhinestones.

Then there is a millinery set to recommen, comprising a neck ruffle, a muff, and toque with a soft brim, the whole made of clear soft black lace and velvet with the relief of a dull gold rose on the muff.

I have lately seen some particularly smart hats intended for everyday wear. These were of the modified canotier type covered with soft, waterproof suède skin. The trimming, which consisted of jaunty bows and loops, was of the same material, and the color of the model I have in my mind was a clear khaki. Some of the leading Parisian tailors are making beautiful and eminently useful coats and skirts in the same material, rainproofed. With such costumes the hat just mentioned would be exactly the correct thing.

It may be said that the little fur toque, or cap, remains the prominent favorite of the winter season. Many different furs are used for these fascinating models, some expensive, others—equally effective—quite moderate in price. For instance, take an absolutely delightful set which consisted of a toque and straight tie in gray squirrel. The toque was something between a Russian cap and an ordinary turban. It was round, rather high, and it fitted well down over the hair. In passing I must mention that such a toque should be worn much on the side of the head. The tie was simple in detail—a straight length of fur finished off with a fringe of tails which was fastened in a loose knot at one side. The toque was trimmed with two rounded butterfly wings made of quilled ribbon; one was cherry red and the other dark gray.

Varied Activities of Women.

Linn county, Ore., has five postmistresses.

American girls spend $134,000,000 a year for candy.

Over 43,000 girl babies were born in Ohio last year.

Woodbury, N. J., has a woman's auxiliary fire company.

New York state has 432 women's clubs with a membership of over 300,000.

Working women in Idaho and Montana are only allowed to work nine hours a day.

Six women are now taking the agricultural course at the Wisconsin State college.

One-half of the women in the United States marry before they are 25 years old.

Mrs. Cuncliffe Owen organized the Sportsman's battalion of Gen. Kitchener's army.

Forty per cent of the votes cast in Kansas at the recent election were recorded by women.

The Women's Emergency corps in England has a large force of girls employed in making toys.

Mrs. Margaret Ash has been employed for the last fifty-one years in the treasury department at Washington.

Miss Eloise Murray has been appointed as school tax collector of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. She is only 21 years of age and is an actress.

Sixty per cent of the women employed in the silk industry in New Jersey have husbands, while in the same industry in Pennsylvania the per cent is something over 37.

In assisting a band of cowboys in driving a herd of cattle from Portland, Ore., to Fairbanks, Alaska, Miss Grace Carter spent thirty-two days in the saddle.

Answer to Circus Puzzle.

The black and white frogs are made to change positions by jumping in the following order: 13 to 1, 2 to 13, 3 to 2, 1 to 3, 12 to 1, 11 to 12, 13 to 11, 2 to 13, 4 to 2, 5 to 4, 3 to 5, 1 to 3, 12 to 1, 10 to 12, 9 to 10, 11 to 9, 13 to 11, 2 to 13, 4 to 2, 6 to 4, 7 to 6, 5 to 7, 3 to 5, 1 to 3, 12 to 1, 10 to 12, 8 to 10, 9 to 8, 11 to 9, 13 to 11, 2 to 13, 4 to 2, 6 to 4, 5 to 6, 3 to 5, 1 to 3, 12 to 1, 10 to 12, 11 to 10, 13 to 11, 2 to 13, 4 to 2, 3 to 4, 1 to 3, 12 to 1, 13 to 12, 2 to 13, 1 to 2.

The solution to the second performance, wherein the froggies were required to hop about until they alternated in color, is worked out by the following sequence of moves: 2 to 1, 13 to 2, 12 to 13, 1 to 12, 3 to 1, 4 to 3, 2 to 4, 13 to 2, 11 to 13, 10 to 11, 12 to 10, 1 to 12, 3 to 1, 5 to 3, 6 to 5, and 4 to 6.

The third feat, wherein the froggies were grouped in pairs, is performed by the following moves: 9 to 8, 7 to 9, 6 to 7, 8 to 6, 10 to 8, 11 to 10, 9 to 11, 7 to 9, 5 to 7, 4 to 5, 6 to 4, 3 to 6, 10 to 3, 12 to 10, 13 to 12, 2 to 13, 1 to 2.

TROOPS STILL PUSH ONWARD

Under the Leadership of General Cleanup, They Steadily Advance Toward the Front

Armies of Germs Fall Back While Victorious Banner of Kitchen Klenzer Is Carried Aloft.

AT THE FRONT, Dec. 6.—Unbroken triumph is reported from the center and from right and left wings of the mighty Kitchen Klenzer army, under General Cleanup's splendid leadership. Entire brigades of the enemy—in uniforms of all the kinds of germs known to the world of Filth, have steadily fallen back, leaving the K-K forces in absolute control of every foot of ground thus far covered.

Repeated flanking movements have been attempted by the foe, but our forces have met them at every turn. General Cleanup's army is making a good country of this disputed territory.

This is the most splendid war your correspondent has ever had the privilege of reporting. Dirt is defeated whenever the K-K batteries are turned against its germ-infested ranks. We clean as we go. Long live General Cleanup and his Kitchen Klenzer army!

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

Cut these out and paste them in your scrap book. Cut them out by the single column, as at times the cook book will be printed in two columns and at other times more.

Here's the Way to Make Your Christmas Candies.

Jane Eddington's articles are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

First Principle.

STIR all the materials thoroughly together and keep on stirring them until the candy reaches the boiling point, then stop unless directions are to the contrary. Fudges will be too thick at the bottom, too thin on the top of the cooking liquid, and will easily burn, if the blending is not perfect and the sugar perfectly dissolved.

Buy a candy thermometer. Sugar cooking takes more or less time according to the weather, and a thermometer saves the patience. It will prevent you from taking off slow cooking sugar before it is done, a great mistake often made, and, even more important, it will keep you from overcooking your candy. Directions of importance go with it. Be careful not to dip it into deep sugar or fast boiling sugar so far that you cannot read it. This makes work, and while washing it your candy may cook too long.

Use an asbestos mat under your saucepan. It will take much longer for the candy to cook, but it will not burn on.

In trying out recipes in the free books given by makers of sugars, sirups, and chocolate, the safest or quickest to cook are those in which there is a quarter as much liquid added as sugar. The more chocolate, the safest or quickest to cook to the desired degree, and the more patience required on your part. A fudge with two cups of sugar and one-half cup of milk will cook much quicker than when there are two cups of sugar and a cup of milk.

French Nougat.

This is a candy for making into fancy shapes like cups and saucers and other dishes, candy furniture, etc. Melt one cup of sugar in the frying pan over an asbestos mat, and stir as much as is necessary to distribute the heat, raising it from the fire if it threatens to burn. Have ready a cup of finely chopped almonds, take the melted sugar off the fire, and stir these into it. You will have a stiff looking mass, which you must put into a buttered or oiled pan and set by the oven door to keep warm. It must not get cold, as it is brittle. A marble greased and warm is almost necessary for the working of this, or for rolling it into thin sheets, which may be cut into any shape, but a warm oiled platter and a small bottle may be used.

For making a saucer have ready a little greased patty pan, roll out a ball of the nougat the right size, and press it into this; roll across the top of the pan to break off the edges, then take out and set aside. Make the requisite number.

A little tin cup may be used for making cups, a round piece for the bottom and a strip rolled and joined for the sides. Fit the sides first, put the mold into the oven for a moment, drop the round bottom into it, and press the sides down on it. The jointure will be perfect. Tiny strips for the handles dipped in a thick sirup may be fastened on for handles.

Any number of other containers for sweets can be made.

Brown Sugar Fudge.

One cup of the brownest sugar, wholly unbleached, one cup of granulated sugar, half a cup of milk or, better, cream [if cream use up to a cupful], two squares of chocolate, and three tablespoons of corn sirup. Scrape up the two squares of chocolate with a knife, add one-half of the milk, cook and stir smooth, then add the rest of the milk and stir smooth, then add the other ingredients and a little piece of butter if you choose, to make it richer. Keep stirring until it boils, then proceed just as though you had used two cups of granulated sugar—that is, cook gently to the soft ball or the 232 degree stage—set immediately in cold water to stop the boiling, after a minute whisk with an egg whisk [better than a spoon] for eight or ten minutes, and just as it begins to sugar turn it into a greased pan, adding chopped nuts if you choose. If it will not spread smoothly press it down with the hands as you would a loaf of anything. You may also press in some chopped nuts when you get it smooth and while it is still warm.

The green pistachios are good for the Christmas candies, but fudge is always best the same day it is made. It must be wrapped up carefully or it will get too dry after that. Light brown sugar may be used, but the darkest is more of a rarity.

If the atmosphere of the day is such that the candy thermometer refuses to register quickly, after twenty-five minutes of cooking at 220 degrees, the fudge can be stirred to a creamy consistency as well as though cooked for ten minutes, and run up to 232.

Preparing Almonds for Candy.

To blanch almonds, pour boiling water over them, let stand five minutes, pour off, add cold water, then rub off the skins. If the skins are hard to come off put on the stove in cold water, bring to a boil, boil five minutes, then dash into cold water. This is not as good for the nuts as the other method. If the almonds are to be dipped in chocolate put them on a pan in the oven and stir until they are somewhat browned. Almonds so browned are good and a welcome change from the salted almond.

Molasses Chocolate Caramels.

Cut up fine three squares of chocolate or more if to taste, add to it a cup and a half of molasses and three-quarters of a cup of granulated sugar and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Stir these constantly until they reach the boiling point, then boil slowly until the sugar registers 250 degrees. In order to refine this a little add a teaspoon of vanilla when it is taken from the stove. The molasses taste is favored by old fashioned candy makers, but not liked at all sometimes by others. It is not easy for the amateur to make caramels, which are really only fudges cooked to a higher degree and not stirred when cooling. They are most likely to be a success if cooled quickly and marked off in squares when cooling.

Dipped Chocolates.

Get a cake or cakes of sweet chocolate from the best candy makers you know, melt it, dip in it your almonds, little pieces of French nougat, peanut brittle, cream centers, etc. You may grate it or simply break it up and melt in a double boiler. The pieces will keep their shape after they are quite melted, and you will have to use a spoon to discover that they are perfectly soft. Stir well and use a steel fork, or, better, a candy dipping fork, put in the pieces to be dipped one by one, cover, lift up and let drain, and then put on waxed paper or a greased dish to dry.

Uncooked Fondant.

The cooked fondant of the amateur is usually a poor thing, and even experienced candy makers say that because of changing climatic conditions they cannot make a fondant that is always uniform. For uncooked sift a cup of confectioner's sugar, beat the white of an egg in a shallow bowl or soup plate, add sugar to it by the tablespoon, and whisk in, beating each in thoroughly. Perhaps a cup and a half of sugar may be needed if the white is large to make it stiff enough to work into balls. Flavor different parts as you choose, make chocolate centers, fill dates, press nuts into it, etc.

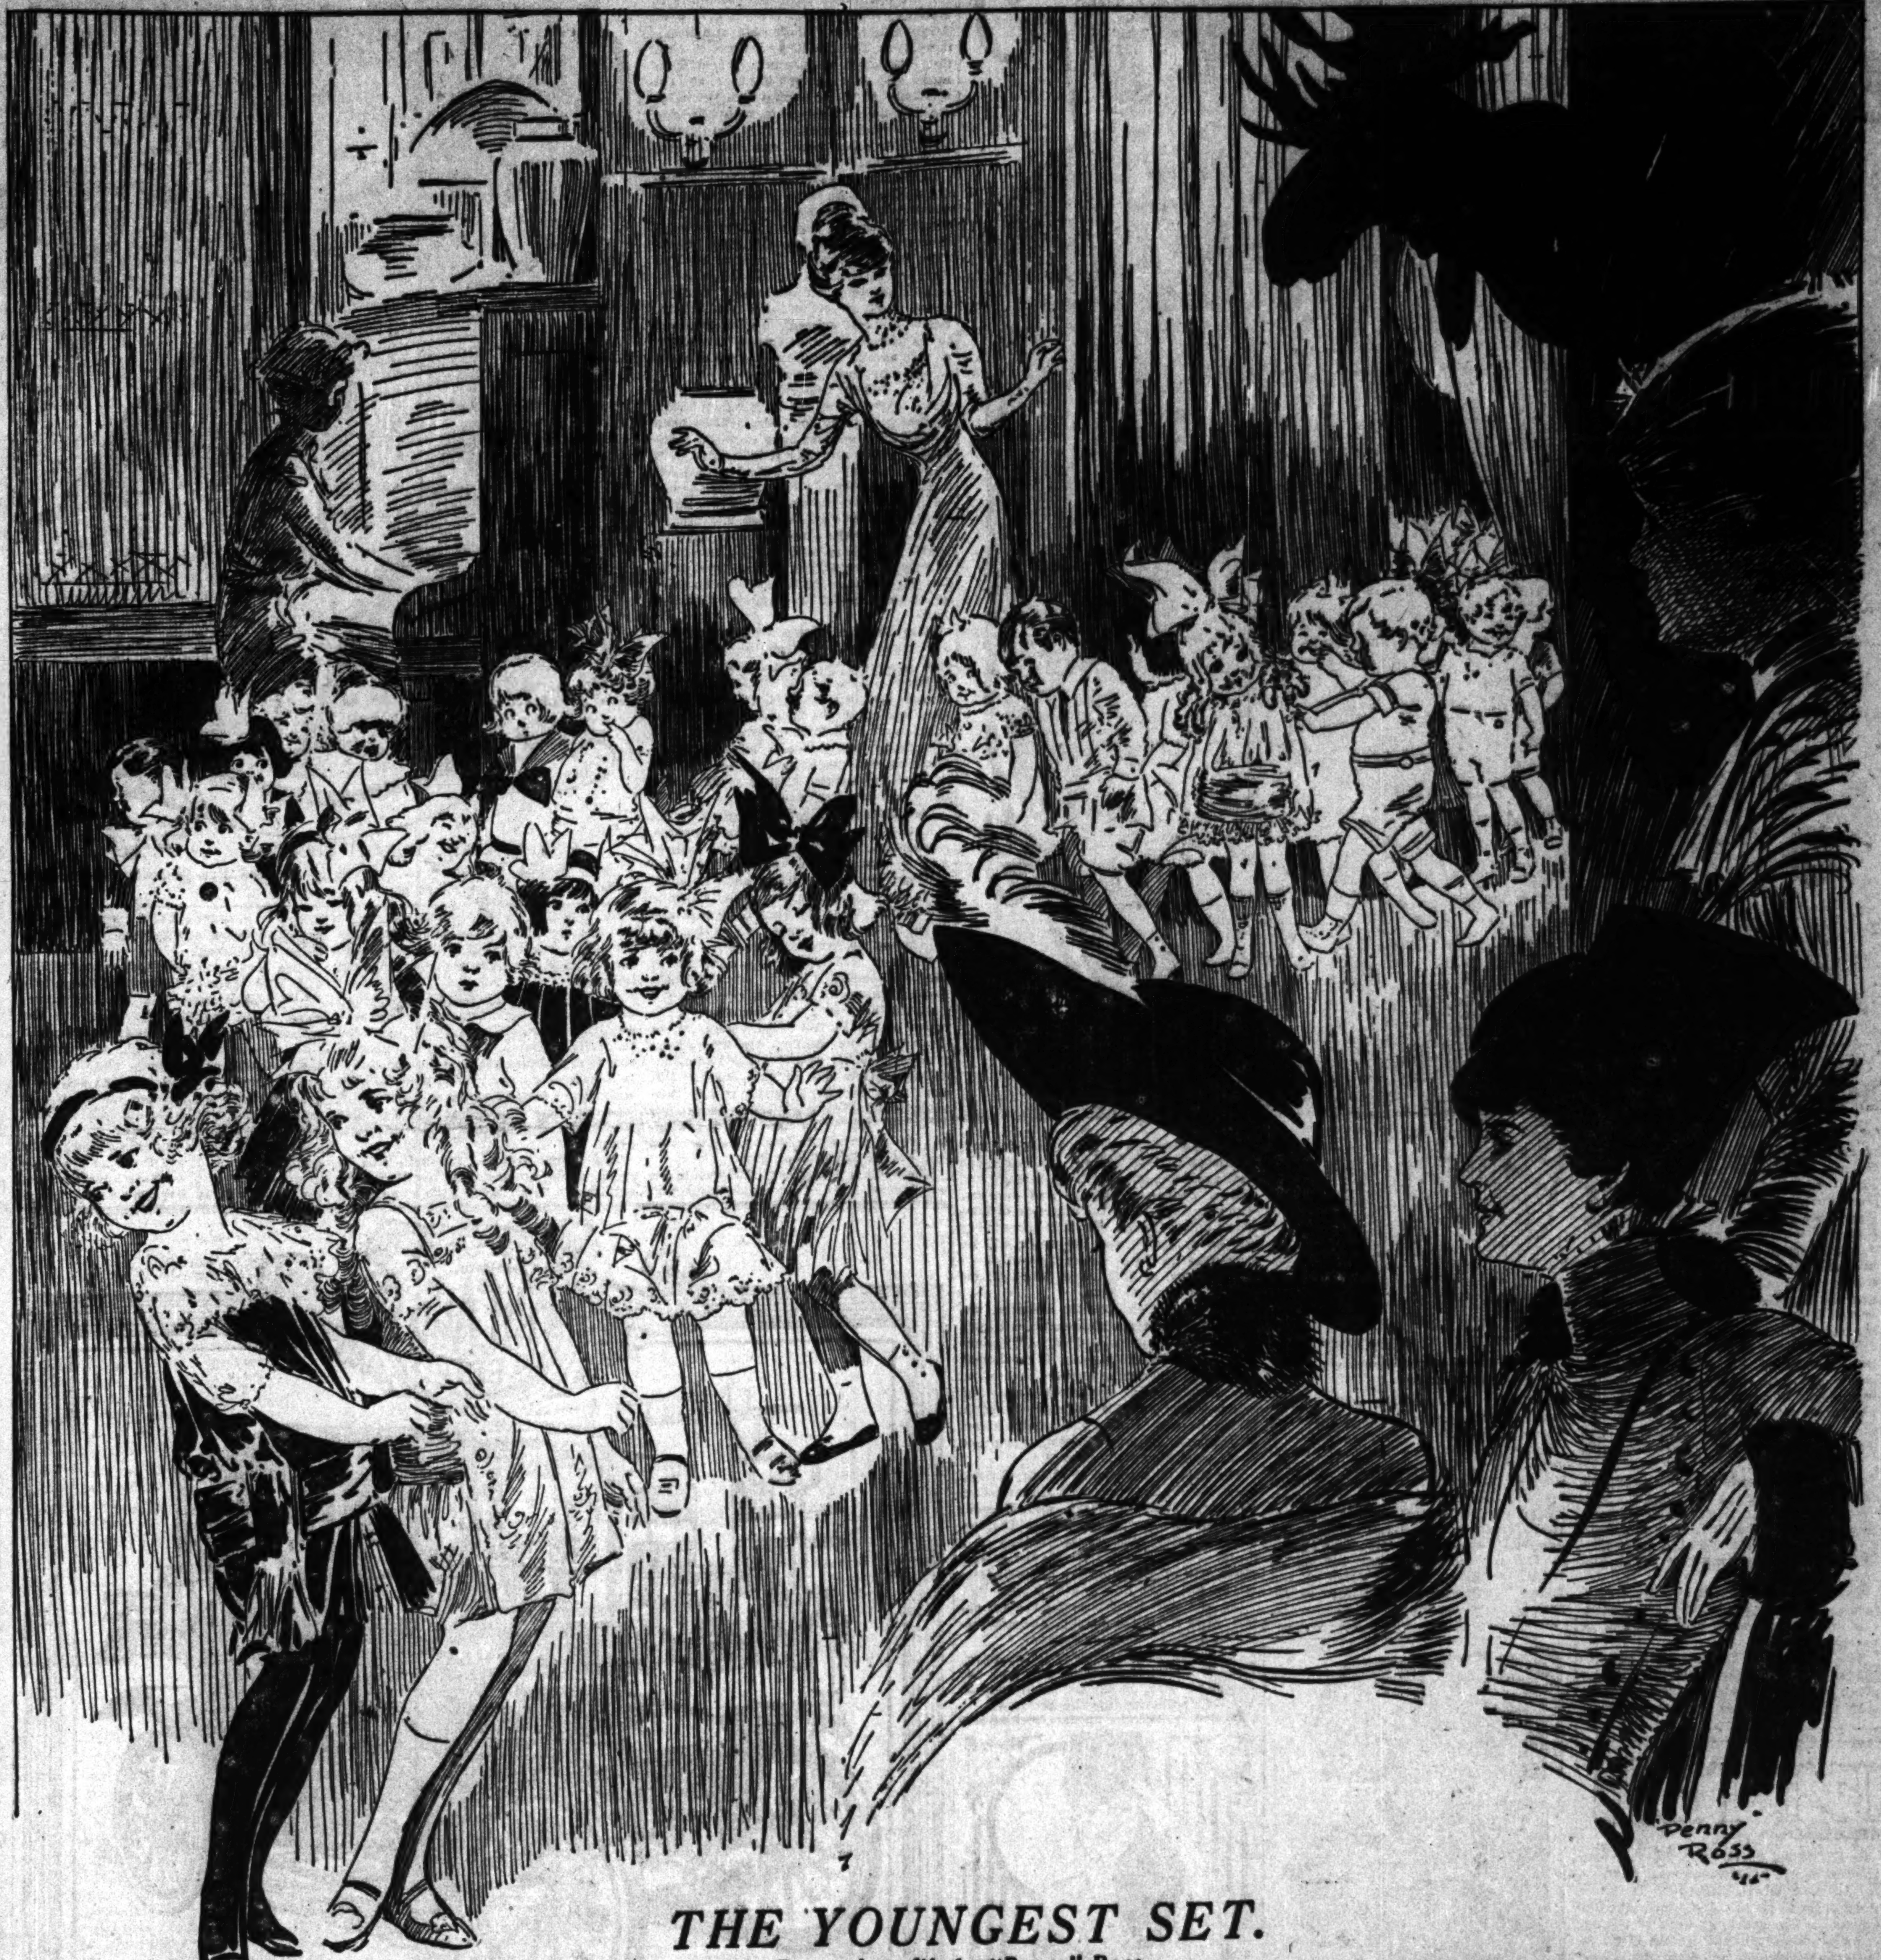
Mrs. Robert H. McCormick Opens Her Erie Street Home To Children Dancers.



THE YOUNGEST SET.

Drawn from life by "Penny" Ross.

This is the latest society set. And it is learning to dance. The members do not meet in the ballrooms—just yet. For a while they will be content to gather at the homes of the various members of the set and there seek to master the newest steps. Almost any step might seem new to them. In truth it has not been many years since they learned the first step of all, but they are beginning to get ready for the accomplishments which within a few years will brand their popularity in society circles. For this latest set Mrs. H. Robert McCormick has thrown open her home at 25 East Erie street, and the few more than two dozen members bear names that are known to most Chicagoans. They are Betty Johnston, Ellen Borden, Betty Borden, Louise Brewer, Marion Moore, Martha Dickinson, Florence Crane, Laura Sprague, Barbara King, Cynthia Wilson, Eleanor McCormick, Rosemary Morrison, Bertha Palmer, Martha Havemeyer, Potter Palmer III., Arthur Orr, Phelps Dunham, Howard Lyon, John Barnes, Gordon Kelley, William Dickinson, Parmelee Lyon, Cyrus Adams III., Watson Armour, Frederick Rowson, Harold Smith, and Frederick McLaughlin. In age this dancing group ranges from 4 to 6 years. They are learning under the eyes of a committee which includes Mrs. A. A. Sprague II., Mrs. Potter Palmer Jr., Mrs. Robert H. McCormick, and Mrs. Hugh Johnston.

Comment by Mme. X.

By Mme. X.

ONE of the advance couriers of a future generation of dancers is the dancing class which meets every Tuesday afternoon in the charming, oak paneled hall of the Robert H. McCormick house on Cass and East Erie streets.

This fluttering galaxy of extreme youth and loveliness is composed of scions of eminent Chicago families—scions ranging in age from 3 to 6. These amazing and enchanting mites form a class under Miss Mary Hinman, and weekly, with eager, almost fierce solemnity, struggle with the first principles of the terpsichorean art.

Sons and daughters of the houses of Palmer, McCormick, King, Moore, Bartlett, Borden, Crane, Sprague, McLaughlin, Armour, Smith, Lyon, Dickinson, Morrisson, Ranney, Brewer, Barnes, Orr, Dunham, Kelley, Havermeyer, and Wilson here lay the foundations for so much that is momentous in life. They take it so seriously, they are, as a rule, so unselfconscious, they are so untouched as yet, by any of the ruder winds of life that they grip the heart strings of the onlooker with the mysterious, poignant force that childhood always exerts.

There is great individuality already manifested by these youngsters. Clay Bartlett's regular features express unusual determination and character. Mrs. John Borden's two little girls, Ellen and Betty, are delightful replicas of their mother. Eleanor McCormick bears a striking resemblance to her grandmother, Mrs. Hall McCormick. Rosemary Morrisson looks as her mother must have looked at her age. I wonder if she will be such a valiant suffragist. Laura Sprague, Louise Brewer, Barbara King are all as blonde as blonde can be.

Apropos of the McCormicks, the Hamilton McCormicks will soon be in Chicago where they plan to spend the winter with their two sons. Two other distinguished fellow citizens are on their way home, fresh from different war zones. George Porter will bring us news from England and Belgium, while Abram Poole will tell us about the war from inside the German lines.

Close on the heels of the announcement of the engagement of Miss Dorothy Linn to Cyrus H. McCormick III. comes the news of the engagement of Marshall Field III. to Miss Evelyn Marshall of New York. Miss Marshall is blonde, blue eyed, and distinguished in appearance. She has lived much abroad and has quite a foreign air.

This makes the third notable Chicago engagement in the last three or four months, all in families that have been especially identified with the making of Chicago. The first was Philip D. Armour III., whose engagement to Miss Gwendolyn Condon of New York was announced in the late autumn. It is a fine thing for Chicago to have the descendants of her famous pioneers marrying and settling down here to carry out the traditions of their grandparents.

In this connection I wish to correct a possibly wrong impression which might have been created by referring in last Sunday's column to Cyrus McCormick III. as a dilettante. The word was used in its original sense, that of one who delights in the beautiful, an admirer and lover of art. These are the first two meanings given by Stormonth, an eminent English authority and the mainstay of this pillar of polite chronicle. Any other application of the word would do great injustice to young Mr. McCormick, who by his earnestness and ambition represents the best Chicago spirit.

P. D. Armour III., Cyrus McCormick III., Marshall Field III.—aren't we developing an aristocracy of family, industry, and wealth?

December, the first calendar month of winter, with a grim, grisly outlook at home and abroad! For, though business is "picking up," it will take a long time for it to pick up everybody it has dropped the last year. Charitable organizations of all kinds and dimensions are trying to sustain these unfortunate victims of economic conditions until such time as places can be found for them in the world's work.

Deep in these efforts at amelioration are many of Chicago's society leaders. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mrs. Frederic Bartlett, Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, Mrs. J. L. Cochran, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. Arthur Small, and a galaxy of others are giving up the major part of their days to real, hard work, sacrificing to it their pleasures, leisure, and ease.

Mrs. Fairbank's labors are insuring a brilliant gala performance on Dec. 18 at the Auditorium for the benefit of the Lying-In hospital. So great has been the demand for boxes that, having sold all of the added boxes across the center of the house, still others are to be created in the side front rows of the balcony to satisfy the call. Dinners before and suppers after the entertainment are already being planned.

Mrs. John Carpenter has hardly time to sleep or eat these days, for, in addition to her work at the north side Casino, she is running the decorative part of the buffet which is going to be one of the most cheerful features of the gala night. At each end of the main foyer will be a large serving counter, while awnings or gay umbrellas will shelter little tables where people can be served coffee, sandwiches, lemonade, and cake. Box trees will stand about and a charming background will be set for the big social event of the season.

Almost daily Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mrs. Robert McGann, Mrs. William Odell, and other north side society women are busy in the Harold McCormick mansion, cutting out the garments that the sewing circle of matrons and maids works on every Wednesday morning.

Mrs. J. L. Cochran devotes hours each day to a similar task to prepare work for her group of friends, who meet early every Thursday morning in her cheerful sun room. Here they sew or knit until late afternoon, only pausing long enough for the good luncheon Mrs. Cochran provides for them.

Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter is probably leading the most strenuous life of any of these charitably inclined women, as she spends all of her week days in the emergency employment bureau started by the Chicago Woman's club in quarters given by Stevens Bros. in the twelfth floor of their new building.

A visit to this enterprise last Monday morning was an "eye-opener" as to the labor situation among women. The outer waiting room was packed with a mixed throng of women of all ages. Some looked anxious and eager. Others seemed apathetic. It took some time and effort to work a way to one of the two doors which this crowd was besieging.

A single file was being received in an inner office, where names, addresses, occupations, nationality, condition, situation, and other data were rapidly filled out on cards especially prepared and a complete card index kept of each applicant. Those in direst need are put directly to work in a large, airy, light room, where employment is provided for those who can sew or knit.

Here garments are made for the Red Cross society and for any one who will pay for such work. Also mending is done, and this is a department that ought to appeal to many an overburdened house mother who can here have the family darning and stitching done at the lowest cost and feel that she is at the same time helping some less fortunate woman.

Few of these sewing women in this emergency workroom have even 5 cents for luncheon, and a fund for food has been provided by the women in charge to meet this condition. Mrs. Harrison P. Young is at the helm of this enterprise and assisting her are such other well known members of the Chicago Woman's club as Mrs. John Buckingham, Mrs. Henry Kuh, Mrs. Nellis, Mrs. E. J. Wiggin, and Mrs. A. W. Bryant. Miss Estelle Hunter is in charge of the employment bureau and already over a hundred applicants have been placed in good positions.

But society is not all serious. The "hard times" dinner dance last night at the Saddle and Cycle club was the first of the season's ventures in a costume party. Members and guests were requested to appear in some old dress. Some interpreted the call literally and came in attire of antiquated cut, while others came in rags and tatters, symbolizing a poverty stricken epoch.

It is not likely that this year will see again the vogue for fancy dress which became almost an obsession last season. But society folk will have still another opportunity for manifesting originality and enterprise at the annual Twelfth Night dance of the Butchers and Bakers on Jan. 6. On this occasion, as a card inclosed in the invitation reads: "Suit your costume as you wish, or come as a fairy, fowl, or fish." The invitation itself is a high flight of poetry:

The butchers and bakers
Will frolic again,
With the candlestick makers,
Promptly at ten,
And the favor they ask
Is, heed their call,
And come en masque
To their fancy dress ball
On Twelfth night.

The place of the ball is, as usual, veiled in mystery. It is sure to be an original and attractive setting for one of the liveliest frolics of the winter. Although those invited are requested to send their answers to "The Twelve Knights" at 76 East Monroe street, the twelve knights, on investigation, would probably resolve themselves into one Mr. B. Gamble, whose fertile brain annually evolves some gay and festive scheme for making merry.

Next Friday evening is the date for the first of the two Assembly balls of 1914 and 1915. These are the most formal and fashionable events of the season. They are given in the ballroom of the Blackstone hotel by the men of Chicago society. Eighteen of them, composing the board of governors, run the ball. Arthur Meeker is chairman, Charles G. King, treasurer, and John A. Stevenson, secretary.

The remaining fifteen are Watson Blair, W. McCormick Blair, Augustus A. Carpenter, Joseph G. Coleman, Richard T. Crane Jr., Howard Gillette, Morris Johnston, Eames MacVeagh, Harold McCormick, William Odell, Honoré Palmer, George Porter, Clive Runnells, A. A. Sprague II., and Bertram Winston.

At each ball an imposing line of Roman matrons—or Chicago's social leaders—receives the guests and lends dignity to the occasion. Few debutantes are ever invited to these balls, which are dedicated especially to the non-debutante elements in society.

There was some talk earlier in the season of abandoning the assemblies this year on account of war times and devoting the money they would cost to home relief associations. This proposition was negatived on the ground that the assemblies are not an eleemosynary institution but designed to promote social life. Social life needs to be promoted and encouraged this year more than usual. Chicago fashionable society is in no sense of the word a giddy or frivolous element. It is rather inclined to take pleasure seriously. It certainly never makes it the end and aim of life. It may be the example of the men, who are all hard workers, that inspires the women to mingle charity, reform work, and self-culture in such large measure with their social life.

There will be many dinners given before the two balls, the principal one on the coming Friday being given by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Chalmers.

On the day after this Assembly the opening of the Casino will bring out most of its 397 members to inspect the new clubhouse in East Delaware place. Mrs. John Carpenter, who has had entire charge of the interior decorations, has been working like a beaver—a very artistic, discriminating, and enlightened beaver—to have everything ready, and the result is an extremely chic, original, and attractive setting for what will be the smartest club of its kind in this part of the world. In fact, the Casino is a unique undertaking. There is no club like it in New York, Boston, or Philadelphia.

It is to be the rendezvous for those who like dancing, cards, afternoon tea, and skating. This last feature promises to be popular. Since the old days of the "Skaters'" club this sport has been much neglected by the Chicago "beau monde." The club's French chef will also be prepared to serve luncheons, dinners, and suppers, but the 5 o'clock cup of tea with French patisseries and brioches will be the main culinary feature.

The hundred well known women who compose the Boys' Shelter club are planning to make the tea dance in the Elizabethan room at the Congress hotel next Saturday afternoon a great success. There will be professional dancing as well as nonprofessional.

The Boys' Shelter club was founded nine or ten years ago by Mrs. Frank Allport, whose compassion was aroused by the plight of street boys who slept in alleys and areaways. The work of finding shelter for them grew in various stages from one room in a flat in Harrison street to a whole cottage at the Allendale farm for boys at Lake Villa, Ill., which cottage was built, furnished, and is supported by this association.

Among those interested in it are Mrs. Eugene B. Price, Mrs. Alfred Crofton, Mrs. George M. Reynolds, and Mrs. Howard E. Perry.

The opening of the new Heyburn theater in Davis street, Evanston, Tuesday evening, Dec. 15, is to be a benefit for the maintenance fund of the Northwestern University settlement, of which Miss Harriet Vittum is the head resident. The women in charge have arranged an attractive program for the evening, which will include Miss Laura Lee in Hindoo ceremonial dances. Miss Lee is a pupil of Ruth St. Denis, who designed the pupil's costumes. She likewise has studied with Malle Theodore, head of the ballet of the Paris opera. Miss Loraine Wyman, in three groups of folk songs of Normandy and Brittany, will give costume numbers, and Carl Heisen and Miss Harriman, his dancing partner, will present modern dances. Two moving picture numbers of interest also are provided. The patronesses are Mrs. Laurence De Golyer, Mrs. Olive Wilson, Mrs. Frederick Connor, Mrs. R. P. Lamont, Mrs. George Dryden, Mrs. Charles Little, Mrs. Martin M. Gridley, Mrs. Edward K. Hardy, Miss Clara Griswold, Mrs. J. Scott Clark, Miss Estelle Ward, and Mrs. Henry J. Patten.

Mrs. George M. Reynolds is one of the women interested in the tea-dance which is to be given by the Boys' Shelter of Allendale in the Elizabethan room of the Congress hotel next Saturday from 4 to 7 o'clock. The young women who will assist are the Misses Mildred and Lolita Magie, Gladys and Eleanor Hambleton, Leonora Hoyne, Rosamond Goodrich, Constance McArthur, Gladys Bond, Ethel Carroll, Caroline Allport, Josephine Chapin, Elizabeth Newberry, Virginia Woodward, Katharine Donelson, Lois Wilder, and Marston Shedd.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Myrtle Moeller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moeller of 5838 Sheridan road, to John Lewis Moehle, which is to take place on New Year's day at the Episcopal Church of Our Savior, 932 Fullerton parkway. Mrs. Moeller and Mrs. Clyde Whitcomb Riley will be the matrons of honor.

Next Friday evening brings the annual charity ball of the Sunbeam league, whose work among the poor children and the charity wards of the hospital is well known. The ball is to be held in the twin ballrooms of the Hotel La Salle and the feature of the evening is to be the dancing of Albertine Rasch, premiere danseuse of the Grand Opera company. Miss Mary Holabird, the chairman of the social committee, and Miss Persis Rollins, the president, will lead the two wings of the grand march.

GENERAL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Schmidt of 113 Bellevue place have issued cards for a debut dance for their daughter, Kathryn, to be given on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 23.

Mrs. George Lauder Turnbull of 4852 Sheridan road will give a bridge party at her residence on Thursday, Dec. 17.

A benefit bridge will be given at the Hotel La Salle on Tuesday. It is to be given for the Wellesley restoration fund by the Chicago girls of the class of 1914. They are Miss Frances Bogart, Miss Kathryn Schmidt, Miss Helen Herrick, Miss Elizabeth Fanning, Miss Elizabeth Sherar, Miss Helen Hibbard, Miss Mildred Moore, Miss Katherine Wells, and Miss Elizabeth Case.

The Kenrose club will give its second formal dancing party on Wednesday evening at the clubhouse, 1016 East Forty-seventh street.

The children of Wilmette are preparing a performance of folk plays to be given on Friday evening at the woman's clubhouse, Tenth and Greenleaf streets, Wilmette. The proceeds will be used for charitable purposes and it is the desire of each child taking part to supply the needs of one poor family at Christmas time. The program consists of a Russian folk play, "The Snow Witch." Dorothy Yunkers plays the title part, supported by Margaret Smurr as Marina, Helen Hecht as Ivan, Edith Moore as the Princess Valeska, and Catherine Smurr as Foma. Following that will be an Italian folk play, "The Spirit of the Forest," with Catherine Smurr representing the spirit, Helen Hecht as Amata, Flol Shawhan as Flamma, and Ruth Moore as little Giovanni. Others in the cast are Lyle Moore, Nathalie Yunkers, and a chorus of singers and dancers. The plays are under the direction of Loretto Coffield Clarke, who will also appear on the program, and the music will be furnished by Miss Grace Seiberling of the faculty of the Mary Wood Chase School of Musical Arts.

The Woodlawn Loretto alumnæ, assisted by the Alma Mater club, will give a benefit card party on Wednesday evening at the Hotel Hayes, Sixty-fourth street and University avenue. Those on the arrangement committee are the Misses Marie Kennedy, Helen Fitzpatrick, Helen Lunney, Kathleen Malooly, Aileen Fitzpatrick, Minnie Regan, Josephine Ryan, and Mrs. Tom Powell.

The first of a series of charity bridge parties will be given by the Misses Helen Trainer, Elizabeth Berry, and Frances Wait at the residence of Miss Trainer, 4348 Berkeley avenue, on Tuesday at 2 p. m. On Friday, Dec. 18, the second party will be given at the home of Miss Berry, 812 East Forty-third street.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jacoby and daughter, Miss Graziella Jacoby, are now residing at 4553 Vincennes avenue.

Dr. Jessie G. Forrester of Ocean Park, Cal., formerly of Chicago, will visit her daughter, Mrs. F. F. Cain, 907 Central avenue, Wilmette, for the holidays.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the page only.

IN the matter of etiquette always be guided by what is kind and considerate. Etiquette was designed to simplify and make easy and pleasant social occasions and human companionship. Never let the problem of what is the proper thing to do overshadow this other thought of what is the kind thing to do. A man always gives precedence to a woman in entering a room, or a house, or a carriage, or a theater or restaurant. He should instinctively stand if the woman he is talking to is standing. This applies, of course, to social occasions and human compan-

L. C.: The only invitation that does not require an answer is one to a tea or afternoon reception. If you do not intend to go to such an entertainment, mail your visiting card the day before. Luncheon, dinner, ball, or card party invitations should be answered promptly, especially the first two. If you are invited to a church wedding you do not need to answer the invitation, but if you are asked to a house wedding or a home reception after the ceremony it is courteous to send a response.

M. R.: Your query as to whether you should escort a caller—a man friend—to the door is one often put. It is not good form to do so. Let him make his adieux in the drawing room or sitting room or wherever you receive him. It is, however, proper and courteous to accompany any older woman who may have called on you to the door and to open it for her, if you have no maid to do it for you and do not leave other callers waiting for you.

A. G.: The expression "lady friend" or "gentleman friend" are provincial and should be avoided. If it is necessary to designate the sex of the friend, say a "woman friend" or a "man friend." The terms lady and gentleman have been so misused that there are few occasions where they can be employed without giving the effect that the user is unaccustomed to what our grandparents called "polite society."

Society to Celebrate Thirtieth Anniversary.

Monday, Dec. 14, the Emanuel Ladies' society will celebrate its thirtieth anniversary with a luncheon and program at the Hotel La Salle. The luncheon will begin at 12:30 p. m., and the musical program will follow. Carrie Kohn is president of the society and Ella Schwab chairman of the luncheon committee.

The Sunday Tribune is not merely a great newspaper—it is also a great magazine. Both in quantity and quality of stories and pictures it ranks with the leading magazines. It contains so many good things to read and look at that many thousands of its readers do not try to get it all in one day. They divide it up section by section, and day by day take a week to it.

Washington Society

Social Devotees Re-Assembling in the National Capital.

Mme. Z.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Special [Correspondence.]—By the beginning of next week, in fact, by the end of this, most of Washington society will have really assembled at Washington, and it will be possible to look about a bit and find out approximately where we are "at." Which certainly will be a relief.

The congressional set is reassembling for the opening of the short session next Monday; the debutantes must give over flying about to Philadelphia and Baltimore, New York, Boston even, not to mention Pittsburgh on the one hand and Richmond and Atlanta on the other, and set seriously to work hoeing their own social rows; and their elders, most of whom have to preside or aid at their launching, will have come back and settled down to the social business of the winter.

December is as usual the day of the debutante. The most interesting of the week were Miss Beatrice Clover, who made her bow on Monday; Miss Maxwell Church, who was presented on Thursday; Miss Elizabeth Hamilton on Friday, and Miss Alexandra Ewing, who finished the week on Saturday. Each of those days, of course, brought others, some brought several, but these seem to be the most promising of the week; so far as one can judge they are likely to cut the most social ice.

It is rather noticeable that each of them made her debut in her own home. A few years ago that would have been a matter of course; even now old fashioned folk would say it is "quite as it should be, my dear." And perhaps it is the nicest way. But in these days of elaborate entertaining it is so much simpler to have all the fuss and all the mess somewhere else—so much less disturbing to household routine, that one sympathizes with the matron who gives her parties at some fashionable hostelry or at some beautifully appointed club or hall.

Miss Beatrice Clover's party on Monday was a sort of three volume novel. Vol. I., a tea; vol. II., a dinner; vol. III., a dance. And it is likely to have as a sequel, late in December, vol. IV., a ball. She is the younger daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Clover, and everybody worth while socially made their way to the beautiful Clover home in New Hampshire avenue to Mrs. Clover's tea for Beatrice.

The Clovers are a good deal of an institution in Washington; navy people, obviously, but conservatively inclined and rather given to flocking with the resident set, too. They have lived all over the world; a naval officer's family frequently does; but they have regarded Washington as "home" in winter and California as home in summer.

You see, Mrs. Clover is a daughter of the late Senator Miller of California [which naturally connects her with the congressional set] and they have a famous estate in the Napa valley, where they spent the summer, and where Beatrice had as her guests one or two of her fellow debutantes of this season. But first as a senator's daughter and then as a naval officer's wife, Mrs. Clover has been so long connected with Washington socially that the season simply could not get along without her.

Their elder daughter, Eudora, is an established belle of several seasons, and Miss Beatrice, a handsome girl, with fine eyes and teeth, and as bewitchingly dimpled a mouth as it is often given to see, is likely to rival her sister's social triumphs.

At Monday's party Miss Beatrice had eighteen girls, including many of the season's most notable buds, assisting at the tea, and eighteen men were invited to the merry dinner which followed. Later in the evening a good many more of both sexes were invited in for a dance and it was well past midnight before Miss Beatrice's three volume debut was quite over.

The fourth volume, the ball, will be given in her honor during the Christmas holidays. The Clover balls are annual events. Costume balls they generally are, and everybody fervently prays not to be overlooked.

Miss Maxwell Church, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church of Twentieth street, was presented at a tea on Thursday. Like Beatrice Clover, she is her mother's youngest daughter, and has had older sisters to prepare her way among the capital's socially elect. The Churches are primarily of the resident set, with no affiliations with either branch of the service, nor yet with officialdom, but with many friends in both.

Her debut tea on Thursday brought out as interested a lot of friends as are likely to greet any of the season's buds. Having come out in her own home, in accordance with the conservative ideas of her parents, little Miss Church is to have a New Year's night dance at Rauscher's.

Another wedding in which Washington was vitally interested, but of which it had no preliminary knowledge, was that of Miss Eleanor Wayne Parker of Hutton Park, West Orange, N. J., and Robert Tait MacPherson, son of the late Lieut. Col. Lachlan MacPherson of Glentruim, Invernesshire, Scotland. The wedding followed close on the announcement of the engagement, and, as Miss Parker—or rather Mrs. MacPherson—is one of the attractive daughters of former Representative Parker, who is now Representative Elect Parker, she was one of the reasons why the return of the Parkers as a result of the recent election was being looked forward to.

MISS MAXWELL DURANT CHURCH

Miss Church, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church, was presented at a tea on Thursday.

Mrs. Edward Lewis Phelps, Miss Priscilla Hall, and Mrs. Edward Demling are among the chairmen for the bazaar to be given for the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial Lodging House for Women. The bazaar will be held at the Auditorium hotel on Thursday and Friday. Mrs. Charles H. Betts is general chairman. Miss Silvia Mueller and Mrs. R. T. Crane III. are working on the cotton ball committee of the Argus club. The ball will be given Dec. 30 in the Hotel La Salle.

By Inez Travers.

THE Stockyards Day nusery is more a settlement than a mere day nursery, and yet it differs from most settlements in that there is nothing coldly institutional about it. It can be best described by calling it the neighborhood home. It is really the heart of the neighborhood in which it exists, and a lively, ambitious heart it is. It is big enough to mother all the children and the mothers, too, and to settle arguments, to solve problems, and arbitrate difficulties in the bargain.

The building itself is most attractive since the new addition has been completed. It is of brick in the square, large windowed style. From the rather narrow door you go into a large, sunny reception room, practically and artistically furnished in brown wicker with tapestry cushions. There is a piano and several brown pottery bowls filled with autumn leaves. In this same wing there are comfortable and attractive apartments for the matron, the assistant matron, and the help.

But it is in the other wing of the house that the interesting work of the day goes on. First, there are several rooms, white from ceiling to polished floor, which contain a number of small beds, the high legged, fenced-in kind, each with its little white quilt and spotless little pillow, and no matter what time of the day you go in you are likely to find them occupied by the representatives of six or eight nationalities whose mothers have gone to work. There are from twenty to thirty children at the nursery daily from 3 weeks to 6 years old.

Then there is one little room with a white bed where a child who is ill can be isolated until it is pronounced well enough to mingle with the others, or until provision can be made to send it to some hospital. There is a cheery playroom whose walls are covered with pictures and blackboards, and where there is a cupboard containing toys for everybody.

Upstairs is the kindergarten room for the older children. There are about forty-five children at the kindergarten, and many of them do not understand English, much less speak it, when they first enter, so that it is really doing a patriotic work by teaching the language of the country to its future citizens.

On Saturday mornings the kindergarten room is used for the sewing class, which is composed of the girls of the neighborhood. They are expected to bring a penny each week to defray the partial cost of the materials they use. They learn to make many useful garments and, as there is an award for good work, they take a keen interest in the class. Twice a year they are given a party and it is indeed an event in their lives.

The children of the nursery proper are, of course, fed twice a day. They have cups and bowls all their own and their table manners are quite perfect after a few weeks in the nursery. When they first come they have no idea whatever of cleanliness or delicacy at table. One small child had never seen a spoon in her life and had to be taught to use it. After she had learned she insisted on having one at home.

It is surprising the amount of interest even the youngest take in learning new and better ways, and in many cases carry their knowledge into the family circle. The rules of the nursery provide that not only the children but their clothing must be kept in a clean, neat condition. A bath every second day is compulsory and a record of the baths is kept.

Each new child admitted to the nursery must be bathed and examined by the house physician before it is accepted.

The matron, Miss Hayden, is a busy person. She is ready to receive her charges every morning at 6:30 when the mothers leave for work and they remain in the house sometimes until 7. In special cases they sometimes remain all night. She sees to their clothing, their food, and their baths, and besides all this she has time to give advice and help to their mothers. She has made on an average of 100 calls a month for the last two years. These calls are made mostly in the evenings and she is usually most welcome, as the mothers are only too glad to have some one interested in their welfare.

The nursery is an open door to all mothers; it finds work for them when they need it and secures hospital and medical attention when they are ill. The nursery is supported entirely by membership and donations and entertainments given by the members and officers. Mrs. Burton Hanson is at present giving a series of readings for its benefit.

The officers for 1914-1915 are: Mrs. Burton Hanson, president; Mrs. Edward Tilden, first vice president; Mrs. R. R. Donnelley, second vice president; Mrs. Frank Van Voorhis, recording secretary; Mrs Ira A. Newman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. N. Benn, treasurer.

The chairmen of the committees are: Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal, house; Mrs. Chester E. Tripp, industrial; Mrs. E. Tilden, visiting; Mrs. L. D. Condee, building; Mrs. I. C. Gifford, tag day; Mrs C. S. Downs, printing; Mrs. E. Tilden auditing.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

The Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial lodging house board will hold a bazaar on Thursday and Friday in the parlors of the Auditorium hotel. On Thursday the sale will be in progress from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. and on Friday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. A card party will be given each afternoon at 2 o'clock. Luncheon and dinner will be served on both days. There will be a score of booths and special attractions. The money realized from the bazaar will go toward the maintenance of the lodging house for women. Mrs. Charles H. Betts is general chairman.

The Chicago Woman's club will meet on Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the assembly room, Fine Arts building. Dr. Max Eastman will address the club on "The Feminist Movement." Three concerts are given every Sunday in Fullerton hall, Art Institute, the first at 3 o'clock, the second at 4:15, and the third, the program of which is confined to opera, at 8 in the evening. The parliamentary law class will meet tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Mrs. George W. Plummer will be leader. McCallum Silk Hosiery is secured in the silk hosiery that is made from the highest grade of raw silk. That is the reason that McCallum Silk Hosiery has an unusual brilliancy and greater feeling of silkiness. The purity of its silk insures strong threads for longer wear. Its even weave and careful proportioning as to shape and length give more comeliness and comfort to the wearer.

Ask for McCallum's No. 113 and 122 if you want black silk hosiery of remarkable value. Mending yarn with every pair.

Miss Jane Addams Gives Views On War and Peace.

By Marion Walters Lovett.

MISS JANE ADDAMS, the founder of Hull house and the promoter of more progressive reforms than any other one woman in the United States today, consented last week to answer these questions of vital importance for THE TRIBUNE:

1—Should the United States increase its army and navy?

2—Has the war set woman's suffrage back?

3—Should the women's organizations in the United States ask President Wilson to intercede for peace?

4—With which of the two old parties will the Progressive party affiliate?

5—Must Chicago increase its police force?

6—What are Illinois women to do to get full suffrage?

The first, Miss Addams declared, is one of great import to the nation. "Peace" was the subject of Miss Addams' first book and she has taken active part in stimulating the interest and work of the peace organization in this country.

"I certainly am not in favor of preparedness," said Miss Addams, quietly but most emphatically. "Our army and navy is sufficient for our protection.

"The United States has an enormous coast—in fact, two great coasts, the Atlantic and the Pacific. It would take an enormous navy to adequately protect them. Perhaps one greater than that of England or Germany. A navy of such strength would mean an enormous tax on the people. It would be a tax of militarism.

"It seems to me the United States is not depending on that sort of thing. We are maintaining peace with the countries of the world and it is reasonable to anticipate peaceful relations. Our country is not advancing along the line of aggression. It is not our policy to grab territory.

"What could better prove that preparedness is an exploded theory than the war in Europe? Germany was certainly the best prepared country in the world. England maintains an enormous army and navy. They are the principal combatants in the war.

"Why should the United States build up a great army and navy at this time, when we are on the eve of a readjustment of militarism? It seems absurd.

"The time is coming quickly when the plan for legal peace of which Hamilton Holt writes will be maintained. International questions and disputes will be settled by interparliamentarian courts, with The Hague peace tribunal for the supreme court.

"The nations allying themselves together will maintain a navy as great and powerful as that of any power outside the alliance. This international navy will police the seas. Some such arrangement as this will unquestionably be made after the war. Then it will no longer be deemed necessary for nations to exhaust their resources in building and maintaining great navies and armies.

"The fear of war being manifested in the United States is a part of the reflex action of the war in Europe. The enormity of the war has driven the sane views of militarism from the public mind. Viewpoints are distorted.

"All war will in time be eliminated except among savage tribes. Future generations will put it in the same class with pestilence and plague. Nations will settle international matters by bargaining with each other, just as cities now bargain.

"The war has set suffrage back both in America and in Europe. War is man's business. It invariably throws into prominence man's power and force. Women are not taken into the counsels. Their share of the burden is not so apparent as man's, and therefore is deprecated. While the women of Europe are busy trying to feed the hungry and to clothe and provide shelter for the poor and homeless, suffrage with other reform measures will suffer.

"I approve of the plan proposed by Mrs. Lawrence and Mme. Schwimmer that the women's organizations of the United States urge President Wilson to intervene for peace among the warring countries of Europe. A great public sentiment may be created in this manner. When it comes time for President Wilson to act the women's petitions will assure him that he has a great sentiment back of him.

"The Progressive party will not affiliate with either one of the old political parties. It assuredly could not do so unless some party incorporated the Progressive principles in its platform.

"Any city that has within its limits the criminally inclined, the subnormal, and the vicious needs to have an adequate police force adequately handled.

"A constitutional convention is the only means by which the women of Illinois may hope to get the full suffrage."

An Announcement of Tremen ous

The French S. S. "Virginie" arrived in New York Nov. 28, after a 70 day voyage, with

59 Casks (15,000 Pieces) of White Limoges China for Painting

There is a thrilling story behind this sale. At the beginning of hostilities in Europe a war tax was levied on manufacturers.

The concern of A. Lanternier & Cie, makers of the finest white Limoges china in the world, sought a buyer for their entire stock of made-up white china.

Their agent in New York offered the stock to us. We bought it under the conditions that the money had to be cabled in advance at once.

The steamship Virginie, leaving France the 10th of September with the cargo, was chased by warships and compelled to flee around South America, arriving at Newport News, U. S. A., ten days ago.

The China Is Now Here and Will Go on Sale Monday at Actual Import Cost.

A saving of about 50% on every piece in the lot. The quality is beautiful, combining the delicacy and strength and clear whiteness for which Limoges china is noted. We will sell the entire purchase in six lots:

5c	10c	15c	25c	35c	75c
Worth to 15c	Worth to 25c	Worth to 40c	Worth to 59c	Worth to 75c	Worth to $1.75

There is every kind of china for painting you can think of: Salt and pepper shakers, butter plates, cups and saucers, napkin rings, boxes, plates, bon-bon dishes, chocolate cups and saucers, perfume bottles, powder boxes, cake plates, sugar and cream sets, mayonnaise dishes, chocolate pots and scores of other items. Sale held on Seventh Floor.

A box of Rothschild's Imperial Liquid Bright Gold will be GIVEN FREE with every purchase of this china amounting to a dollar or more.

Double S. & H. Stamps on all chases

Every year at the Christmas season women's clubs, welfare societies and o organizations devoted to the betterment of society in general, have urged greater eff to have the Christmas shopping run smoothly.

We all realize that if the public would shop early in the month, and particul during the forenoons of the Christmas rush, it would be a great step in relieving cares and worries and hard work of the holiday business.

Double S. & H. Green Stamps on all Purchases Made Before 12 o'Clock From Now Until Chris

Surely this is a great step. There are tens of thousands of people who save S. & H. Green Stamps in order to get the valuable premiums that are given for them. Certainly now all these people will do their shopping in the forenoon.

If Time Is Money

Tribune advertising saves Tribune readers millions of dollars each year.

All the tremendous volume of Tribune classified advertising—all the enormous volume of Tribune display advertising—work to this end.

These ads, thousands of them every day in the year, constitute a myriad of "short cuts" between "wants" of Tribune readers and the satisfaction of those "wants."

Before the readers of The Tribune, there is spread each day the very best this great city has to offer in many lines of merchandise. This list is kept up-to-the-minute. It is revised each day and distributed within a few hours to hundreds of thousands of homes.

Without this agency for bringing together buyer and seller, employer and employe, landlord and tenant, etc., both sides to each one of millions of transactions might spend a great deal of time in futile attempts to locate each other.

You cannot make too much use of Tribune advertising, both as advertiser and as reader. The more you use it the more efficient you will become, both as a buyer and as a seller.

Start right now and find the ads in this issue of The Tribune that will benefit you.

NEWS of the RELIGIOUS WORLD

OUR LADY OF LOURDES CHURCH (CATHOLIC). LELAND and ASHLAND AVES. Insert, THE REV. JOHN M. SCANLAN, PASTOR.

BUILDERS and ARCHITECTS WORTHMANN & STEINBACH

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

MASS will be said for the first time in the Roman Catholic church of Our Lady of Lourdes next Tuesday, of which the Rev. John M. Scanlan is pastor. The church which is located at Leland and North Ashland avenues, will not be dedicated for several months, but so crowded has the present church building, which is located on the opposite corner, become Father Scanlan decided to transfer the Sunday services to the new building and to continue the week day masses in the present church.

The one exception of a week day mass in the new building will be the initial service on Tuesday. The day was chosen because it is the anniversary of the Immaculate Conception with which event in religious history the name of the church is associated.

Father Scanlan has been pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes since March, when he succeeded Father F. N. Perry, who died while pastor. Before coming to this parish Father Scanlan was pastor for fourteen years of St. John's church, Eighteenth and South Clark streets.

Our Lady of Lourdes church was begun four years ago, but it had only reached in its construction ten feet above the foundation walls when Father Scanlan became pastor. The exterior is now complete.

The new church will cost when completed and furnished, $125,000. The entire church plant, including the parochial school, the present church, which will later be converted into a social center—and the ground, is valued at $300,000 or more.

The style of the new building is Spanish renaissance and shows the effect of the presence of the Moors in Spain in its suggestion of Moorish arches, domes, and scroll work. The size is 80x152 feet and has a seating capacity of 900. The towers are 100 feet high. The material used is pressed brick, terra cotta, and green tile. The building is fireproof throughout.

Gov. Edward F. Dunne and family are members of this parish and when in Chicago worship here.

Several religious weeklies published in Chicago have designated today as a special day in which their claims are to be presented to the congregations of their respective denominations. The Standard, published in the interests of the Baptist denomination; the Advance, which is the Congregationalists' paper, and the Northwestern Christian Advocate of the Methodist Episcopal church, are three of the papers which will be represented. It is generally known that denominational papers find it a difficult matter to succeed from a financial standpoint, but their work, like that of the colleges, which are never self-supporting, and hospitals, which are seldom self-supporting, is deemed essential to the life of the denomination and to the religious culture of the church membership and their families.

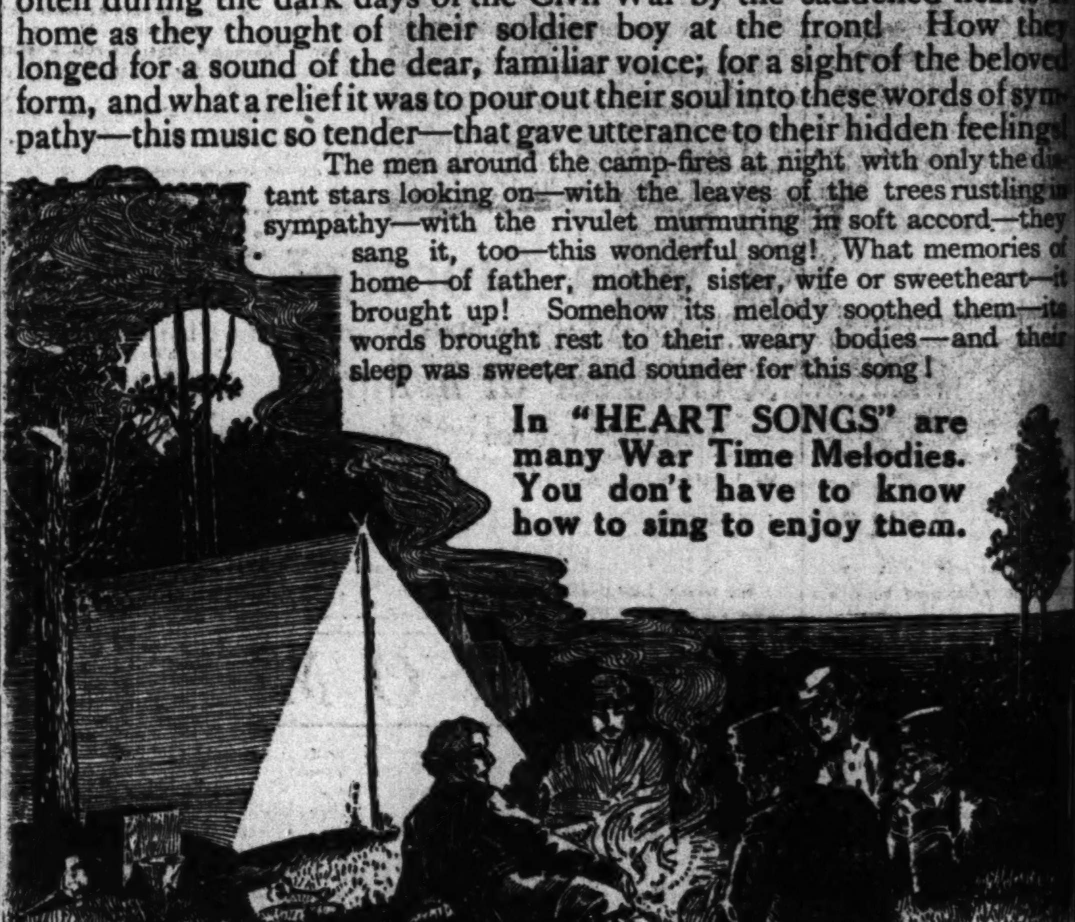
$10,000 Prize Book "HEART SONGS"
Published to Sell at 2.50, at 78c

Fourth Floor—Dearborn Street.

"Tenting On the Old Camp Ground"

The song illustrated today—a famous song of the olden time—sung often during the dark days of the Civil War by the saddened hearts at home as they thought of their soldier boy at the front! How they longed for a sound of the dear, familiar voice; for a sight of the beloved form, and what a relief it was to pour out their soul into these words of sympathy—this music so tender—that gave utterance to their hidden feelings!



The men around the camp-fires at night with only the distant stars looking on—with the leaves of the trees rustling in sympathy—with the rivulet murmuring in soft accord—they sang it, too—this wonderful song! What memories of home—of father, mother, sister, wife or sweetheart—it brought up! Somehow its melody soothed them—its words brought rest to their weary bodies—and their sleep was sweeter and sounder for this song!

In "HEART SONGS" are many War Time Melodies. You don't have to know how to sing to enjoy them.

ANOTHER HEART SONG
That Will Live Forever

"HEART SONGS" is not a mere collection of music and words! It is a book compiled directly by more than 20,000 people, who in sending their favorite songs told why they sent them.

From the lone cabin on the trackless prairie—from the snowy wastes of Alaska—from the mining camp amidst the pines of the lofty Sierras—from the coral strand of an island in the far Pacific, so remote that the ships come only once a year (if they do not forget)—from the garrets of London and Paris, with only the stars above—from the sandy deserts of the Orient, somehow seemingly forgotten by even God himself—came these outpourings of the human heart—from the men and women who loved them—and the singing of which ofttimes saved their sanity and faith in Heaven.

Every song in this wonderful book has had some sacred memory—some touching experience—some sweet and hallowed association—connected with it in the hearts of thousands. It is their song of joy—of sorrow—of thanksgiving—of love—of bereavement—of home-coming—of reunion—of all the tender sentiments that lift the human heart in worship to its Maker. It is for this—by inspiration—that this unique volume is entitled "HEART SONGS."

518 Pages

Please note carefully when making comparison with books of similar song collections that "Heart Songs" has 518 pages, 404 songs, a directory of 193 musical terms—complete index and complete classified index.

404 Songs

You do not have to be a musician to enjoy "HEART SONGS"—your mother sang them—your father sang them, and you hummed and whistled them as boys and girls—that is why this great Book is selling so rapidly—a book of sweet music for all the family—the words and music of the songs all of us should know for old times' sake.

Get your copy tomorrow—you'll enjoy it for years to come.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Junior Assemblies Inaugurated; Sad Lack of Dancing Men; Russian Festival; Other Items of Interest Concerning the Gotham Social World.

by Mme. Y.

Miss MARJORIE CURTIS

Miss Marjorie Curtis was a popular figure at the Russian festival in New York. She is pictured here in a costume of the czar's court.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The inauguration of the junior assemblies on Tuesday at Sherry's was, of course, the big event of the week. As you may know, the junior assemblies is the new name given to the former junior cotillons, which for nearly twenty years Mrs. Arthur Murray Dodge managed with such distinction.

The first dance is the great one for the debutantes, where they assemble en masse, as it were, even those who have not as yet had their coming out receptions or dances, and also those who are this year, officially ex-debutantes.

Last spring, to the great regret of all, Mrs. Dodge retired from their management. It was felt that it would be quite impossible to improve on her excellent arrangements, and out of deference or honor to her the name was changed from that she had used to the present designation. But the large ballroom on Tuesday night presented much the same scene as formerly. The guests were received at the entrance of the ballroom by Mrs. Pierre Mali, Mrs. H. Hobart Porter, and Mrs. Walter G. Dakman, whom Mrs. Dodge had herself appointed on the committee of arrangements.

Not for many years has there been a real "cotillon," not since the popularity of dignified dancing has given way to the favor of various sorts of national terpsichorean wigwagging. There were many dinners preceding the dance, and at midnight a supper was served, followed by a mere half hour's fox trotting, so that the buds might get to their beauty sleep by 2 o'clock. (Even "time" is progressing since the apathy of Cinderella's godmother.) However, it was a red letter day for the debutantes. For at this dance they make their impressions on the men who may—or, alas, may not—be their dancing partners for the rest of the season.

And, by the way, that's quite a problem for this year. Cause—the usual one—war. There is a sad lack of dancing men for the season. Many of those who could ordinarily be counted upon are "in" Wall street, and Wall street this year is not the blitne street of success that it is traditionally held to be.

It was all brought home to the gentler sex when they were hunting for the one man needed in the caste of "Pandora's Box," the Greek idyl, which was presented on Friday and Saturday in the Seventh regiment armory, under the auspices of the vacation committee. Now, of course, we know that not every man is a Greek god, and that not every man can dance—I mean, dance, not fox trot. But last year there would at least have been a choice of several. Not so this year. For some time the rôle was unfilled. It was finally taken by Nigel Cholmeley Jones.

This entertainment was under the active management of Miss Anne Morgan.

Speaking of the Vincent Astors, or rather of Mrs. Vincent Astor, while her social calendar is full at the present, it is said that they are to remain "quiet" this winter. Now, however, she may be seen almost any afternoon, in front of the Astor offices, where she rescues her husband from his arduous duties, and whisks him home in the limousine for "tea" with a few of her chosen.

It takes considerable cleverness to manage—no, to engineer—a real "affair," whether it be for charity or no. And Miss Barbara Rutherford demonstrated her right to a degree—and not an honorary one, either—in her work on the Russian festival which came off per schedule on Tuesday evening. For days Miss Rutherford, with her white wire haired terrier had been at her office in the Biltmore. And not a detail escaped her When I stopped in I asked about the patronesses.

"There aren't any," she said, emphatically. She intimated that it was easy enough to get the names of illustrious patronesses who, thinking their names were enough never came near the place. I involuntarily thought of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, whose name appears on almost every list of these patronesses, but who herself is on the battlefield.

"No," went on Miss Rutherford, "I have iron-clad promises, more than that, orders for the tables, from the women who are to give dinners that night."

She gave me a partial list. Look at it: Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. William D. Sloane Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. James A Burden, Mrs. Whelen Goelet, Mrs. Otto Kahn—oh, well, what's the use—it's too long!

The "atmosphere" was closely studied. One heard Russian music, saw Russian dancers, breathed Russian incense, tasted Russian sweets, smoked Russian cigarets—yea, even drank Russian vodka!

As you may know, Miss Rutherford is the daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and the sister of Mrs. Ogden Mills. Owing to the death of her uncle, J. Borden Harriman, she was not able to attend the festival, and the dinners which her mother and sister had arranged were canceled. But the plans had been so carefully organized that the Russian war sufferers who are to benefit will feel it was quite as much of a brilliant success as did those who attended.

Last Sunday I saw Mrs. Robert Goelet in Washington square where she has taken a house. It will be recalled that she is but lately divorced from her husband. She was on her way to church, I assume, with her handsome young son at her side. Attired in a black velvet costume, with a medieval tunic-like coat, edged in a soft gray fur, her Rossetti appearance was even more accentuated than usual. She is as beautiful now as when she was Miss Elsie Whelen, the reigning beauty of Philadelphia.

Keeping up the pace in being neutral or impartial in regard to the hostesses at the beginning of the season, is wearing. At the Russian festival, a popular bachelor about town entered rather late with a strained and worried look on his face. He was greeted by a friend with the rather personal remark, "Hello, old man, when did you get in last night?"

"Oh," replied the bachelor, "I got in at 5 this morning, just in time to catch the last bed going out."

Never say that there is no wear and tear to society!

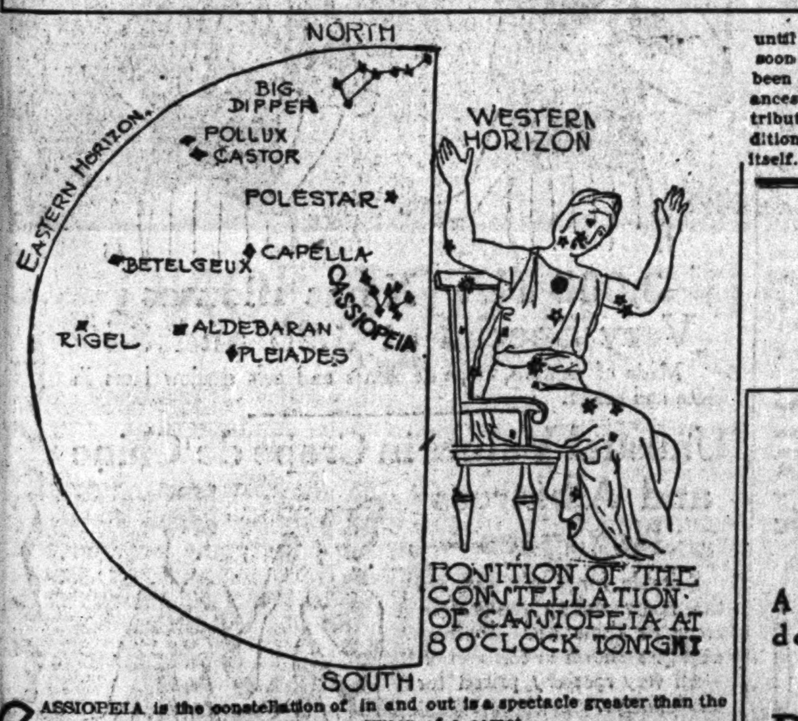
Jens Jensen to Talk to Rogers Park Women.

The next meeting of the Catholic Woman's club of Rogers Park will be held on Tuesday. On the program will be a lecture by the landscape artist, Jens Jensen, on "Local Color." Miss Bessie Quinn will sing and Miss Evelyn Bourke will give piano solos. The meeting will be held in Oddfellows' hall at Clark street and Lunt avenue. The hostesses will be Mrs. De Witt J. Garrison and Miss Katherine H. Ferguson.

New Officers Chosen by School Alumnae.

Miss Blanche H. Reeve was elected president of the Alumnæ association of St. Mary's High school at the reunion of the alumnæ on Thanksgiving day. The other officers elected were Miss Mary E. Molitor, vice president; Mrs. Florence O'Heron, secretary; and Miss Blanche M. Jirasek, treasurer.

ASTRONOMY.



POSITION OF THE CONSTELLATION OF CASSIOPEIA AT 8 O'CLOCK TONIGHT

CASSIOPEIA is the constellation of the Lady in the Chair. What you may see of it is an irregularly shaped W, which can be identified readily in the sky. It is almost directly across the sky from the Big Dipper, on the opposite side of the pole star, and about as far from the pole as is the Dipper.

A line drawn from the second star in the Dipper handle, counting from the bowl, through the police star and on, will, in a general fashion, point to Cassiopeia.

The W is formed by five stars, none of first magnitude, but nevertheless brilliant. It is more because the constellation is one of the more easily recognizable that it is interesting to the casual observer of the skies than because its stars are of themselves distinctive. One comes to see the Great Bear and Orion and get by eyes or imagination an outline of their figure and then to grasp the outlines of Cassiopeia. In the galaxy of constellations which defy the liveliest fancy it is interesting to locate such as will reveal themselves finally to persevering search.

Cassiopeia will have also another interest for the curious. It was in this constellation that Tycho Brahe found the greatest of temporary stars. That was in 1572. A temporary star is known as a nova, a new star which flashes into the heavens and then disappears from view.

Nothing more startling can be revealed by the heavens. That a sun should flash in and out is a spectacle greater than the sweep of a comet.

"Tycho's star" was greater in brilliance than any sun which maintains a fixed position. It was as bright as the planet Venus. It could be seen in the daytime. Its discovery was in November. It waned until the spring of 1574, when it disappeared altogether.

Folk thought it was the Star of Bethlehem. Novæ, or variables, are discovered from time to time. In 1604 one which was brighter than the planet Jupiter was found. It disappeared in less than two years. In 1901 a variable nearly as bright as Tycho's star was found near Algol, the winking demon. It waxed in two days until it was brighter than Capella, but soon waned to fifth magnitude. It has been thought that these sudden appearances were due to collisions or were attributable to some change in physical condition produced by the forces in the star itself.

Some Vivid War Impressions

Sketches Drawn on the Spot by John T. McCutcheon

McCutcheon

German Cavalry on the Road from Reims to the Right Flank.

Another McCutcheon story of the great European war, with pictures drawn on the spot by John T. McCutcheon, will appear in "The Tribune" next Sunday.

[Copyright: 1914: By John T. McCutcheon.]

ONE who sees anything of the great armies in times of war will have etched upon his memory certain vivid pictures or impressions that will remain as long as he lives. Upon all sides he sees things which remind him of the paintings of De Neuville and Detaille, and he will wish as earnestly as I did that many of these wonderfully striking pictures will be adequately preserved by men who will do their work as well as the two great French masters.

The whole tragedy of war is a series of spectacles that strike the senses and the emotions in every key—somber, joyous, sad, triumphant, glorious, strident, and even at times humorous. Humor goes hand in hand with pathos and often as the safety valve when the heart is tried to the breaking point, just as tears oftentimes give relief to the intensest sorrow. Soldiers surrounded by suffering and death, nerve racked with the overwhelming tragedy of battle, or shadowed with constant danger, will still find things to laugh at and joke about. Otherwise they would go mad.

Soldiers crouching in the trenches, with bursting shells scattering death about them, will smile grimly as a huge black cloud of smoke suddenly expands above them in an ear splitting crash. "There goes another Jack Johnson," they mutter, or "they're beginning with their coal buckets again."

In a certain battle two of the officers posted their calling cards on some of the shells they shot at the enemy.

On a German motor truck carrying ammunition to the front and wounded men back, there was a dummy figure stuffed with straw and wearing a French uniform, sitting jauntily astride the hood of the engine motor.

Men become hardened or accustomed to the grim horror of their surroundings and soon achieve an attitude of mind that is half fatalistic and half indifferent. They see so much suffering and so much death that it all is taken as part of the game and quite to be expected. Lives are being snuffed out on every side and if it comes their turn all right.

At the station in Maubeuge, while the trains of wounded men were coming back, there were soldiers drawing humorous pictures in chalk on the sides of the cars that carried fresh men to the front.

Perhaps it is the strange jumble of experiences, both comic and tragic, that makes soldiers dread the battle when they are in it and ache for it when they are out of it. Each man who goes to war probably knows that it is to be the one great period of his life, the days that he will look back upon most eagerly, and the days about which he will talk when he is an old man with his grandchildren about him. Every day he spends in such stirring times is giving him a choice store of memories upon which he may draw when his life settles down to the even tenor of normal times.

One cannot go to war without coming away, if he comes at all, with his memory far richer in impressions and vivid pictures.

I don't think I shall ever forget certain pictures that were engraved upon my memory and my emotions while I was with the German army.

I shall never forget the first two German soldiers I saw in Louvain, or the hundreds of thousands who followed them, flowing through the streets of the city until the mind fairly reeled under the magnitude of the spectacle. It seemed like something superhuman, something elemental, like the roar and movement of a Niagara.

I'm sure I shall never forget the gray desolation of the little Belgian town of Battice, every house shattered and not a human being remaining in the town, or what was the town. I think I then realized to the fullest that this was to be a war that was a war, and that it was not to be a kid glove affair.

Nations, empires, dynasties, destinies, and continents were hanging upon the issue, and it was to be a desperate as well as a gigantic struggle.

And I shall never forget the ride along the beautiful Meuse, in the late afternoon, when the valley and hills were an ever changing panorama of loveliness that delighted the senses, or the end of the ride as we rolled into the battered streets of Dinant, where the heavy hand of war had fallen so terribly. The contrast was shocking.

Or the silence that hung over the street that fronts the field hospital in Hirson, as, one day, we stood waiting on them to carry out the dead. Across the street was posted a half company of soldiers, standing at rigid attention. A horse and truck stood at the curb, just outside the entrance to the hospital. A little group of soldiers, doctors, and nurses was gathered at the gate leading into the hospital, all silent and tense. In the atmosphere there was an inexpressible sadness and expectancy.

Presently there was a movement at the entrance of the hospital and a few soldiers carried out a heavy casket of plain, unpainted wood. This they placed upon the truck. Another followed, and still another and another, until there were five laid in an even row upon the truck. Then came a low command and the half company of soldiers swung out into the street and formed in columns of fours ahead of the extemporary hearse.

The procession began to move. Several church functionaries and officers fell in behind the truck, and following them were many nurses in their gray gowns and black headdresses.

The silence was heavy. We all bared our heads as the strange appearing funeral car passed by, and for many minutes after it had slowly rumbled out of sight we were a subdued and sober lot.

It was a picture that I shall always remember.

Another vivid impression, one that appealed more to my pictorial instinct, rather than to my emotions, was the sight of a great cavalry and artillery column that was being moved by night along a road leading from Reims to the westward.

In the afternoon we had motored from Laon, in France, across to Reims. It was after 1 o'clock when our machine was halted at Brimont, one of the hills outside of Reims. We were told that it would be dangerous to expose ourselves or our car beyond the fringe of trees at the edge of the hill.

Upon all sides were evidences of the destruction and deadly fire of the French artillery. The walls of the fort on the heights of Brimont were battered, the big gateway leading across the moat into the fort was damaged by a shell, and at many places all about us were huge gashes made in the earth by exploding shells.

It was evident that the French gunners not only had the exact range, but that the position was one which was exposed at all times to artillery fire.

A young German officer came out of the fort and volunteered to lead us forward a couple of hundred yards to a point from which we could see the city and the cathedral. The French at this time, the 29th of September, were in possession of the city of Reims, with the Germans occupying the hills to the northward, northwestward, and northeastward. Some of the forward German trenches were at the edge of the town itself.

I was eager to see the cathedral of Reims, which has played such an important part in the news of the war.

Along the edge of the hill at Brimont a series of heavy earthworks were built, and it was possible to approach these without exposing ourselves to the view of the French gunners. There was no firing at the time. We walked along a sunken road that flanked the earthworks until we reached a spot from which the city lay spread, clear and distinct, on the great flat plain bounded by its vineclad hills.

A straight, tree lined road stretched from Brimont to the city and other tree lined roads crisscrossed the plain in other directions. The advanced trenches of the Germans were said to be close in to the edge of the city, screened by the trees which probably flanked the River Vesle or one of the canals.

I could see soldiers moving leisurely back and forth along this road leading into Reims from Brimont and I saw a little detachment of cavalry riding across the plain toward the advanced German positions. The fact that they were not at the moment being fired on and the fact that their movements were leisurely convinced me that we might easily have gone on into the edge of the city itself without much danger.

From the earthworks on Brimont I studied the plain and the city and the cathedral with my glasses. The distance to the cathedral was about five miles, and of course I could not see how seriously the sculptured detail of the building had been injured by the German shell fire. The roof of the nave was gone, but the towers and walls of the cathedral had not suffered any change in their structural form. I thought the top of one of the towers showed signs of damage, but it was too far away and too indistinct to be certain.

The Germans with whom I talked about the damage done to this cathedral claim that the French were using the towers for signal and observation purposes. A request was made under a flag of truce that the French cease using the towers. Two German officers sent as parliamentaries were taken prisoners, and as a final warning the Germans blew down a smoke stack near this cathedral. Then shrapnel was fired against the towers so as to injure them as little as possible but to drive away the men who were signaling. The roof of the nave had been burned as a result of brands flying from houses nearby. Those brands had caught in the wooden scaffolding erected for the purpose of carrying on repairs and had ignited the roof. The houses had caught fire from the exploding shells from German batteries.

This is the German version. Whether it is the true version I have no personal means of knowing. I am convinced, however, that if the Germans had meant to destroy the cathedral they could have done a much more thorough and complete job.

The picture of that beautiful plain, with the city of Reims in the center and with the rim of hills ranged in a wide circle about the edges, is one that I shall never forget. As we stood and gazed at the panorama spread before us the afternoon shadows deepened, twilight followed, and the first stars in the luminous evening sky looked down upon a picture which outwardly at least, was one of peace and quiet. One could not see the thousands of alert men huddled in trenches or mark where the hidden batteries lurked in readiness to resume their deadly work. All that one could see as he looked out across the plains of Betheny and the immense Camp de Châlons, 80,000 acres of level plain, was a beautiful French landscape whose scars were hidden by darkness and distance.

I vividly recalled my first visit to Reims, when, with thousands of others, I watched the first great aviation meet that was held on the Plains of Betheny in 1909. Most of the world's most famous flyers were there and records were being broken daily. Hubert Latham was the most theatrical of the flyers, for he flew high, sometimes rising to a height of 400 feet. Curtiss won the speed race and Paulhan broke the world's endurance record by an amazing flight of two hours and forty-two minutes. He was carried about on the shoulders of an admiring crowd when he finally came down. Lefevre fell and was hurt, another flyer had his machine knocked to pieces, and there were many minor mishaps to the flying machines. The Wright machines, captained by Count de Lesseps, if I remember correctly, were launched on a runway and Bleriot rose from the ground in his trim looking monoplane.

Reims has been as famous in the last few years for its identification with aviation as it has been for centuries as the greatest champagne center and the seat of one of the world's most beautiful cathedrals.

It was becoming dark when we started back to Laon. We carried no lights, for lights might be seen by night flyers from the allies' camps. When we crossed the Aisne it was quite dark, except that the sky in the west was still luminous in its after glow. Farther on we struck the rear guard of a column of cavalry and artillery that was moving singly toward the west. We asked them where they were going and they said they were being sent across to the right flank. For a mile or more we passed the supply wagons and the artillery, hundreds of guns, I judged. Then we caught up with the cavalry and it was here that I saw a picture that is photographed on my memory.

Outlined in cameo clearness against the evening sky was this black silhouette of thousands of horsemen, their helmets and lances in bold relief and their splendid horses massed together in orderly columns of fours.

As our motor approached there were signals blown and the cavalry swung off to the side to let us pass. For over half an hour we passed along the side of this impressive and strikingly imposing column. There was no talking and except for the regular clatter of horses' hoofs and the faint purring of our motor, there was no noise.

It was a movement of considerable magnitude, cavalry and artillery being hurried by night to screen their movements from the eyes of the evening's aviators, and on the way to reinforce the German lines in the fierce battle that then was raging near Chauny and Loyen. Nowadays, in consequence of the wonderful reconnaissance work of the flyers, most movements of troops must be made at night.

From the headdress of the troopers we saw that there were several regiments of Hussars, with their spike topped helmets; then we caught up with other troopers wearing the headdress of the Death's Head Brunswickers.

Against the sky, and standing out crisp and bold, were the bobbing heads and lances as the great columns moved along through the night. It made a picture that I shall never forget.

Another vivid memory, which stands out strongly among those that I have of the eventful eight weeks with the Germans, was one that concerns my vicissitudes in Beaumont, on the French border.

With four other correspondents we had been stopped by the German staff and ordered sent back. After a so-called detention, which was in reality an imprisonment under armed guards, we were told that we would go on a certain night.

At 10 o'clock we were marched out into the darkened square of Beaumont and given our places in the ranks of a considerable number of French, Belgian, and British prisoners. The picture as we stood there was one of the most vivid I have and one that I certainly shall never forget.

Playbills of the Week.

Blackstone—"The Beautiful Adventures," employing the beautiful Miss Ann Murdock as a young eloper who is caught in a blushing predicament. Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Jerome Patrick, and Ernest Lawford are among the actors. Second and last week.

Illinois—Ziegfeld's museum of anatomy, "The Follies," with Leon Errol, Vera Michelena, Bert Williams, Ed Wynn et al. in a sumptuous and lively vaudeville.

Olympic—Fifteenth week of the "Potash and Perlmutter" exhibition—Carr and Bernard as the embroiled though affectionate partners.

Cort—Eighteenth week of "A Pair of Sixes," which affords a view of Frank McIntyre, Sam Hardy, and May Vokes in farcical adventures.

Powers'—"The Misleading Lady," in which the husky hero kidnaps the heroine, carries her to his lodge in the wilderness, and forces her to care for him. Lewis F. Stone and Miss Doris Olsson are the leading actors.

Princess—Miss Molly McIntyre in "Kitty MacKay," as a Scotch "Peg o' My Heart," beginning as a waif and ending as a baroness. Eugene O'Brien is a handsome hero in his soldier clothes.

Grand—H. B. Warner, Miss Rita Stanwood, and a smuggled pearl necklace provide romance and excitement in "Under Cover." Last week but two.

Garrick—Final weeks of Miss Peggy O'Neill in "Peg o' My Heart," one of the best of the bad plays.

Little theater—Shaw's "The Philanderer," breaking all the records for attendance at this playhouse. The run has been extended indefinitely.

La Salle—"The Candy Shop," an animated musical comedy presenting William Rock and Miss Maude Fulton in bright burlesque and dancing.

NEWMAN'S TRAVELS.

Orchestra hall—Motion pictures of actual scenes on the battlefields of Europe will be the feature of Mr. Newman's "extra" traveltalk, "The War Capitals," at Orchestra hall, this afternoon at 3:30. In addition to pictures of the various armies on the firing lines there will be a survey of the great cities and the people in each of the countries involved in the war, from Petrograd to Constantinople, from London to Vienna.

Additional war pictures just received from Mr. Newman's assistant, who remained in Europe, will be shown in "France and the War," the fourth traveltalk in Mr. Newman's "regular" series Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon.

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—Ben Welch and his company in a new burlesque.

VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Miss Nora Bayes; Pat Rooney, and Miss Marion Bent in singing and dancing; "The Green Beetle," a Chinese fantasy; "When Cæsar Ran a Paper," by Waldemar Young, with the author in the cast.

Colonial—Miss Edna Aug is the headliner. Cliff Gordon and Richard the Great, a learned monkey, are also on the bill.

McVicker's—Gene Greene has the place of honor. The Andrews Opera company will present a tabloid version of Gounod's "Faust."

Great Northern—Dunbar's Royal Dragoons in musical numbers; the Four Milos in poses; Charles Bowser and company in "Superstition"; Mary Gray, the "Waltz Girl"; Buckley's animals; Eckhoff and Gordon, comedians, etc.

Palace—Eddie Foy and the seven little Foys; Frank Fogarty, "the Dublin minstrel"; Harry Tighe and Miss Blanche Babette in songs and dances; and many others.

MISS BLANCHE BABETTE

Deep Sea Drama of Wondrous Beauty

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—When the curtain rises on "The Garden of Paradise," which is, accept it from the critical guardians of many superlatives, the scenic sensation of its day, a cross section of the deep, deep sea is before you.

It fills the proscenium arch from side to side and from stage to border lights. Across the top of it a school of silver scaled fish float idly in so much of the sun as shines down through the water upon them. Along the bottom there are rocks and caves and the skeleton of a wreck. From the sides tall spires of jagged rock tower upward, forming a sort of gateway at back. For this is the palace of the Merman Emperor, and on a throne at the left the Emperor himself is lying, dully outlined against the deep green of the water. The melodious daughters of the Rhein never had so marvelous a home.

The Captain of the Guards swims in to announce the approach of a visitor; the Master of Ceremonies stands on his tail, waves his fins, and declares everything to be in readiness for the reception; the Chief Musician tunes up his conch shells and his deep bass. The Emperor of the Crabs, the Turtle Rajah, and the Prince of the Jellyfish are coming.

The Princess Swanhild, who was "The Little Mermaid" in the Hans Christian Andersen fairy story from which Edward Sheldon has fashioned the story of this most unusual spectacle, is the Merman Emperor's daughter, and she is this day to be betrothed to the ugly but powerful Emperor of the Crabs. Swanhild is 15, and imaginative. Her grandmother, the Empress Dowager, has told her that in the world of humans above the sea there are many interesting things, including men, and, according to a tradition of the sea kingdom, if any little mermaid should win the love of a human mate he would share his soul with her, and when they both died she would go to Paradise with him.

The idea appeals to Swanhild—much more strongly than does that of marrying the ugly leader of the Crab family. And she determines, when she has her coming up party and is permitted to rise to the top of the sea, she will have a serious look around with a view to locating.

It happens then—or, rather, it happens in the next scene—that she reaches the surface of the water just as the fascinating and handsome King of the Blue mountains is shipwrecked. Her sister mermaids, who have been sent to guard her, are terribly frightened and paddle hurriedly back to father. But not Swanhild. She promptly takes the floundering and unconscious king in her arms and holds him very tight while she swims with him to the nearest land, thinking the while that here is the very human she will select to divide his soul with her and love her through all eternity.

But she is not mortal yet. She lacks not only a soul but legs as well. And so she is obliged to leave him much the worse for his ducking on the shore of the Holy island, and to call pathetically to some romping maidens for help. Now it just happens that one of these maidens is the beautiful Queen of the Southland, who is there attending a convent, and it is the queen, therefore, in place of the little mermaid, that the half drowned king first gazes upon when he recovers consciousness. And she, already having the advantages of legs, and a soul, naturally appeals more quickly to him than any mermaid could have done.

Swanhild, however, is not yet discouraged. She knows the Sea Witch, and she has heard that there is a way to become mortal if one has the courage to pay the price. The Witch, too, is willing; just as willing as Mephistopholes was to deliver Marguerite into the hands of Faust, and on the same terms. Swanhild can have her legs and can become mortal, but if she should fail to marry the King of the Blue Mountains she must promise to return to the cavern of the Sea Witch and become a crawling thing without a soul, without even a backbone.

Swanhild swims around a bit trying to decide what she shall do, but the thought of her beautiful king outweighs her better judgment, and she agrees to the witch's terms. Next thing you know she is washed up to the very steps of a massive marbled affair at the water's edge, which is the king's palace. She is mortal now, with only her long and thickly matted locks to shield her from the spotlight and the opera glasses. And thus the king finds her, a little foundling of the sea left on his doorstep.

He loves Swanhild, of course, and covers her with his golden cloak. But his affection is paternal, for he still moons over the light that lies in the eyes of the lady who pulled him out of the rose pink seaweed on the Holy island. It is with her, and not with the newcomer, that he would divide his soul and his chance of Paradise, a statement that shakes though it does not shatter the mermaid's love of him. He makes her his page, and she serves him faithfully, hoping against hope that he may learn to love her some day even better than he loves the memory of the other.

But she is doomed to disappointment. In time the marriage of the king and queen is announced and the wedding feast arranged, and Swanhild is forced to stand, a pathetic, misunderstood, sorrowing little page, back of her king's chair at a wonderful banquet served on a marble terrace in the third act, with dancing girls in a silver light at the front, an amber moonlight shining down upon the banquet board, heavy with gold plate, in the middle distance, and a deep blue fairyland sky luminous at back, for all the world as though Maxfield Parrish had painted it.

She drinks the bride's health, and that of her dear lord as bravely as a princess should, and when they are gone and her sisters swim up to the side of the palace to tell her that she may recover her status in the sea kingdom if she will stab her king to the heart and dip her fingers in his life blood she refuses to be tempted.

The bright rays of a rising sun chase away the amber moon. Swanhild, with a despairing, inarticulate cry, makes her great sacrifice and jumps back into the sea to keep her compact with the witch, which is where we should have preferred to leave her. But there is a sort of happy ending tacked on to this, and when next you see the little mermaid she is swimming up through the shimmering sea and is to continue on through the sun shot air, to the very gates of the paradise she had so longed to reach. The angels had noted her self-sacrificing love and had saved her from the witch.

It would take a master of superlatives to describe the wondrous beauty of the scenes that Joseph Urban has prepared as background for this story. No spectacle our stage has ever seen has been set with such beauty in coloring and such rare imagination in the building of the scenes. Because of their fairyland atmosphere they immediately suggest Maxfield Parrish to the American onlooker, for there is in them the same free use of deep gold and purples and blues, relieved by flashes of silver and bright touches of red and green; there are huge urns and giant columns of marble; canopies of roses and a variety of decorative properties that any spinner of fairy tales would recognize on sight.

In a season strewn with the wrecks of many worthy productions, "The Garden of Paradise" is a daring and a wonderful achievement. It has meant an expenditure of probably $60,000 to the Liebler company and George Tyler, the producer. Whether or not a public grown apathetic and suspicious will rise to it is too early to say. If it does not the Tyler enterprise will die gloriously.

Emily Stevens plays the pathetic Swanhild, giving a performance of appealing wistfulness and poetic charm. She reads the rythmic prose in which Mr. Sheldon has set the text with the soulfulness that sincerity begets and is a most appealing figure. George Relph, who was the bronzed swordbearer in "Kismet," and later an oriental dignitary in the unappreciated "Yellow Jacket," is the king of the Blue mountains, and Renee Kelly the ingenue queen of the Southland.

News of the Stage.

The Anti-Cruelty society has selected "On Trial" for its benefit play this year, and the second performance at the Grand on Monday, Dec. 28, will be under the auspices of the organization. "On Trial" is one of the few theatrical entertainments that has weathered the gale in New York this season. It will be played here by a special company.

Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry believes that it is perfectly all right to edit Shakspeare's plays to suit circumstances, and so in "Twelfth Night" she sings a song that belongs to another character. "Shakspeare is far too human to be revered to the extent that one must not touch his plays," says she. "I'm sure if he were alive and a change of his lines were proposed he would hand over the blue pencil and say: 'Go as far as you like,' or Elizabethan words to the same effect."

Preston Gibson has completed a play called "Stray Lock," the scenes of which are laid in Colorado. It tells of a girl who has been kidnaped and brought up by a band of outlaws.

"The Misleading Lady" has so pleased those who have seen it at Powers' that its engagement has been extended until Jan. 2—making a run of seven weeks. Otis Skinner's appearance at Powers' is thus deferred.

Edgar Selwyn's new play "Rolling Stones" deals humorously with life in a Chicago boarding house, and it is said to be a segment from the early life of its author. It will be played here after the holidays.

Frank Mills, Miss Laura Nelson Hall, Joseph Kilgour, and Miss Rita Jolivet are among the unemployed because of the failure of "What It Means to a Woman."

Mme. Nazimova has abandoned B. MacDonald Hastings' "That Sort," and it has been sent to the storehouse. She may, if sufficiently urged, appear in vaudeville.

If financial details can be arranged satisfactorily George Evans, the idol of Streator, Ill., will be in the cast of the Shuberts' next Winter Garden show.

When "Watch Your Step" arrives in New York tomorrow Miss Sallie Fisher will emerge from her retirement to appear in it. This is the musical comedy in which the Castles, Frank Tinney, and Miss Elizabeth Murray will sing and dance to the music of Irving Berlin.

"The Only Girl" has proved so successful a venture for "Joe" Weber that he is going to produce in Washington tomorrow a comedy by Guy Bolton named "The Fallen Idol." It will be played by Bruce McRae, John Miltern, Robert Schable, and Miss Virginia Pearson.

Henry Miller has assigned himself to the title rôle in "Daddy Long Legs," played here by Frederick Truesdell, Guy Standing, and Charles Waldron.

Arnold Daly, playing the "Ask No Questions" episode from "Anatol," was stopped by the courts in New York Monday. Miss Doris Mitchell was his leading woman. Mr. Daly says John Barrymore played Anatol like a Methodist.

Miss Pauline Chase, who married Alexander Drummond of the banking family, and carried him away to her cottage in Buckinghamshire for a short honeymoon, has already sent him to the wars. At the ceremony were Edna May, Marie Lohr, Irene Vanbrugh, and Miss Vanbrugh's husband, Dion Boucicault. Miss Chase's personal fortune, as affirmed in the marriage settlement, is $200,000.

According to a Berlin newspaper, about 2,000 flutists, oboists, cellists, violinists, harpists, drummers and other players of orchestral instruments in that city have been thrown out of employment by the war.

Miss Nance Gwynne, the actress, who is being sued for alienating Mr. Plunkett from Mrs. Plunkett in New York, has lost six husbands—three by death, according to the court proceedings.

Frank McIntyre is investigating the manuscript of the new play, in which his girth and geniality are to be employed next year. It is by Edward Peple, author of "A Pair of Sixes." The McIntyre rôle is that of a comic private soldier.

Miss Edna Aug has been employed to act in "The Spotlight," a new comedy by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady."

Wagner's Menagerie.

By Ronald Webster.

THE Auditorium swan will be got out and curried during the week and put into traces Friday night for an appearance in an English Lohengrin. He will bear Morgan Kingston out into the wings, and after a few more similar actions on later nights will go back to his attic.

As this is about to be accomplished along comes M. Romain Rolland, music critic of France, and suggests, also in English, that our opera directors kill off the whole Wagner menagerie, swan included. He would even go further than this. He would remove the rocks and the palaces and the trees from the stage; he would close the opera house; he would have "Lohengrin" performed in a temple, dark, preferably, where such distractions as the obesity of the tenor (this cannot apply to Mr. Kingston) would be rendered nugatory.

Listen to some of his opinions, written in French some time ago, but now available as "Musicians of Today." (Henry Holt).

"What Tolstoy's raillery is really aimed at (in comment upon Siegfried) is not Wagner's work but the way in which his work was represented. The splendors of the setting do not hide the childishness of the ideas behind them; the dragon Fafner, Fricka's rams, the bear, the serpent, and all the Valhalla menagerie have always been ridiculous. I will only add that the dragon's failure to be terrifying was not Wagner's fault, for he never intended to depict a terrifying dragon. He gave it quite clearly, and of his own choice, a comic character. Both the text and the music make Fafner a sort of ogre, a simple creature, but above all, a grotesque one.

"Besides, I cannot help feeling that scenic reality takes away rather than adds to the effect of these great philosophical fairy lands. Malwida von Meyerburg told me that at the Bayreuth festival of 1876, while she was following one of the ring scenes very attentively with her opera glasses, two hands were laid over her eyes and she heard Wagner's voice say impatiently, 'Don't look so much at what is going on. Listen.'

"I have never shared the opinion that Wagner's works may be best appreciated in the theater. As a frame for them I should like temples; as scenery, the illimitable land of thought; as actors, our dreams."

After a visit to the subterranean caverns of the Auditorium last summer and an inspection of the lifting device for Mephistopheles, the great hydraulic machines which make the tomb in "Aida" and which form the foothills to the Alps when necessary I experienced a feeling of oppression. Such things in the fairyland of opera!

Of course the ejection of Mephistopheles from the bowels of the earth may be justified on the ground that he is one of the great comic characters of tradition. In the early stages of development he used to dash about banging humans about the shoulders with a bladder. Granting Bergson's theory of laughter, the mechanical lifter has legitimate comic effect. But it does not belong in fairyland.

I have no doubt that this contrivance will be laughed out of use before the music to "Faust" wears out. Some time, too, there will be a great barbecue in which the swan which has so nobly borne all kinds of Lohengrins, the dragon which has been killed by so many Siegfrieds, the bearskin which has frightened so many Mimes will be sacrificed with great odor of scorching paint and burning feathers to the god of good opera.

But haven't we forgotten something? Surely there is some one else who should be invited to the feast? It is the librettist. For does he not shock us, more often than the swan, out of fairyland into the uncomfortable horsehair seats of the theater?

"Carmen" was not considered fit for young ears at the time Halévy, who wrote the "book" from Prosper Merimee's tale, broached the subject to Du Locle, director of the Opeera Comique at Paris.

"Carmen? Merimee's 'Carmen'?" exclaimed Du Locle. "Isn't she assassinated by her lover? And this crowd of thieves, gypsies, cigar girls! At the Opera Comique, a family theater, a theater for the promotion of marriages! You are going to put our audience to flight. No; it's impossible."

The above is taken from Philip Hale's introduction to Oliver Ditson's edition of "Carmen," just published. The score contains both French and English versions, the latter done by Charles Fonteyn Manney. Mr. Hale appends to his article criticisms of the opera at the time of its production in America. His choice, one suspects, was guided by a desire to warn critics of today.

G. Schirmer publishes the score of "The Debutante," the new Victor Herbert operetta. One can always trust Mr. Herbert to be melodious. Some of the music is reminiscent.

ADD MUSIC SUNDAY

The same company has published "National Hymns, Songs, and Patriotic Airs of All Countries," compiled and arranged for piano by Gustav Hinrichs; the vocal score to the cantata, "Quo Vadis," by Felix Nowiejski; "The Golden Prince," a cantata for a four part woman's chorus, with soprano and baritone solos, the verses by David Stevens, and music by Henry Hadley; "Ode to St. Cecelia," by John Dryden set to usic by C. H. Mills; Cecil Burleigh's sonata, "The Ascension," for violin, with piano accompaniment; a suite for violin, with piano accompaniment by L. T. Grünberg, and a recitation, with piano, by Arthur Bergh.

Anna Pavlowa will begin a joint engagement with the Century Opera company at the Auditorium beginning Sunday Dec. 20. The principals of her company are Ivan Clustine, Alexander Volinine, Warslav Wassinski, Mlle. Stephanie Plaskowieska, Mlle. Stasia Kuhn. A large part of Mme. Pavlowa's performance is new.

About the Theater and Its Ailments.

By Percy Hammond.

IT appears that the new system of favorable dramatic criticism in New York has not produced the results anticipated by the managers who established it. Although the corrosive pens of Mr. Dale, Mr. Davies, Mr. Klauber, Mr. De Foe, and other destructive writers have not scratched now for several months, the theater in New York continues to languish. Mr. Al Woods, one of the most hopeful of the band of producers, consequently is seized with violent discomforts and will speak of nothing but despair. He desires to wager that before Christmas time at least eighteen of the best theaters in New York, two of his own among the number, will have reached their angle of repose and will be shut up. He says he has four successes, any one of which is enough to ruin him.

Announcing the withdrawal of "The Big Idea" from the Hudson theater, Messrs. Cohan and Harris confess a perplexity. In the face of a "unanimously favorable press," they say, the comedy inspired no public interest whatsoever. The "notices" were enthusiastic, prescribing attendance. They could not have been more laudatory had they been written by the authors themselves, Mr. A. E. Thomas and Mr. Clayton Hamilton, both ex-dramatic critics. As Mr. Cohan and Mr. Harris say, they were "unanimously favorable." And they were almost unanimously dull, too, indicating that they were composed with the baleful eye of an advertiser looking over the shoulder of the writer. Speaking as one who was always aged by the strained "er—ahs" of Mr. Alan Dale, I believe that his fatuous lucubrations were an asset to the theaters in New York because they were enjoyed there, adding interest to the habit of playgoing. His contributions are missed, just as are the worthier ones of Mr. Bennett in Chicago, another offender, whose vehement carolings for and against were of more value to the theater than all the encomiastic pish-wa that can be bought with a page ad. Mr. Bennett, fortunately, has an entertaining successor; Mr. Dale has not.

In the dramatic columns of a journal called the Albion, published in New York in 1858, I find remarks that apply so well to the current situation that they may be transferred: "The failure of the present and of past dramatic seasons," writes the editor, "must not be ascribed entirely to the hard times. A strange and unaccountable lethargy appears to have overtaken our managers, who, like travelers perishing of cold, fairly go to sleep in the midst of their misery and danger. Empty benches were never so many; attempts to fill them never so few as now."

A similar unaccountable inertia seems to have paralyzed the New Yorkers who dominate the theater in America today. While they cannot be described as perishing, they do seem atrophied. By that I mean that they do not realize that the theater is now a thoroughly commercial enterprise wherein a product is manufactured for popular consumption and must be promoted to be sold. I can say with authority that they make no intelligent attempt to interest the public in their output through the newspapers outside of New York. On this desk each week there are deposited hundreds of dollars' worth of useless photographs and reams of gushy eulogium concerning plays and players, no word of which possibly could be printed in a newspaper.

For instance, Mr. Brady's bill for postage and printing in his effort to dessemInate throughout the land his press agent's thoroughly unimportant views of the drama must cost him heavily. Yet I see none of them reproduced anywhere. The manager accepts a play, hires and rehearses the actors, puts them in a theater, and there his ability ends. He does not know how to sell them. Neither do I, but I do know that breakfast cereals, steel rails, and safety razors are sold, and I see no reason why plays should not be disposed of in the same way, whatever it is.

Dramatists, like cooks, show their greatest skill in working with the least promising material, and so Messrs. Goddard and Dickey in "The Misleading Lady" triumph when they take a lunatic and make of him the most popular element in their play. Lunacy, it would seem, is not a promising topic for the comic actor, especially when the imbecile portrayed drools and is cadaverous. I recall that some years ago the publisher of the works of Mr. Harold Bell Wright sent me one of them and asked me if I thought it would make a successful play.

He was assured it would not, because one of the principal persons was an idiot. Profiting by my advice, he dramatized this work, and it earned for its producers some hundreds of thousands of dollars in the theatrical byways. The madman in "The Misleading Lady" is pallid and flabby, and he believes that he is Napoleon Bonaparte. Arrayed in the imperial war togs, he mutters orders to his marshals, gibbering aimlessly about reinforcements and maneuvers. When his custodians wish to pacify him they sing the "Marseillaise," and it is their plan to purchase for him an island so that he may imagine that he is on St. Helena. It is quite a study in psychopathy, besides being an instrument for laughter.

Indifferent to the charms of insanity, you may find other diversions in "The Misleading Lady." The authors are good at inventing little tributary themes, causing them to trickle into the main story, which is a farcical treatment of the caveman theory. At times they are amusing. Mr. Lewis S. Stone, a Pacific coast stock actor and the creator of the leading man's rôle in "The Bird of Paradise," is the most interesting of the players. He is an engaging fellow, not offensively good looking, and he reduces the technique of acting to the minimum, retaining, however, just enough of it to be graceful, assured, and effective. Competent is the word to describe him, and that, combined with his likable stage personality, ought to equip him very well for the stellar position to which his managers have manifestly destined him. Mr. Henry Miller Jr. and other members of the cast are efficient, but the producers should by all means buy some new dresses to take the place of the queer things worn by the young women in the first act.

Jokes from Vaudeville.

MAJESTIC

Milt Collins, "The Speaker of the House." Excerpts from his applause gathering portrayal of a Dutchman who goes for political stump speaking in these United States:

"Ladies and chentlemen, I want you to consideration this efening the orangene of our glorious country. Look back, look back at our three—six—four fathers who fought for our livery at Bunker's Hill, Electioneer, and Corocure. Rememberance, if you please, the men who signed the declaration of intemperance and framed our constituents.

"What haf we now, I ax you? What is our congressmen doing for the workingman? They haf been in cessation and all they haf acornplished is a tariff bulls. How does this tariff bulls protect the workingman? The only ting he buys that they haf reduced the tariff on is sugar. They haf reduced the tariff on sugar one-tenth of a cent. The workingman uses only one spoonful of sugar in his cup of coffee, so he has to drink sixteen hunderd cups of coffee to safe 5 cents.

"Now what is this war all about? Dese countries had representations who vent to the Hog vunce and signed an agreeable that they would have peace. Now Chermany wants a piece of France, and Russia wants a piece of Chermany, and England wants a piece of Ostrich, and Ostrich is Hungary for a piece of Servia.

"They say that they want to change the map of Europe. Vy don't they call Teadoor Roosfelt. He would change the map of Europe so dat a Cook's excursion guide would not recognize it. He would put in a new valley here and a new river there and bluffs all around.

"Some half criticised President Wilson for putting William Chennings Bryant in his cabaret, but William Chennings Bryant would make a good secretary of state if he wasn't too busy. He iss the guy who put the talk in chautauqua. He says that he can't afford to give all his time to the United States when his celery is only twelf tousant dollars a year. But on the other hand, twelf tousant dollars a year ain't so bad for a fellow what's been out of a job for sixteen years.

"Teadoor Roosfelt iss going to try to do someting that no man iss never been successable in doing yet. He iss going to try to revive the dead. He says he iss going to revive the Republikan party. Now Teadoor Roosfelt was not so bad. But he dit do vun ting he should not have. When he tried to tell the women of this country how many children they should have he overstepped his autority. It iss all right for George Washington to be the father of his country but not for Teadoor Roosfelt to be the mother of his country.

"They tax us to get up a senses report efery ten years and they hire the most ignoramuses they can get. What does a senses man haf to do? He comes to your house and asks you such questions: Are you born? Are you vite or black? Are you male or female? Are you married or not married? Iss your wife male or female? Iss she white or black? How many children have you? How many do you expect to have and vhy? Then when he has finished his job he goes and gets pickled and looses the book. They want to know why the population has fell off and say that it is race suicide again."

PALACE.

Hugh Herbert and company in his original sketch, "The Sons of Abraham."

Spiegel—There, I fixed it. [Pulls out all plugs in telephone switchboard.] When it don't buzzel you can't hear it and what you can't hear you don't have to listen to.

Jake Minhein—Spiegel, why don't you attend to that telephone?

Spiegel—It don't need any attention. I turned off the buzzel. They ain't calling when you don't hear them, ain't they?

Jake—Where is your uniform we bought for you? You don't like it because it makes you look funny? Well, father isn't here now. You're canned. Understand? Canned, fired, get out.

Spiegel—Stop those words, Jake. For shame. I've known you from the cradle to the grave. Your papa and me were partners before you were born, and you talk about my general utility like that. You shouldn't call me such words.

Abraham Minhein returns from his vacation and finds that his two sons are acting in a peculiar way—they don't want him around, it seems. He hardly recognizes his old office in its new, up to date fixtures. This pleases him, but at the same time arouses his suspicion.

Minhein Sr.—My boys, my boys! And I should live to see the day that my own sons they make miracles. I leave three months, they make new store. Where is Spiegel?

Jake—Why, father, he's dead—yes, dead. We canned him.

Jake—Pop, you are certainly all right.

Father—My boys, when I bring you up in the underwear business, you stay in the underwear business. Now get me mamma on the phone. Hello, mamma. Who is talking? Sure—sure, papa. You know what night this is, ain't it? The boys are with me with Spiegel. Sure—we're alone when we're together. I just want to tell you they are coming up to supper with me—fix some soup—and I just want to say put plenty of noodles in it, ain't it?

Underselling Uncle Sam

Is it cheaper to advertise than to circularize?

Well, for instance:

To send a letter to each of the more than half a million people who bought last Sunday's Tribune would cost upwards of $10,000 for postage alone. This expense is quite exclusive of printing, folding, sealing, stamping and similar expenses on the half million letters.

Yet, for $10,000 The Tribune would print a full page advertisement and distribute it to each of those hundreds of thousands of people every Sunday for 13 weeks.

Since Tribune readers study Tribune advertising, rely on it, and are guided by it in their expenditures, it is apparent why merchants and manufacturers who utilize such a powerful and economical medium profit by it.

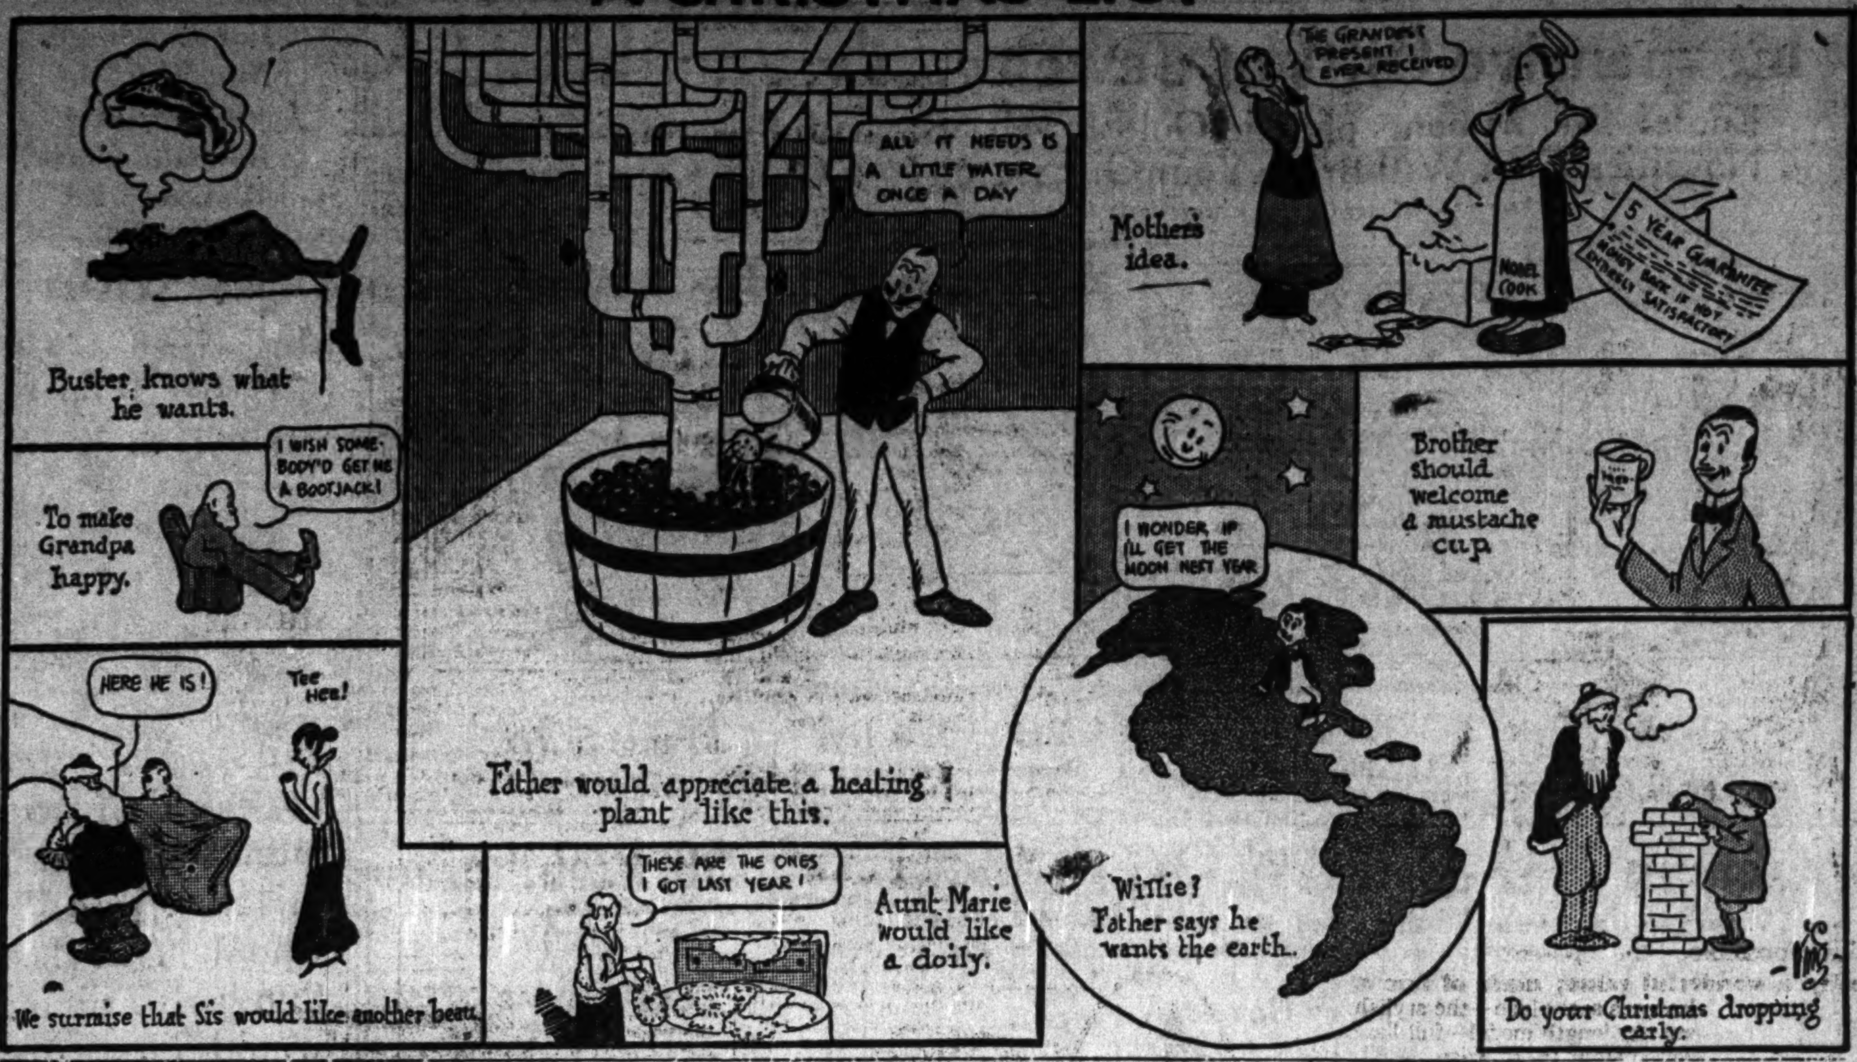
A CHRISTMAS LIST



Buster knows what he wants.
I WISH SOMEBODY'D GET ME A BOOTJACK!
To make Grandpa happy.
HERE HE IS!
Tee Hee!
We surmise that Sis would like another beau.
ALL IT NEEDS IS A LITTLE WATER ONCE A DAY
Father would appreciate a heating plant like this.
THESE ARE THE ONES I GOT LAST YEAR!
Aunt Marie would like a doily.
THE GRANDEST PRESENT I EVER RECEIVED
Mother's idea.
MODEL COOK
5 YEAR GUARANTEE MONEY BACK IF NOT ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY
Brother should welcome a mustache cup.
I WONDER IF I'LL GET THE MOON NEXT YEAR
Willie? Father says he wants the earth.
Do your Christmas dropping early.

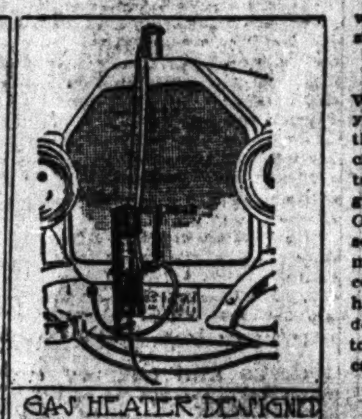
NEW STYLE OF INDIVIDUAL ANTI-SKID CHAIN



GAS HEATER DESIGNED TO KEEP WATER IN CIRCULATING SYSTEM WARM AT ALL TIMES.

ACCORDING to the latest count of the cars manufactured in this country it is found there are but few more makes of pleasure cars than of those made especially for commercial use.

In the pleasure car field the list is headed with one concern making eight cylinder motors, although it is known that others are about to bring out this type. Then comes sixty-six makes of six cylinder cars. Naturally enough, the fours still lead, there being eighty-two of these. The two cylinder makers are chiefly those giving attention to cyclecars and number only eleven. In the electric field there are fifteen different makes of pleasure cars and fourteen of commercial vehicles.

The gasoline commercial car is strong, with a total of 142 makes. Thus it will be found that while there are 175 makes of pleasure cars, there are nearly as many in the commercial field, or a total of 156. It should, however, be borne in mind that many makers of one class also make the other, so that these figures do not constitute a total of 331 distinct makers of motor vehicles.

One of the reasons motorists dislike to carry anti-skid chains is that they accumulate so much mud and dirt as to keep the tool box in a mussed up condition, are difficult to clean, and also more or less unhandy to put on the tires even when their need is recognized. Yet they are the best insurance a motorist can carry to save damage to his own or his neighbor's machine through skidding or sliding when the brakes are locked and the wheel simply slides over a greasy pavement.

As a convenient substitute for the full chain and one that will serve the purpose to a remarkable degree, either to prevent skidding or for use on a muddy road, is a single chain designed to pass around the tire and to be easily locked to a spoke of the wheel. As many or as few of these chains may be used as desired, but it is supposed that at least four will be required to do the work of the ordinary chain and five would be still better. The fastening around the spoke is of leather, so the chain cannot in any manner injure the wheel or disturb the varnish on the spoke. Furthermore, they are made in such a manner as to be adjustable to a certain extent to fit different diameters of tires within reasonable limits.

Eight or ten of these little cross chains in the tool box would prepare any motorist for an emergency—for a greasy city pavement or a muddy country road—and they would take up so little room and be so easily cleaned that a motorist would be well justified in having a set in his car at all times.

Every motorist knows too well how difficult it is to drive when rain or snow is beating against the wind shield, obscuring the vision and making progress not only difficult but dangerous. And the worst part is that no end of wiping off will remedy the matter. But here is a simple remedy that is worth trying. Make a strong suds of the soap used for washing the car and rub this on the glass front, permitting it to dry thoroughly. It will be found that the vision will be clear at all times. Of course, the old soap must be removed frequently to clean the soot and dirt that will accumulate to some extent.

If you have a slight leak in the gasoline line, at some connection or valve, or if the float in the carburetor permits leakage, do not permit the gasoline to drip on the floor of the garage—suspend a tin pail or similar receptacle to catch the fluid. This will not only save the gasoline, but, confined in this small space there is little danger from an explosion, whereas if it is spread out on the floor and permitted to be mixed with air, it makes an explosive mixture and may cause a great deal of damage.

By carrying a little commercial sulphuric ether you will seldom fear running out of gasoline. Three ounces of this to a gallon of kerosene will serve quite as well as gasoline and will at least get you to the next fuel station.

Queries and Answers.

"I intend making an automobile trip to San Francisco for the fair next summer and if you can give me any advice as to choice of routes on your side of the border, and also advise the price of and where to obtain suitable road maps, I shall be much obliged.

"H. S. COLEMAN, Regina, Sask."

You have two routes open, one east to Winnipeg and then south to Omaha, where you will meet the Lincoln highway and then follow this directly into San Francisco; or, possibly there is a road south to Glendive. From this point you can go east to Fargo and hit the Winnipeg-Omaha road or west to Billings and then south through Cody and Douglas to Laramie, where you will also meet the Lincoln highway. The last route will perhaps be more interesting, but will undoubtedly be more severe. Write the Automobile Blue Book, Karpen building, Chicago.

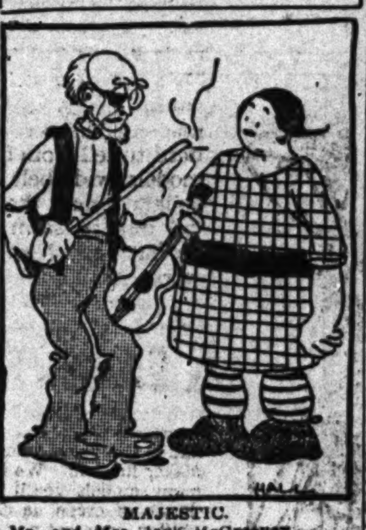
"Will you please publish in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the best road from Chicago to Lomax, Ill. W. HOYT, Chicago."

THE TRIBUNE would advise taking the road through Aurora, Bristol, Sandwich, Earlville, Mendota, Princeton, Sheffield, Kewanee, Galva, and Galesburg to Monmouth. It probably will be advisable to go from Monmouth to Burlington, from Burlington to Fort Madison, and then back on the Illinois side to Lomax.

Vaudeville Wit.



MAJESTIC.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGreevey.

Maid—Any news lately?

Fiddler—Yes, Zeke Huggins got married. Seemed like all the town was there. When the tieing match was over somebody threw a shoe and hit Zeke on the head. It liked to kill him.

Maid—Did they find out who owned the shoe?

Fiddler—Yes. It belonged to a horse.

Firestone Smashes Another World's Record

300 Miles Without a Stop at an Average Speed of 85½ Miles per Hour

THAT is the wonderful record of Barney Oldfield on Firestone Tires at the famous Corona, California, Race Thanksgiving Day.

It is by far the greatest no-stop record on any road or track in the history of motor car racing. Think of the terrific heat—nearly four solid hours of the relentless grinding at this torturous speed. Twenty cars were in the race, but Oldfield was the only driver who did not stop for tire changes.

Firestone TIRES

—less than three weeks previous to the Corona Victory—got the First, Second and Third honor in the Los Angeles-Phoenix Race and First place in the El Paso-Phoenix Event. These two races, known as the "Cactus Derby," put tires to a grueling test of over 1200 miles of unfrequented, rough mountain trails and burning desert sands. Here all nature's wildest forces were encountered, but Firestone, already World Victorious, stood the test by winning these, the greatest road races ever run.

This constant piling up of victory upon victory, year after year, is significant.

This wonderful strength is built into every Firestone Tire—the same heat resistance, the same fighting endurance.

The reason is in the making—in the abundance of good rubber and the strongest fabric—built into a staunch unit by the exclusive method of Firestone master workmen.

For your safety and saving, every day, you should demand Firestones—

The Colossus of Roads

More $3 & $5 Nemo Corsets at ½

—Third Floor—Center—

Another lot, but the last we can secure, to offer at this remarkable reduction. Four of the season's leading models of the famous Nemo corsets at the time when so many women are planning to buy another corset to finish the season with or as a Christmas gift—the Nemo folks, planning ahead, see that in these four models slight changes must be made next spring, and so, instead of waiting, as most other makers do, right now, when the demand for corsets is still strong, slash the prices exactly in half, offering—

Nemo Kopservice corsets, Nos. 552 and 562, for full to medium figures, always $5, special tomorrow at.......................... 2.50

Nemo "Easy-Front" corsets, Nos. 303 and 304, for slender or medium figures, always $3, special tomorrow at.............. 1.50

Probably half the women who wear Nemo corsets can wear these styles, and so can share in this marvelous economy event, but now, as always, we say to you that, regardless of price, you should only wear the model suited to your figure. Our corsetieres will be glad to advise you whether one of these models is correct for your figure. These are not Nemo self-reducing styles.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

DECEMBER

Approach of Winter.

PROPHETIC folk may say that cold, bitter times were coming to sweep over the brown and yellow earth, that there was menace of bad days and forerunnings of severity. It has not been in the mild sunshine nor in the soggy, foggy gray days, but prophetic folk yet might find a sign.

The birds have gone. The summer birds are expected to seek easier feeding and softer comforts than they can find hereabout, but the juncos, sapsuckers, downy woodpeckers, nuthatches, chickadees, and even the bluejays have disappeared. Only wild geese and crows remain.

The bluejays normally make a winter for your discontent, although that is inconsiderate of the genuine but too obtrusive and insisted upon beauty of their jackets and bonnets flashed against the snow. They have street corner habits and form gangs to the distress of sober minded birds in whose elusive goings about one takes greater pleasure.

We do not get a thrill out of the blue of a jay against a snow filled pine, and do out of the rare flash of a cardinal. The bluejay is not only ordinary to the observation in winter, but has a bad reputation for making other birds seek other winter quarters. The cardinal, wintering with us, is a rarity but an occasional fact.

But jay and nuthatch, woodpecker and junco, have made themselves unseen to eyes hereabouts just now, and that is not their custom. The wintering birds are concerned chiefly with the food supply. They do not make much of the cold. It does not terrify them, and folk that want them about the house after snowfall usually can coax them with a bit of suet.

Their disappearance from these parts may reveal an otherwise undetected shrinkage in the food supply, or it may be that as colder weather comes they will huddle up again to isolated houses and look for alms. Now they are gone and prophetic folk may make a sign of it and saw more wood if they care to do so. The wild goose and the crow are all we have with us.

Says War Will Boom Tire Trade.

By Reed L. Parker.

H. S. FIRESTONE, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, is confident that the tire business will not suffer from the effects of the war. On the contrary, he believes that increased trade will be the result. Herewith is printed an interview from Mr. Firestone that should be interesting to all motor car builders and users:

"The two greatest fields for future growth in the rubber tire business are, first, motor trucks for traffic, and, second, automobiles for the farmer.

"Firestone has great faith in 1915. A few weeks ago we closed our fiscal year with approximately $25,000,000 worth of sales on our books—the greatest year by far in our history.

"Right at this time 100,000 square feet of additional floor space is being added to the Firestone factory. Our pay roll for November shows that we have 10 per cent more men in our factory than we were employing during the month of November, 1913.

"We felt so good over last year's business and the many bright spots that could be picked from the future that we called in for conference last month every Firestone branch manager and salesman from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"We had inspiring sessions. Every territory was analyzed for 1915 and our men went away encouraged and confident. As one of our boys said, 'Let those who will talk "poor business," but I never let my mind get off of the million and a half motor cars in operation throughout our country, and every one of them will need additional tires next year.'

"The two brightest spots in our outlook in 1915 are, as mentioned before, motor trucks for traffic and automobiles for the farmer, and we can surely depend upon the European war to expand business in both of these lines.

"Take the motor truck. Thousands of horses a day are being destroyed in the war. Six months from now there will scarcely be an able bodied horse left in England or on the continent that is not in use in the war. In the British-Boer war a million horses were shipped from America. Their market price in this country went up 50 per cent. Compared with the struggle now on that war was a skirmish. As the months roll by this country will be stripped of vast numbers of horses, their price will go up, and large users of horses who have been hesitating for years, solely because of the initial expense, to supplant horses with motor trucks, will now do so of necessity. And this does not take into consideration at all the great numbers of motor vehicles used, abused, and destroyed in the war, where their use has become a necessity for mobilization and transport of supplies.

"As to the automobile for farmers' use. The price of all grains is high and as the war continues will go higher. This year's crops are vast and the high price will stimulate great acreage for next year. Crops in Europe will be reduced to a half or third. For the next year or two America will be the grain house for the whole of Europe. The farmer will reap the benefit. With his increased means and with his paved country roads, the farmer will buy automobiles. They are more useful to the farmer than to the man in the city, and the time will soon be here when not to have a machine will mark a farmer as a back number or a failure.

"Our supplies of raw material must continue to come from South America and Asia. The production of rubber is ample. Great Britain has thus far, by her vast navy, kept open the trade routes of the world. If she shall continue to do so—as I fully believe she will—our supplies will be forthcoming as needed.

"Whatever, if any, temporary lull there may be in this business owing to the shock caused by the greatest and most disastrous war of history, it is bound in the end to greatly expand the automobile and the tire business and to bring money into this country from buyers in foreign lands."

The Balanced Four that lightens Winter Upkeep

Let's start by saying you want a car but thought you might get one along in May. What's the use of waiting 'til then and missing the best of the whole year's driving?

There's comfort and there's convenience in having a car at just this time of the year. But there's a world of pleasure, too, in getting out-o'-doors just now in the bracing winds that set your ears a-tingle and your blood leaping.

And this Studebaker FOUR is just the car for winter. For with over-measure of power that makes it careless of the roads and the weather, it gives you, with its close-fitting top and stowaway curtains all the protection and all the comforts of a much heavier, closed car.

But the BIG thing is that the Studebaker engineers in simplifying its design have made it STRONGER and so much better balanced and aligned that the jars and jouncings of winter roads find no reflection in increased upkeep costs.

It's the balanced FOUR that lightens expense—the FOUR you want for winter as well as the rest of the year. Will you come in and see it—see how much you CAN get in this FOUR at $985

Special Announcement

The Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City, N. J.,

In order to accommodate its increasing regular Fall and Winter patronage, and also those Americans and Canadians who are prevented by the European war from being abroad, will keep both the Marlborough side and the Blenheim side of the house open this winter, instead of closing one side during November and December, as heretofore.

This will enable the supplying of a private bathroom with hot and cold salt and fresh water with every room, and for these bathrooms no extra charge will be made during the Fall and Winter Season.

The house occupies two blocks of ocean front, and its heated parlor solariums overlooking the Boardwalk and the sunny south ocean exposure are most attractive. Exquisite music every evening throughout the year.

White Service in both the ala Carte and the American plan dining rooms.

HEALTH RESORTS

The Hot Springs of Arkansas

America's Greatest Resort the Year Around. Where Hope is Renewed, Disease and Pain Washed Away and Joyous Health Restored.

For beauty of surroundings, splendid climate the year around, recreation, social features, and above all, HEALTH, Hot Springs, Arkansas, undoubtedly surpasses all other resorts in America. Nearly everyone who spends even a few days in Hot Springs falls in love with the place and returns year after year.

The world-famous baths, radio active to a marked degree, offer almost certain relief for Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Malaria, Locomotor Ataxia (early stages), Bright's Disease (when not too far advanced), Liver and Bladder troubles, Catarrhal troubles, Women's diseases, Skin and Blood diseases and other troubles of a nature kindred to those above mentioned.

From the dawn of American history and dating back hundreds of years in Indian lore—Hot Springs has been famed for its healing waters, and the U. S. Government as early as 1832 recognized the wonderful powers of these waters and set these springs aside—making of it the First National Park Reserve.

The fact that "Uncle Sam" is in control is sufficient insurance against exorbitant charges, and visitors or tourists come to Hot Springs feeling every confidence that their welfare will be jealously guarded.

The Army and Navy Hospital, located here, reports 90% of its patients as being returned to duty. This is a fair indication of the certainty of relief or cure that sufferers may expect.

Fine 18-hole golf course, on which winter tournaments are conducted. Baseball training parks, horseback parties and outdoor sports of all kinds. Come to Hot Springs, America's playground and the World's Sanitarium. Write for information, handsomely illustrated souvenir booklets, government reports and other interesting and valuable matter. Cut out the coupon and mail it today.

Right off the Reel

The Love Affairs of Peggy

[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

O, IT'S a great, big, beautiful world, journal! Just you let what I'm going to write sink in, and you'll think it is, too. Because I'm so crazy to see it all down, word for word, I'm going to write it and not skip a thing. 'Tenshun, then!

I thought one day last week that mother seemed awfully gay and giddy like. She kept singing at the top of her voice and stopping suddenly—as if a thought struck her, and then taking up the tune in a whistle. Since The Trouble she has been so subdued, that I noticed especially how she was acting, and I followed her around feeling puzzled and looking it, I reckon, for suddenly she whirled around and caught me and gave me a good hug.

"O, Peggykins!" she said.

"I Was Afraid to Open My Eyes for Fear I Was Only Dreaming!"

"W-w-what!" I gasped, the breath almost gone out of me. But she was gone, merely calling back over her shoulder:

"Just—you—wait, Baby Yamb! Just—you—wait!"

I smiled to myself. Darling mother! Always concocting some delicious surprise to make me feel happier! I must be sure and act pleased whatever it might be.

Well, that day dad came home early and began to act queer just like mother. I sat down and thought. Was it an anniversary or something? Had some holiday rolled around and found me forgetting? To save my life I couldn't think of any possible recurring event that could justify so much hilarity and mystery, and I was just a little miffed, to tell the truth. You know how you feel when there's a secret and everybody in the world seems to be in it but you. Well, that was the way I felt.

Dinner time came—nothing stirring. We ate our dinner and then went into the living room and read. At least pretended to read, though none of us were. Mother, all dolled up, fussed around in her chair with an eye on the clock and dad was forever filling his pipe and dropping his paper. Finally I rose, yawning.

"I'm sleepy," I said. "I'm going to bed."

Dad and mother looked wildly at each other. I surveyed them cannily but said nothing. Together they exclaimed:

"What! To bed? So early, Peggy?"

"Why, it's not so early," I said. "And I'm——"

Just then there came a loud ring at the door bell. As though pricked all at once by a million pins, dad and mother hopped up and scooted in a body for the door. And Peggy after them just as tight as she could run. There wasn't going to be any prize package left that I didn't see—no sir-ee!

And then—the door opened and I heard something that made my heart give that well known leap into my mouth. I shrank back into a shadow and stood there.

What I heard was a voice.

The voice!

"P-Peggy," I whispered to myself, "poor little Peggy, you're crazy. O, Peggy, isn't that too bad! Y-you're m-m-mad——"

"Where's Peggy? Where's my girl?"

"O," mother whispered, "wait until I break the——"

But there wasn't any breaking about it. I might be mad—but I meant to go right on and get madder yet. I gave a little cry and rushed for the door.

"O, Elliott!" I sobbed, and, mad or sane, there I was all cuddled up in his arms, crying and clinging to him, while dad and mother, after having finally edged us into the library and closed the door, left us.

How long it was before I looked at him I haven't any idea. I was so afraid to open my eyes for fear I'd find out I was just dreaming or in a padded cell or something. At last, though, Elliott gave me a shake.

"Look up here, Skiddymerinks!" he said. "Why, I haven't seen your brown eyes yet—and that's terrible!"

I drew a long breath and then looked up. O, journal—it was true! There he was, my Elliott, big and strong and as bronzed as though he had never been sick. And then he told me all about it.

"I woke up one morning, Peggy," he said, "and found myself in a strange room. And there was a nurse there. I thought I was dreaming—but, no, I soon found I was awake. And pretty sore, believe me! I wondered who the dickens had had the nerve to put anything like that over on me. In gruff tones I demanded the meaning of the nonsense. She bent over me and laid a soft hand on my head——"

"W-was she pretty?" I wanted to know.

"No, a regular-er-er Madusa!" he said, laughing—"but, anyhow, she put her hand on my head and told me to take my medicine. I told her I'd do nothing of the kind and asked for my sister. Pretty soon she came tiptoeing into the room looking scared to death.

"'You must be quiet, dear,' she said.

"'O, for heaven's sake, Madge,' I said, 'explain and have done with this. Where's Peggy?'

"And then you just better believe there was a scene. She squeaked like a mouse and ran for the doctor, and—but, any way, the doctor said I was all right and with a few days of quiet I would be able to make the journey home. Was I quiet? I—should—say! I did every blooming thing they told me, ate raw eggs, and let 'em weigh me and everything, and—here I am, Peg o' My Heart, and please won't you be married tomorrow?"

I put my arms around his neck and burrowed into his cheek.

"Elliott," I said, "for the rest of my natural days I'm going to do—everything—you—want. What time tomorrow?"

So, journal, dear, the reason I'm so joyous is that I'm Mrs. Elliott Holt. For Wednesday was "tomorrow." Tomorrow we're starting for the Bermudas—isn't that ducky? O, journal, journal, journal!

So endeth "The Love Affairs of Peggy." The editor, though, insists that no Sunday paper is complete without a love story, and I should probably have had to manufacture love adventures for mine heroine until she was gray and walked with a cane, had not he been so fortunate, one beautiful day, as to secure the services of Mr. Rex Beach. Mr. Beach—who, by way of an appetizer, is as wonderful looking as his stories are wonderful, will write a series of love stories for you. His first one entitled, "When the Mail Comes In," appears on page 2 of the colored section of this issue. And it's a peacherino lulla dewdrop, girls. (Imagine how attractive Mr. Beach must have looked writing it—all in his smoking jacket and slippers with his trusty pipe in his mouth! Um-m-mm!) Since Mr. Beach will attend to the love interest, we can have this space for more moving picture news. Interviews, maybe. Would you like that? I would. So—here's hoping and feeling sure that we're going to enjoy the Rex Beach stories with all our hearts. MAE TINEE.

The Voice of the Movie Fan.

Dear Miss Tinee: I wonder if it is allowable to write you a letter to which one doesn't expect an answer on your page. At least, I am doing it and must, as I have just read the two letters from "Readers" and Mrs. Q. E. Waller, respectively. I debated with myself before I omitted the quotation marks from that last named. Wouldn't you like to present to them your job for about one hour and watch the results they would turn out? I wish you could tell them that you are in our service, the service of the public, and that what the public wants is—well, isn't it sometimes misery as well as a mystery to you? Please don't think that I forget that I am a part of it. ELIZABETH.

Dear Miss Tinee: To my adversaries and allies I wish to say that I had no intention of stirring up a tempest in a teapot when I wrote a certain letter, and yet it had the value of proving that the Keystone is of more importance than any of us had suspected. If it were not it would hardly engender such lively comment. And since there are those who, unfortunately for them, do not like the Keystone and those who, unfortunately for them, do like it, let us lay the ghost once and for all by saying that we all hope it will improve. In all things human there is room for improvement. Are we agreed? R. H. TRAVERS.

Dear Miss Tinee: Here is another protest against the Keystone comedies. It was my misfortune to witness one of them the other evening entitled "The Anglers." It certainly was the limit in silliness, vulgarity, and indecency. Surely the board of censors must have been taking a vacation about the time it escaped. I always pass up a theater where a Keystone is billed unless there is some special feature that I wish to see. If the Keystone players have any abilities, let them cut out the slapstick business and give us something we are not ashamed to look at. Like others who have written on the subject, I am not a prude, and enjoy a good comedy as much as any one. I agree with Mrs. H. S. W. in all that she says and will take the "silly sob stuff" any time in preference to the silly, vulgar stuff of the Keystone. MRS. H. C. K.

Dear Miss Tinee: I have been eagerly following the discussion of the merits and demerits of the Keystone comedies, and I agree emphatically with the person who said they were vulgar and disgusting. With the exception of two I will say I have never seen anything so cheap in the line of comedies.

Although I am considered by my friends to have an abnormal sense of humor, I cannot see anything in Keystone comedies but a waste of film, time, and money, and unlike the person whose sense of humor was broad enough to embrace them I avoid them always, as do all my friends.

I enjoy all of your page and, above all, your answers to the movie fans. O, Miss Tinee, please continue "The Love Affairs of Peggy," and let me say I think Ruth Stonehouse and Francis X. Bushman would be ideal as Peggy and Elliott. BETTY THOMASON.

Dear Miss Tinee: I think Ruth Stonehouse would make a fine Peggy and Mr. Bryant Washburn would make a fine Elliott. Would you please tell me if it is true that Mr. Bushman is married? INTERESTED.

The Frame of Public Favor

J. Warren Kerrigan

IT'S NOT necessary for you to be told, of course, that this is Mr. J. Warren Kerrigan of the Universal company. His picture has appeared in the "Frame" before, but his many admirers have insisted on seeing it again—so here it is. Mr. Kerrigan, who boasts of being all of 25 years old, has been in pictures for nearly five years. His professional career began, he declares, when he set out from his home in Louisville, Ky., bound for New York with unlimited ambitions and not the least bit of experience in the world. "My mother wanted me to go into the ministry and my father had me all marked out as the greatest lawyer of the age," he says. "My eldest brother—I am the youngest of eight—had me picked for a prize fighter. But all to no account. First the stage and then the 'movies' got me." Mr. Kerrigan is a great sportsman. He can, it is said, run, swim, and ride horseback like a professional. He differs from many young men in that, his friends declare, he has never sown any wild oats. He gives as a reason that he has never had the time. Country life, dogs, horses, and chickens are all to his taste. He is not married and lives in Hollywood, Cal., with his mother, his sister Kathleen, and his brother Wallace. Rather a satisfactory young man on the whole, don't you think?

Answers to Movie Fans. - - By Mae Tinee.

D. A.: I should think that a young man 20 years old and nearly seven feet tall might be vurry funny in pictures with John Bunny. Why don't you write to Mr. Bunny in care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, New York, and broach the subject to him? I know he's on the stage now, but letters addressed to him there will reach him.

H. C. AND T. B. CLUB: If you want me to tell you who the actress in question is, you'll have to cut out the picture and send it to me. I haven't the time to hunt through the magazines for it, much as I should like to oblige you.

BLUEBELL AND DAISY: I think you'd better send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope for information regarding becoming a photoplayer. No, it's not necessary to take any special training.

MISS HELEN SNYDER: Thanks for wanting my picture, but I do not give them away, especially autographed ones. I write so badly. Francis X. Bushman says he is not married, so you'd better take his word for it, don't you think?

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed, Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Mae Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been repeatedly answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

AN ADMIRER: Antonio Moreno is of Spanish descent. He comes, so they say, from an old Madrid family. I have no information regarding his private affairs. Too bad!

THREE MOVIE FANS: Lillian Walker is not married. Alice Joyce is—to Thomas Moore.

MISS BILLY B.: You know I'd do anything in the world I could to oblige you, but I cannot print Ruth Stonehouse's residence address, as she does not want it printed. The stars much prefer having their mail sent to them at the studios. The Essanay studio is at 1333 Argyle street, Chicago. No, Florence La Badie is not married. Address her in care of the Thanhouser company, New Rochelle, N. Y. If you request her photograph, be sure to enclose a quarter.

SIMPLE FANNY: Pearl White says she is not married. Cleo Madison is with the Universal company; so is Grace Cunard. Maurice Costello is with the Vitagraph company.

JULA FERN: I'm sure I haven't an idea as to which moving picture company would be the best to join. The one that would take you might be the most advisable.

F. F. F.: Positively I will not tell you the names of any favorites. There are a number of leading people in the Thanhouser company. Among the best liked are Florence La Badie, Marguerite Snow, James Cruze, Harry Benham, Ethyl Cooke Benham, and Helen Badgely. And others. The James Cruze baby is a movie actress already. Don't you remember you saw her in "The Million Dollar Mystery"?

HELEN M.: Ich weist nicht the names of the wives of Carlyle Blackwell and G. M. Anderson. I should take Louise Huff of the Lubin company to be about 19 or 20 years of age.

S. P. T.: Mary Pickford is married to Owen Moore. She's in her early twenties.

W. W. W.: The fact that you saw the play in question advertised as a three reeler when it turned out to be only in one reel may have been due to a typographical error. We'll blame it on the press man, anyhow.

EVANSTON: I think you'd better send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the material I have on scenario writing. It will help you greatly.

W. R. W.: If you will send the stamped and self-addressed envelope you mention, I'll be glad to tell you regarding what you ask.

DIMPLES: No, I don't get tired. I love to answer your questions. I understand that Ethel Grandin is not married.

A. B. C.: Neither Dorothy Kelly nor Norma Talmadge is married. You're welcome.

DOROTHY: Yes, Mona Darkfeather appeared in "Defying the Chief." Your votes recorded. You're welcome.

EDDY B.: You're such a nice Teddy for saying such nice things. Thanks. No, Crane Wilbur and Thomas Chatterton are not related. Yes, they're Apollo-y and Adonis-y all right. No'm, I don't happen to know the whereabouts of your "favorite villainness." If I do I'll put a note in the paper. Yes, the same William Clifford, so I am told. I'm sure I can't tell you whether or not a dramatization of the book you mention would "take," but you'd better talk with the publishers before you even think of putting it in scenario form.

A. W.: Pardon me, but Mary Pickford is not with the Universal company. The pictures you saw were old ones that were undergoing second releases. You do not mention the name of the firm producing the pictures in which you are interested.

LILLIAN J.: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please.

Vote for the Picture of Your Favorite Player.

Wallace Reid received the highest number of votes this week. His picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon, the following six are the leaders:

Charles Clary, James Cruze, James Morrison, Beulah Poynter, Lila Chester and Henry King.

Some actors have cigars named after them, some have candy named after them; there is a perfume which bears Mary Fuller's name, but King Baggot has been crowned King of Omelettes. The scene was in the main dining room of a hotel in New York. Mr. Baggot eats there often, and this time he was ordering a plain omelette. He waited expectantly. Soon the waiter appeared with a huge, steaming omelette and set it before the actor. But a plain omelette wasn't what King wanted. O, no! He dashed on a little chili sauce, mixed with a little Worcestershire, added salt, and pepper, and several other trimmings. The waiter was taking it all in over his shoulder.

Result: The next day, under the caption, "Dishes We Recommend," there blazed forth in red letters, "Omelette à la King Bagot."

Note to Maitre d'Hotel: Baggot is spelled with two gs.

Not long ago Maurice Costello was the recipient of a crate of Cassaba melons from a friend in Asia Minor. Having previously tasted the lusciousness of this tropical fruit, he invited a few of his intimate friends to enjoy a feast of the melons. Giving strict orders to the cook to prepare and serve them to the best of his ability, Mr. Costello contentedly awaited the time when he could give his friends a real treat. As an appetizer he had prepared a tasteful lunch, and when it came time to light cigars ordered in the melons. The cook brought in a tray on which reposed two of the finest of the lot steaming hot, he having boiled them to a turn.

Following the series of "The Beloved Adventurer" pictures, which has been successful beyond expectation, the Lubin company will release a new novelty of the adventures and sad experiences of "Patsy Bolivar." Patsy's misfortunes are continuous and excruciatingly funny. The stories have been written by Clay M. Greene, and the first number will be released Dec. 28 and continue one reel every Monday for fourteen weeks.

A rumor has been going the rounds that Edna Maison of the Universal was sick. As a matter of fact, she was never better and never more busy than she is at present. A little while back it was Ella Hall who was on the point of death. It seems to be a popular diversion to manufacture diseases for the artists, but it is a silly one.

Little Billy Jacobs has returned to the fold of Ford Sterling. Fred Balshofer secured the little man a few days ago and now Robert Thornby, the "child director" (directing children), will be busy putting out some new releases.

Frederick Sullivan, Thanhouser director, who is staging "Zudora," established a record last week when he took thirty long scenes in one working day.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR PHOTOPLAY STORIES.

FIVE hundred dollars in prizes will be paid on Monday, Feb. 1, 1915, for the best three dramatic or melodramatic scenarios offered in a contest conducted by this paper in conjunction with the Essanay Film Manufacturing company. The prizes will rank as follows:

First prize, $250.
Second prize, $150.
Third prize, $100.

Following are the conditions governing the contest:

Scenarios submitted must consist of neither more nor less than two reels; the plot must be either dramatic or melodramatic. Comedies, either straight, farce, slap-stick, or burlesque, will not be considered.

Scenarios must be either typewritten or written in pen and ink, and on one side of the paper only.

Don't worry about putting your ideas in scenario form. What we want is ideas! Originality!

The name of the author must not appear on the scenarios. The author will write his or her name on a slip of paper, together with his address and the title of his manuscript. The slip of paper, with postage for return of scenario if unavailable, must be inclosed in a plain sealed envelope. The scenario and envelope must then be placed together in an envelope for mailing.

Address offerings to Contest Editor, "Right Off the Reel" page, care of this paper.

Upon receipt scenarios and envelopes will receive corresponding numbers and be filed. The names of contributors will not be known until the judges have decided on the scenarios they consider most deserving of award.

No one in any way connected with either the Essanay company or this paper is eligible to compete.

A board of three judges, consisting of Francis X. Bushman of the Essanay company, Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, and Miss Kitty Kelly of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will decide as to the merits of contributions.

All scenarios must be in by midnight of Saturday, Jan. 16, 1915. The prize winning scenarios will be produced and featured by the Essanay company, which also reserves the right to buy at its usual rates such of the contributions submitted as it seems available for production.

Remember, your name must not appear.

Your story may contain as many words as you think necessary to express your idea, but an effort should be made to write the story in as few words as possible. Use the following as a model if you care to:

Bill Harkness is just an ordinary city "bum." A good looking, ingratiating bum, at that, with a heart as soft as a persimmon, his only serious fault being an inherited love of ease. One day, while loafing in front of a third rate cigar store, he noticed a pretty girl go by. She walks quickly by, but as she passes a look of contempt flashes across her face at sight of the able bodied idler. Bill, recognizing the look—he has come to know it well—flushes. He follows her. By means of some amateur sleuthing he discovers where she works—she is a clerk in a dry goods store.

To win from this girl a look of approval becomes the ambition of Bill's life. After getting a shave and haircut, he brushes his clothes, and, applying at the office of the store where she is employed, is given a job in the shipping department. The work is arduous, but he perseveres, managing every so often to pass the glove counter where his idol dispenses hand coverings to those who wear such things. One day, as he passes, he beholds a sporty appearing young fellow in the act, apparently, of "kidding" the fair clerk. That she is displeased is evident. Bill, taking in the situation, draws a deep breath and takes matters in hand—or in fist—as it were, flooring the youth and drawing to the neighborhood an excited crowd. Bill is just being fired when his idol flies to his side.

"If he goes—I go!" she says.

Probably both would be allowed to depart, but at that moment up steps a richly dressed woman—the wife of the senior partner of the firm.

"Discharge this noble young man!" she exclaims. "Never! Come with me," and, placing her hand on his arm, she sweeps with him to her husband's office. Over his shoulder Bill whispers to the idol: "Meet me at the door at closing time."

When he meets her he tells her he has been made—O, something important. The rest, of course, is easy to imagine.

[If you can't do better than this—we miss our guess.]

The Patrol of the Sundance Trail

RALPH CONNOR
The PATROL of the SUNDANCE TRAIL

By RALPH CONNOR
Author of "The Sky Pilot," "Black Rock," "Corporal Cameron."
$1.25.

The dash and excitement of a struggle between settlers and Indians, increasing in intensity up to the very last page—a background of Canadian wilderness, mountain and canyon, and frontier town—two tender love stories, one of the infinite trust of happy marriage, the other of youth's first romance.

The Prince of Graustark

The Prince Of Graustark
George Barr McCutcheon

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON
Author of "Truxton King," "Graustark," "Brewster's Millions."
Illustrated by A. I. Keller. $1.35.

"The Prince of Graustark" is exciting, has a delightful love story, ends with a wonderful surprise, is clean throughout. A story about a Prince of Graustark who is the son of Princess Yetive and her American husband. Also there is a very shrewd, forceful, powerful American multi-millionaire with a brilliant and lovely daughter.

Perch of the Devil

PERCH OF THE DEVIL
GERTRUDE ATHERTON

By GERTRUDE ATHERTON
Author of "The Conqueror," "Senator North," "Patience Sparhawk."
$1.35.

An American copper-made fortune—a crude American girl grown into a personage—a new figure in American fiction—the Ida Compton of this book. A girl who begins crudely in Montana and grows into a woman of fire and character—still in Montana, with a dash of Europe between.

Delia Blanchflower
by
Mrs. Humphry Ward

Frontispiece in color by Will Foster.
$1.35.

In this book Mrs. Ward returns to the province of her former successes—English society romance. It is a fascinating story of present day life. A lovelier, more capricious and willful heroine than Delia Blanchflower one rarely meets. It is of special interest to American readers because we have in our own country very similar types and problems.

ELIZABETH GORDON

All by ELIZABETH GORDON

These books are attractively bound and illustrated and contain fanciful tales that appeal strongly to children. They are amusingly original and hold the child's attention, due to Elizabeth Gordon's inborn understanding of the child mind.

The "Dolly and Molly" Series, 25c ea.

By the same author is very attractive. Titles are as follows:
"Dolly and Molly at the Seashore."
"Dolly and Molly at the Circus."
"Dolly and Molly and the Farmer Man."
"Dolly and Molly on Christmas Day."

The Hidden Children

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS
Author of "The Common Law," "The Firing Line," "The Business of Life."
Illustrated. $1.40.

A story of the life and love of a nameless girl and a young soldier in the company known as Morgan's Rifles. The scene is upper New York State where the American colonists are waging a bitter war against the great Iroquois Indian Confederacy. A vivid, picturesque, and exciting story.

The World Set Free

THE WORLD SET FREE
By H.G WELLS

By H. G. WELLS
Author of "The Passionate Friends," "Ann Veronica," "War of the Worlds."
$1.35

Read it, and see London, Paris, Berlin mere flaming ruins—Holland drowned by the cutting of her dykes—the clouds full of battling aeroplanes. Europe in hill and valley a vast shambles. And then! the wiping out of all frontiers and dynasties, the end of all crowns and thrones, and the world one nation forever!

The EYES of the WORLD
HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

Illustrated by Cootes. $1.35.

A real love story, with big plot and much action; deep mystery and great love; sweet sentiment and strong passions. A delightful, wholesome romance among orange groves and mountains of Southern California. The real charm of the story lies in its style, color, conception, and fancies, together with its wonderful nature descriptions.

The Last Christian

The Last Christian
by
George Kibbe Turner

By GEORGE KIBBE TURNER
Author of "Memories of a Doctor."
Frontispiece in color. $1.25.

Why are country churches closing? Why must city churches advertise for audiences? The theme is of universal interest—the unrest and worldliness of the present time, presented not through argument, but through the spiritual struggles of real men and women. The book does not critcise any church or creed nor offer any substitute for faith.

Her Fancy and His Fact
By MARIE CORELLI
Author of "The Life Everlasting," "Romance of Two Worlds," "Barabbas."
$1.35

Here is an exquisite girl so reared in an ancient manor-house that she keeps unspoiled the fancies and goodness of a simpler era. When she comes in contact with the turmoil of today, when the roaring city threatens her passionate sweetness of soul, there ensues real drama. The story of a woman's heart and life and fight.

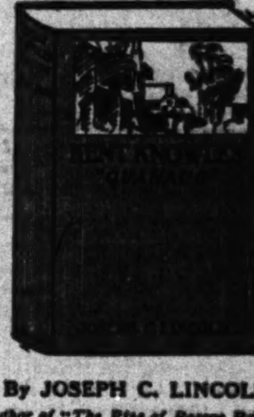
Martha and Cupid

MARTHA AND CUPID
JULIE M. LIPPMANN

By JULIE M. LIPPMANN
Author of "Martha-by-the-Day," "Making Over Martha."
$1.00.

The latest of the "Martha" books. In this one she marries; and the reader has the rich opportunity of looking at family life through those shrewd, wise, kindly eyes that see so much—and yet see so little of gloom. There is a story of a family Christmas that will make any one glad he's alive.

Kent Knowles



By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN
Author of "The Rise of Roscoe Paine," "The Postmaster."
Illustrated. $1.35.

A quaint, romantic novel. Readers of Mr. Lincoln's Cape Cod stories will find a real delight in this new volume, in which the author sends two of his most interesting characters to England because the Doctor orders it for one. A genuine love story develops, presenting a romance of great vigor.

The Red Mist

By RANDALL PARRISH
Author of "My Lady of the North," "When Wilderness Was King."
Illustrated. $1.35.

The story involves the adventures of a Confederate Sergeant who is captured and condemned as a Spy. Utterly unexpectedly in a deserted house he encounters a young woman whom he had known in childhood, and to save her from a most unhappy fate at the hands of a guerrilla chief, marries her. The resulting complications make up an interesting story.

The Mutiny of the Elsinore

THE MUTINY OF THE ELSINORE
By JACK LONDON

By JACK LONDON
Author of "The Call of the Wild," "The Sea Wolf," "Burning Daylight."
Frontispiece in color. $1.35.

A vigorous narrative of a voyage from New York around Cape Horn in a large sailing vessel, with the real wildness and savor of the sea in it. In addition to the adventure element, there is a thread of romance involving a wealthy, tired young man, who takes the trip on the Elsinore, and the Captain's daughter.

New Men for Old

NEW MEN FOR OLD
by
HOWARD VINCENT O'BRIEN

By HOWARD VINCENT O'BRIEN
$1.25.

Every business man, every employer of labor must read this book. A young fellow, son of a wealthy Chicagoan, passes his time in Paris in luxurious idleness. He is called home at his father's death. Instead of receiving a fortune he finds himself penniless at the opening of the book which tells the rest of the story.

How It Happened

How It Happened

By KATE LANGLEY BOSHER
Author of "Mary Cary," "Man in Lonely Land," "Miss Gibbie Gault"
Illustrated. $1.00.

The fortunes of a child and two lovers are intermingled. The little daughter of a blind harper laughed, though she would often rather cry, because she longed for beauty and "hated being poor, bad smells, and dirty things." She discovered what it was a lonely rich man most wanted and gave him the clew to find it.

The Man and the Moment

By ELINOR GLYN

By Edna Ferber

By EDNA FERBER
Author of "Buttered Side Down," "Roast Beef, Medium," "Dawn O'Hara."
Illustrated by James Montgomery Flagg. $1.00.

A story of business and human hearts. Here is the Emma McChesney of "Roast Beef, Medium," helping her son Jock begin the advertising business. It is humorous and touching. There's something very funny about the bumps Jock gets and something a little touching about his triumphs.

CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
A Novel of the Kentucky Mountains
By the Author of The Call of the Cumberlands

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
Author of "The Call of the Cumberlands," "The Portal of Dreams"
Illustrated. $1.25.

A story of the Cumberland Mountains, vital, gripping, compelling; a story of fierce primal passions, of self-sacrifice, of heroism, of realism, and of exquisite romance. A story of the high places where thunderstorms are born and where men and women dwell with the eagles, their neighbors, the ferocity and intensity of the open

The Strange Woman

By

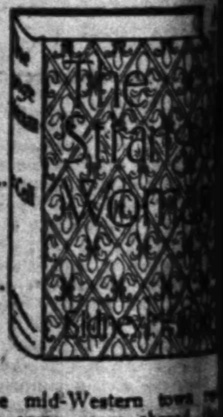
McCALL

Author of "Truth Dexter," "The Breath of the Gods," "Dragon Painter."

Illustrated.
$1.30.



To a little mid-Western town returns, after some years abroad, the town's most promising young man, bringing with him his future wife, a woman young, beautiful, witty, and talented, but who, from the point of view of the townspeople, is an enigma, a mystery, unintelligible. There are inevitable misunderstandings, the solution of which forms an interesting story.

Tik-Tok of Oz

Tik-Tok of Oz

By L. FRANK BAUM
Author of "The Land of Oz," "The Wizard of Oz."
Illustrated by John R. Neill.
95c.

The story has unique features of adventure, surprise, humor, odd characters, queer countries, and introduces many new characters in addition to the familiar ones that the children love in the "Oz" books. Queen Ann of Oogaboo, with an army of sixteen officers and one private soldier, sets out to conquer the world.

JEWELRY, WATCHES, ETC.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Every day more people realize the advantage of buying unredeemed diamonds. When you pay regularly, say, $50 for a diamond, you must first deduct the profit on same to get at the actual value of it. It is not worth $50. It is probably worth just half of that sum. The other half represents the profit of the retailer, cutter, importer, etc.

RIGHT HERE IS THE DIFFERENCE.

We have pawned diamonds left over at such low figures that we can and do save you half on the original price. Make us show you. You will not be pressed to buy. The sale is made when the customer is satisfied. Call today.

Splendid Values in Homes

IN AUSTIN.

Hogenson's Model Homes on Lockwood and Lorel-avs. are of vastly superior construction and decidedly varied architecture, located on strictly residence streets and away from congested and undesirable surroundings.

They are being built in the 5 to 6 room bungalows or in the 6 to 8 room residence style, cement, stucco, or frame, made very complete, including high grade interior finish, with artistic lighting fixtures, art glass and decorations; no lots smaller than 33 1-3x126 and street improvements all in or to go in and paid for.

These homes can be seen completed or in course of construction; will build to suit on Lockwood-av., north of Augusta-st.

Prices range from $4,500 to $6,500 on terms to suit or cash. A Chicago-av. car takes you to Lockwood-av.; then walk north to houses.

Tucson Farms in Full Bloom Today

At this very hour Tucson farms, adjoining Tucson, Arizona, are actively in growth and in harvest. Owners are at work in the open fields in their shirt sleeves. Farmers from various parts of the Northern, Middle, and Middle Western states who have all their lives depended on one crop a year are on the Tucson farms looking them over with a view to buying. They like the idea of 365 growing days in the year and a beautiful climate one can live in summer and winter, where there are no crop failures, no floods, no cyclones, or other convulsions of nature. So far every excursion to Tucson farms has resulted in 100 per cent sales.

There Are 200 Farms to Choose From.

They will be sold in all sizes down to ten acres. They will be sold on the eight year payment plan and made easy for you for the first two or three years, until you get things going. The Tucson farms are all completed projects—finished workshops. The rough work has all been done. There is no pioneering or grubbing or blasting left for you to do. The farms are highly cultivated. They are bearing crops today, and some of them are in harvest—some of them in seed. They are adequately and permanently watered, and the water supply does not depend upon storage or rainfall.

SPECIAL EXCURSION TO TUCSON FARMS.

We will run a special excursion to Tucson farms Tuesday, Dec. 15, on the Golden State Limited of the Rock Island railway, leaving Chicago at 6:05 p. m. Join this excursion and see Tucson farms as they are. Call at our office and make your reservations for this special car.

Isle of Pines.

Isle of Pines

A beautiful, healthful island 90 miles south of Havana. Over 6,000 Americans own land there. Four days from New York by steamer. Mild delightful climate the year round. No frost, no snow, no coal to buy, no irrigation needed for trees. Good American schools, churches, banks, wireless telegraph, postoffices, business men's associations, clubs, etc.

Fruit Growing Profitable.

Ten acres planted in oranges, grapefruit, pineapples, vegetables, etc., and properly cared for and cultivated will yield from $2,000 to $5,000 yearly. Such a plantation is therefore better than a 160 acre northern farm.

Ten acres will cost you $650, payable $162.50 down and the balance in equal payments in three, six, and nine months. We allow 10% discount for cash, making the net cash price of ten acres $585. Tell us how much land you would require in the event of your purchase and we will send you actual photograph and surveyor's report of a desirable piece of property.

Last Excursion to Michigan.

[Private car excursion, Tuesday, December 8.]
HERE IS SOMETHING to think about between now and Tuesday morning.
THIS IS THE LAST CHANCE to get a reduced excursion rate to look at land in Michigan in 1914. No excursion rate will be given after that until next March.

MORE IMPORTANT, however, is the fact the price of the land will go up another notch as it does every year. Therefore, if you buy your land now, you will save considerable money.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP Xmas and New Year's mornings and take an inventory of yourself, you will feel a good deal better to know that you have started the purchase of a piece of land that stands for your independence and that of your family in years to come. That this is true, I ask you to come with me on my excursion and give me the chance to prove.

NOW THAT THOUGHTS turn to the family and relations, bear in mind that the best gift one could make for his family, as well as himself, is the purchase of a piece of land in our part of Michigan's Fruit and Clover Belt. With my contract is an insurance feature that costs nothing extra and is a protection to the purchaser's family. In case of death after part is paid for, the land will be deeded to the wife or heirs without further payments.

THINK BACK how many days you have been laid off from work during 1914 and how uncertain working for the other fellow is. A good piece of land never stops working for you. It is constantly rising in value and its products each year command a higher premium. There is every reason that a man who knows something about farming and is not getting ahead in the city should make the effort to acquire a farm. By my easy payment plan you can buy 40 acres, paying $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month. Many a man has told me he would never have had anything if he had not started buying a piece of land from me in this way. When you realize that one year's crop of potatoes on from 5 to 8 acres of land has frequently paid for the cost of the entire 40 acres, you will see why it is so well worth while and why I have made so many sales during uncertain times.

AN ADVERTISEMENT is necessarily limited, but for descriptions of the lands, transportation, markets, and soils, water supply, climate, educational, social, religious, and industrial conditions, we have compiled a large 72 page book with 115 illustrations. The second edition of it is now being published. Send for this book or call for it and get a large map, and at the same time inspect samples of 1914 crops on display in my offices. Also see the 190 stereopticon views that are continually being shown in my stereopticon room, showing all the features of interest for one who is interested in purchasing land in the Swigart Tract of Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford Counties.

MY LAST PRIVATE CAR EXCURSION in 1914 will be Tuesday, December 8, by the P. M. R. R., leaving my offices at 11:30 a. m. Fare $8.30 round trip to Wellston, rebated on purchase. You get back to Chicago at 7:20 a. m. Thursday or Friday of the same week. Automobiles and guides furnished free. Offices remain open Saturday afternoons and Monday evenings.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Missouri.

HOMESEEKERS READ THIS

We have the best farm land proposition ever offered to the man with a small amount of money.

If on investigation it is found misrepresented your money will be immediately returned on surrender of contract.

HERE IT IS in a NUTSHELL

Fifteen prominent and successful bankers and business men of Missouri, including the secretary of the Missouri State Bankers' association, with a desire to stimulate the growth in population and demonstrate the relatively very large profits in fruit growing and intensive farming in this particular district of Missouri, have joined together in an association or company in accordance with the laws of the state of Missouri, with a fully paid capital of $325,000.00, purchased a large tract of highly productive land in Southeast Missouri, fifty miles south of the crest of the Ozarks, and are developing it upon this unique and popular plan.

TEN AND TWENTY ACRE FARMS.

The land has been divided into 10 and 20 acre tracts, the former all lying within three miles of town or railroad and the latter within seven miles.

1,000 ACRE ORCHARD.

A great orchard project of 1,000 acres is being developed. Two hundred and forty acres are now in bearing, the peaches last year yielding $150 per acre average and the grapes $300 per acre, and the contract has been let for completing the remaining 760 acres, from 50 to 100 men being constantly employed in this work. Two canning factories, each with a daily capacity of 9,000 cans tomatoes or 16,000 cans peaches, are in active operation during the season.

THREE THRIVING TOWNS.

Three exceedingly promising towns are within this tract. All are growing rapidly, and with the impetus given them in this great development project are increasing in population rapidly.

The land has an average elevation above sea level of about 550 feet. It is not a solid tract, but is interspersed with hundreds of improved farms, orchards, etc., with thriving, progressive towns and shipping points. Hunter, Mo., is the center of the tract and is the local headquarters of the company.

The bankers, after a long and careful study of a very large number of colonization projects, devised this original, successful and popular plan.

$5 CASH, $5 MONTHLY; NO INTEREST, NO TAXES, BUYS 20 ACRES.

A contract is sold for only $200, on terms of only $5 cash and $5 monthly without interest or taxes, entitling the purchaser to one farm tract [and he may select either ten or twenty acres], 300 shares in the big 1,000 acre orchard, two canning factories and full equipment, and three town lots.

It is expected that the price of the contracts will be increased and the monthly payments made $10 instead of $5 in the near future.

Every possible safeguard that great business ability and long successful experience can suggest has been thrown around the purchase of these contracts. Among the splendid provisions which the bankers have incorporated into the contract are the following:

90 DAYS' TIME TO MAKE SELECTION. COULD ANY OFFER BE MORE FAIR THAN THIS?

Each purchaser is given 90 days' time in which to visit the land and make his own selection, the company binding itself to promptly refund every dollar paid it if a single misrepresentation is found. Permission is given the purchaser to designate in writing some relative or friend with authority to visit the land and make selection.

MONEY BACK IN ONE YEAR.

THE COMPANY BINDS ITSELF TO REFUND EVERY DOLLAR PAID IT WITHIN ONE YEAR IF THE PURCHASER, HAVING TAKEN POSSESSION OF HIS TRACT AND CULTIVATED IT IN A FIRST CLASS, SYSTEMATIC, FARMER-LIKE MANNER, IS DISSATISFIED.

FREE RAILROAD FARE TO PURCHASERS.

The company binds itself to pay the railroad fare of each buyer from his home to the land and return, crediting same on the purchase price of his contract.

WILL LOAN MONEY FOR IMPROVEMENTS.

It also binds itself to loan every purchaser upon request money for the improvement of his farm tract.

PAYMENTS STOP IN CASE OF DEATH.

In case of the death of a contract holder a warranty deed is immediately made out to the heirs and no further payments are required.

IF SICK OR OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

If you are unable at any time to make your payments on account of sickness or loss of employment we will allow you ample time for the resumption of payments.

PERFECT TITLE.

Title to every acre of this land has been subject to the searching scrutiny of several eminent attorneys, including Mr. George W. Groves of St. Joseph, Mo.

IMMEDIATE POSSESSION.

Every purchaser is entitled to immediate possession, he can improve or do anything he wants with the land, receiving a Warranty Deed as soon as he completes his payments.

$1,000 FORFEIT.

The Munger Securities Company, the promoter of this great enterprise, binds itself to forfeit to charity the sum of One Thousand Dollars if any misrepresentation can be shown in its printed literature. The company will also forfeit a like sum if the original of every testimonial letter published is not on file in the main office [illegible] and is not genuine a[illegible]

You have th[illegible] any time afte[illegible] ment, and th[illegible] succeed to all [illegible] The advent [illegible] land will incre[illegible] building of new [illegible] spent for imp[illegible] some profit to the owner of every farm, whether he has improved it or not.

TO WHOM WE WILL SELL.

WE ARE ASKED: WILL WE SELL OUR LAND TO EVERYBODY? NO, CERTAINLY NOT; WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO REJECT AN APPLICATION FROM ANY ONE WHOM WE HAVE REASON TO BELIEVE IS OBJECTIONABLE.

Since the launching of this project a short time ago more than 1,000 men from Missouri and adjoining states have purchased contracts, visited the land, made a critical inspection, and have written very enthusiastic letters of indorsement.

No other place in the United States or Canada can a man make a more comfortable living with less effort nor secure considerable wealth with a fair effort than in the Southern Missouri Elberta Peach, Fruit, and Farming District.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values, these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values, these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

POLICE BEATING OF BOY DENIED

Funkhouser Inspector Begins Inquiry Into Charges of Woman.

FOUR MEN ARE NAMED.

An investigator from the office of Capt. Philip R. Crippen, department inspector attached to the office of Second Deputy Superintendent of Police Funkhouser, is inquiring into a complaint made on Friday by Mrs. Catherine O'Callaghan, 3620 Wallace street, who charges that her son, Daniel, 16 years old, was beaten by four policemen of the West Thirty-fifth street station last Monday. The policemen deny the accusation, and Capt. Thomas F. Cronin of the West Thirty-fifth street station said they did not strike the boy. The captain gave Mrs. O'Callaghan the names of four policemen—Thomas Coffey, John Adams, James O'Connor, and Peter Carney—whom she accused, but said they were not guilty of the charges.

Gives Names to Crippen.

Mrs. O'Callaghan gave the names of the four policemen to Capt. Crippen. She alleged that her son was beaten and had a discolored eye when she found him at the police station. She said she was working for Miss Mary McDowell of the University of Chicago settlement, returned home about 10 o'clock last Monday night, and a neighbor told her that her son had been arrested.

"When I entered the station I heard my son screaming and I found him in an office and around him were four big policemen who had beaten him," Mrs. O'Callaghan said. "I asked Capt. Cronin for their names and he gave them to me, but he said they had not beaten the boy. But my boy had a black eye."

Says Charges Are Unfounded.

Detective Sergt. William F. Fox also declared that the charges against the four policemen were without foundation.

"In November the boy was taken on suspicion in connection with the theft of automobile tires," said Fox. "At that time we did not have the evidence against him, and his mother pleaded for his release, saying he was a juvenile and that she needed him. She said she would wash to help support herself and the boy to keep him honest, and we released him."

"Last Monday the boy again was arrested for larceny of four automobile tires, which were sold for $60."

KILLS 2 WHILE INSANE; RECOVERS, BUT GOES FREE.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Man Gets Release After Two Years—Deputy and Barkeeper His Victims.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 5.—Although he killed two men while drunk Dr. Henry D. Kelley of Council Bluffs will go free and will spend Sunday with his parents.

Kelley was being taken from his home to the Knoxville inebriate hospital by Deputy Sheriff Woolman on March [illegible], 1911. They spent the night in a hotel here. Early in the morning Kelley arose and killed Woolman with his own revolver as he slept. Then, stealing down the stairs, he went to a nearby saloon and asked Barkeeper Sterzing for a drink. He refused and Kelley killed him.

He was soon arrested and a jury convicted him of murder, but also said he was insane. This caused a reversal by the Supreme court. The first of the present week another jury said Kelley killed the men while insane, and this prevented any further criminal prosecution. Today the Polk county insanity commission held that Kelley is now perfectly sane and he was discharged. He spent over two years in the Anamosa penitentiary, and his gray haired father has worked incessantly to secure his release.

TWO WEAPON TOTERS FINED.

Saloonkeepr and Cousin Searched at Death Corner Pay for Carrying Gun and Slug.

Sara Cassamon, owner of a saloon at 517 West Oak street, and his cousin, whose name also is Sara Cassamon, arrested at "death corner" in the north side Italian section, were fined $100 each by Judge Ryan yesterday on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The saloonkeeper had a loaded revolver and the other a heavy steel bolt with a wire handle when they were searched early in the day by Sergts. De Mar and Harnett. They were unable to explain why they were carrying the weapons.

Kills Man; Fined $25.

W. P. J. Campbell of 556 West Madison street, who was exonerated by a coroner's jury for killing Albert Brand of 5236 South Leavitt street when the latter was shot after they had made a 10 cent wager, was fined $25 and costs yesterday by Judge Gemmill. He was charged with discharging a firearm within the city limits.

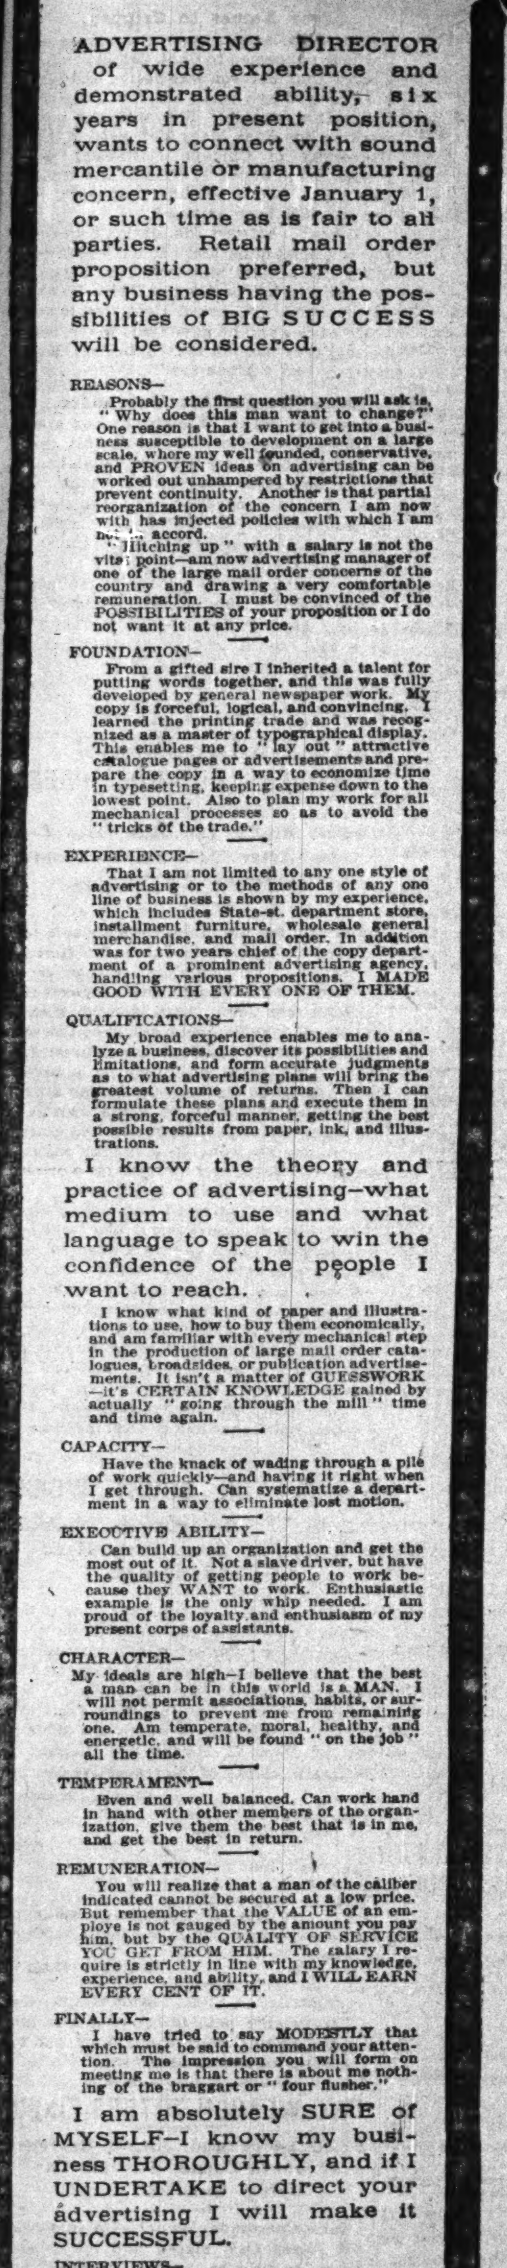
Big Jobs at $2.69 Each

BIG ADS BRING BIG RESULTS

Read this remarkable testimonial from a man who commands a big salary. It is indisputable proof that big employers read Tribune Want Ads when they are looking for high grade men. It should be evidence to you that whether you are a $1,000 man or a $10,000 man, the "Situation Wanted" columns of The Chicago Tribune can market your services to the best advantage—and at a very small cost to you.



ADVERTISING DIRECTOR of wide experience and demonstrated ability, six years in present position, wants to connect with sound mercantile or manufacturing concern, effective January 1, or such time as is fair to all parties. Retail mail order proposition preferred, but any business having the possibilities of BIG SUCCESS will be considered.

REASONS—

Probably the first question you will ask is, "Why does this man want to change?" One reason is that I want to get into a business susceptible to development on a large scale, where my well founded, conservative, and PROVEN ideas on advertising can be worked out unhampered by restrictions that prevent continuity. Another is that partial reorganization of the concern I am now with has injected policies with which I am not in accord.

"Hitching up" with a salary is not the vital point—am now advertising manager of one of the large mail order concerns of the country and drawing a very comfortable remuneration. I must be convinced of the POSSIBILITIES of your proposition or I do not want it at any price.

FOUNDATION—

From a gifted sire I inherited a talent for putting words together, and this was fully developed by general newspaper work. My copy is forceful, logical, and convincing. I learned the printing trade and was recognized as a master of typographical display. This enables me to "lay out" attractive catalogue pages or advertisements and prepare the copy in a way to economize time in typesetting, keeping expense down to the lowest point. Also to plan my work for all mechanical processes so as to avoid the "tricks of the trade."

EXPERIENCE—

That I am not limited to any one style of advertising or to the methods of any one line of business is shown by my experience, which includes State-st. department store, installment furniture, wholesale general merchandise, and mail order. In addition was for two years chief of the copy department of a prominent advertising agency, handling various propositions. I MADE GOOD WITH EVERY ONE OF THEM.

QUALIFICATIONS—

My broad experience enables me to analyze a business, discover its possibilities and limitations, and form accurate judgments as to what advertising plans will bring the greatest volume of returns. Then I can formulate these plans and execute them in a strong, forceful manner, getting the best possible results from paper, ink, and illustrations.

I know the theory and practice of advertising—what medium to use and what language to speak to win the confidence of the people I want to reach.

I know what kind of paper and illustrations to use, how to buy them economically, and am familiar with every mechanical step in the production of large mail order catalogues, broadsides, or publication advertisements. It isn't a matter of GUESSWORK—it's CERTAIN KNOWLEDGE gained by actually "going through the mill" time and time again.

CAPACITY—

Have the knack of wading through a pile of work quickly—and having it right when I get through. Can systematize a department in a way to eliminate lost motion.

EXECUTIVE ABILITY—

Can build up an organization and get the most out of it. Not a slave driver, but have the quality of getting people to work because they WANT to work. Enthusiastic example is the only whip needed. I am proud of the loyalty and enthusiasm of my present corps of assistants.

CHARACTER—

My ideals are high—I believe that the best a man can be in this world is a MAN. I will not permit associations, habits, or surroundings to prevent me from remaining one. Am temperate, moral, healthy, and energetic, and will be found "on the job" all the time.

TEMPERAMENT—

Even and well balanced. Can work hand in hand with other members of the organization, give them the best that is in me, and get the best in return.

REMUNERATION—

You will realize that a man of the caliber indicated cannot be secured at a low price. But remember that the VALUE of an employe is not gauged by the amount you pay him, but by the QUALITY OF SERVICE YOU GET FROM HIM. The salary I require is strictly in line with my knowledge, experience, and ability, and I WILL EARN EVERY CENT OF IT.

FINALLY—

I have tried to say MODESTLY that which must be said to command your attention. The impression you will form on meeting me is that there is about me nothing of the braggart or "four flusher."

I am absolutely SURE of MYSELF—I know my business THOROUGHLY, and if I UNDERTAKE to direct your advertising I will make it SUCCESSFUL.

INTERVIEWS—

Where possible would prefer to meet inquirers personally, and will be pleased to arrange interview to suit your convenience. If too far away, will submit all essential information by letter.

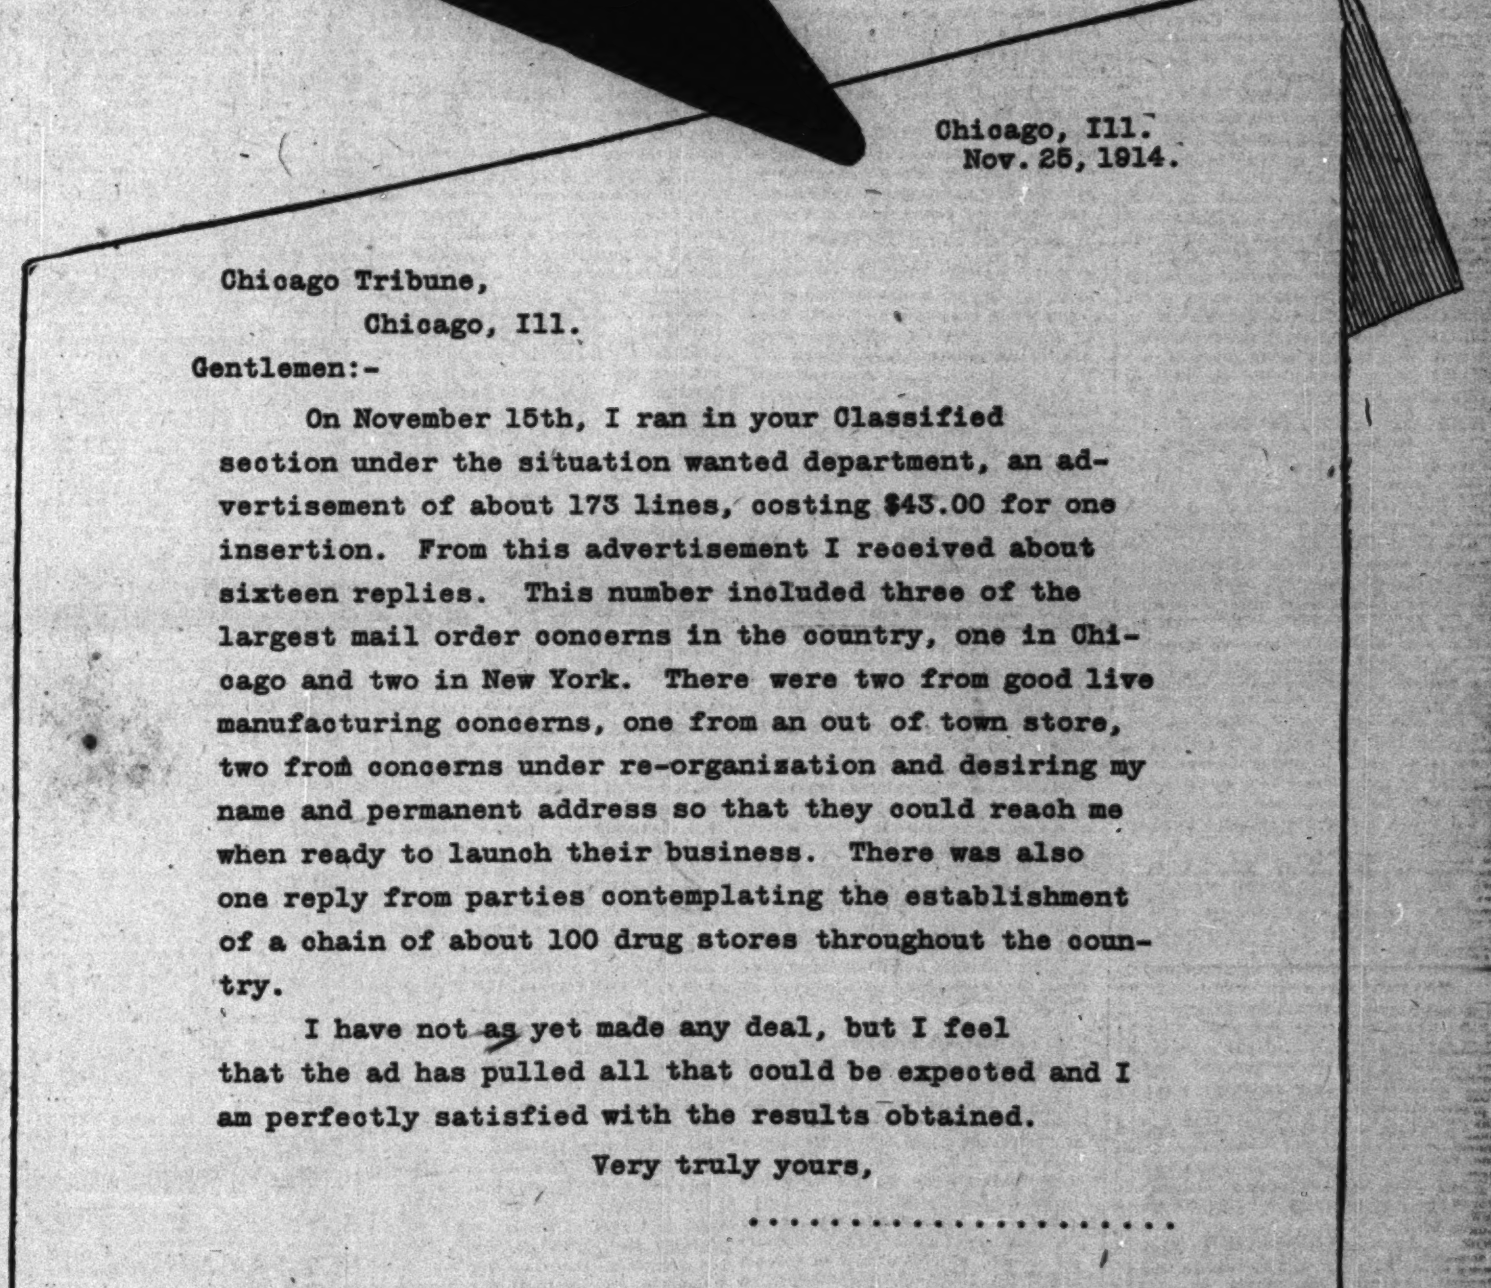
Address, Tribune.

This is the largest situation wanted advertisement that ever appeared in The Tribune. It was inserted Sunday, Nov. 15, 1914, at a cost of $43 and brought the advertiser replies at the rate of about $2.69 each.

The result from this advertising is a monumental tribute to the power of Tribune Want Ads. It is a barometer of guidance for the "Doubting Thomases" who have never tried "Situation Wanted" advertising because they think it does not pay men who are looking for the big jobs. It does pay. This advertiser's own story proves it.

What this advertiser did, you can do.

If you want assistance in the preparation of your advertisement, The Tribune will be glad to give it to you. Call at The Tribune Business Office, Madison and Dearborn Sts., and ask the manager of that office for details.



Chicago, Ill.

Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

On November 15th, I ran in your Classified section under the situation wanted department, an advertisement of about 173 lines, costing $43.00 for one insertion. From this advertisement I received about sixteen replies. This number included three of the largest mail order concerns in the country, one in Chicago and two in New York. There were two from good live manufacturing concerns, one from an out of town store, two from concerns under re-organization and desiring my name and permanent address so that they could reach me when ready to launch their business. There was also one reply from parties contemplating the establishment of a chain of about 100 drug stores throughout the country.

I have not as yet made any deal, but I feel that the ad has pulled all that could be expected and I am perfectly satisfied with the results obtained.

Very truly yours,

....

Would you like to pick out your own job? If you want or must have a new job by January 1st, or even before then, place a "Situation Wanted" advertisement in The Sunday Tribune. Tell all about yourself and your ability. Don't be afraid to give all the details. It will be read and it will bring replies. There are good jobs waiting for good men who have the courage to advertise their services in the market place where big employers look for big help—the "Situation Wanted" columns of The Chicago Tribune.

U. S. STAMP TAX LAW HARD BLOW TO REALTY EVIL

Puts an End to the Practice of Placing Low Valuation on Property.

An important feature of the new revenue law in its relation to real estate, and one which apparently escaped any particular notice in previous discussions of the subject, is that it practically puts an end to the rapidly growing custom of placing nominal considerations in deeds. Under the law the seller is required to pay a tax of $1 for each $1,000 of the consideration in excess of existing incumbrances.

Of course nominal considerations can be and are being employed, but the purpose of using them is defeated by reason of the fact the amount of stamps affixed to the document indicates just what the actual consideration is. It is possible, of course, to swell the actual consideration by placing stamps in excess of the amount required by law, but this custom obtains to only a limited extent as compared with that of using nominal considerations to conceal the low price at which the property has been purchased.

Heavy Penalty for Violation.

It is possible also, if the parties to the transaction are agreed, to place less than the amount required by law, but inasmuch as the law imposes severe penalties in this case, fine or imprisonment or both at the discretion of the court, and inasmuch as Uncle Sam has an unpleasant habit of running down and punishing violaters of his laws, it is fair to assume there are going to be precious few attempts at evasion in this respect.

The old saying about there being a compensation for most of the ills which afflict humanity evidently is finding another illustration in this feature of the revenue law, for there can be little doubt that the burdens and annoyances imposed by this tax will be more than compensated for by the benefits to come from the revelation of the actual prices generally paid for property.

Public Will Gain by Change.

It may be a bit distasteful to those who have employed it for the purpose of escaping the payment of a part of their just taxes and to those others who have used it for the purpose of securing unduly large profits in subsequent sales to those ignorant as regards values generally. But the public at large will certainly be a gainer, and particularly the real estate market, which unquestionably has suffered from this growing tendency to conceal actual considerations.

To such an extent has this custom grown during recent years that it has come to be recognized as a serious evil, and there has been not a little agitation in several states looking to the enactment of laws by which an end should be made of it. This has been the case in this state, where the custom has grown at a surprisingly rapid rate during the last two or three years, and particularly in Chicago, where deeds of this kind have come to make up much the larger part of the transfers.

Practice Discourages Investment.

Those having the best interests of the market at heart have recognized for some time that the effect of this was to lessen popular interest in real estate, as well as to discourage popular investment in the same for the reason that it has become practically impossible for the layman to obtain any idea as to actual land values from the published transfers.

The would-be investor in stocks or bonds can see at a glance the market value of any of these securities, whereas the would-be investor in land is confronted with a long list wherein the concealment of actual market values seems to be the one thing aimed at. Unwilling to trust to his own judgment, aware of his own ignorance and fearful, perhaps, that the owner or real estate agent who has charge of the property he has in mind may take advantage of his ignorance, he frequently gives up his idea of buying and invests his savings in some other form of security in which he feels that he is getting value received.

Tends to Destroy Confidence.

Confidence is the basis of any healthy and sustained popular support of any class of investment, and popular confidence in the worth of real estate investments undoubtedly has been weakened by the custom of concealing from the public the prices at which land in various parts of the city is selling.

Once the public is in possession of this information there is every reason to believe there will develop a widespread interest in land investment commensurate with the opportunities to be offered by reason of Chicago's assured brilliant future. While the new law still makes it possible to swell the actual consideration, it marks a great stride forward in the correction of an evil which has operated to the marked disadvantage of the real estate market as well as the general public.

The present is a most fitting time, too, for the inauguration of this reform, not contemplated, it may be said, by the framers of the law, for the reason that land investments, by reason of their demonstrated stability during the last few troubled months, stand out in such striking and favorable contrast to practically every other form of investment.

CLUB ELECTION NEXT FRIDAY

Co-operative Realty Organization Has Two Tickets from Which to Pick Officers.

The annual election of the Coöperative Realty club will be held at the Hotel Sherman next Friday, Dec. 11. There are two tickets in the field, one headed by F. C. Cooper, for president; Aldis J. Brown, vice president, and J. L. Hess, secretary and treasurer. The other is headed by J. E. Bistor, with Edward B. Mower for vice president and Gilbert Scribner III., secretary and treasurer.

"Not all the priests on earth could take me away from woman suffrage. I have known many fine and eminent priests who favored it. The objection which is raised by the priests is that suffrage might disrupt the home and that you might take women away from church work. In this I fully believe they are wrong."

G. H. TAYLOR HEADS TICKET.

Chicago Real Estate Board Picks Man Long Identified with Its Work for President.

George H. Taylor heads the ticket supported by the nominating committee of the Chicago real estate board at the December meeting last Wednesday.

Mr. Taylor has been a resident of Chicago since 1887 and has been identified actively with the work of the board for many years.

The other leading nominations include Henry T. Carr, vice president; Arthur B. Hall, secretary; Charles S. Tuttle, treasurer; new members of board of directors, George F. Koester and Bertram M. Winston.

BANQUET PLANS COMPLETED

Noted Speakers Will Be Heard at the Annual Dinner of Cook County Board.

Plans are completed for the seventh annual banquet of the Cook county real estate board which will be held at the Hotel La Salle Tuesday evening, Dec. 8. The dinner will begin at 7 o'clock following an informal reception beginning at 6 o'clock. County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer will act as toastmaster and the invocation will be pronounced by the Rev. Preston W. Bradley. The speaking program will include the annual message by President Richard W. Wolfe, to be followed by the formal speakers of the evening, Charles L. Hutchinson, Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, and John T. McCutcheon of THE TRIBUNE.

FLAT PROPERTY SALES ON LARGE SCALE REPORTED

High Grade Apartment Buildings Show Activity in All Parts of the City.

Unusual activity characterized the market for large apartment house properties last week, transactions in this field being on an unprecedentedly large scale.

One of the largest of these covered the high grade twenty-one apartment building at the northeast corner of Ingleside avenue and Fifty-second street, with 110x158 feet of ground, which was sold by Peter S. Ronberg and Andrew J. Lillroth to Mrs. Nellie Kehoe Byrne. A nominal consideration was given, subject to $57,000 incumbrance, but the $48 worth of revenue stamps on the deed indicated that $48,000 was paid for the equity, making a total consideration of $105,000.

In connection with this sale the purchaser conveyed to the grantor the six apartment building at 1319-21 East Fifty-third street, between Kimbark and Kenwood avenues, said to be valued at $35,000 and having a reported annual gross rent of $4,500; also the eighteen room residence at 4414 Greenwood avenue, on a lot 50x150 feet, said to be valued at $18,000, and the vacant 175x125 feet at the northeast corner of Seventieth street and Oglesby avenue, at a reported valuation of $12,500, all clear. E. B. Woolf & Co. represented Ronberg and Lillroth, while McCarthy & Byrne represented Mrs. Byrne.

South Side Apartment Sold.

The three story and English basement twenty apartment building of four, five, and six rooms, on a lot 75x161 feet, at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Fifty-ninth street, was sold by Edward M. Bertha, the builder, to William and Emma Hughes, the consideration being nominal, but said to have been $85,000, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $50,000.

The building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $12,000. The sale was negotiated by Charles E. Bixby of Bixby & Hughes. The latter firm will have charge of the property.

The same firm, together with H. E. Edmonds, figured in a sale of vacant at the southwest corner of Fifty-sixth street and South Park avenue, which it is proposed to improve with a twenty-six apartment building to cost about $150,000. The property, which fronts 100 feet on the avenue and 75 feet on Fifty-sixth street, was sold by Clara F. Bass to August West for a reported consideration of $20,000. The building, which will be a high grade structure, is expected to be completed about Aug. 1 next.

"Montvillo" Flats Transferred.

The big "Montvillo" apartment house at the southwest corner of Lake Park avenue and Woodlawn avenue, a triangular shaped piece with a frontage of 234 feet on both streets, was sold by Edwin P. Fowler to R. E. Schmidt, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000.

In an important north side deal William E. Henry and Stanley Kwasigroch sold to Cecil Dixon the eighteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Leland and Sacramento avenues for a reported consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $39,500. The apartments contain four and five rooms, and the purchaser gave in part payment the property at 6217-19 South Park avenue, with flat improvements, which was put in at a valuation of $28,000, subject to $16,000 incumbrance, and other property. C. C. Mitchell & Co. represented the sellers and Bert A. Wilbur of Ballard, Rowe & Whitman the purchaser.

Largest Deal on North Side.

The largest deal of the week in this class of property was the sale by De Forrest A. Matteson to Andrew G. Johnson of the property at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Buena avenue. The lot fronts 100 feet with a depth of 130 feet, and the improvements comprise a new high grade twenty-one apartment building of four, five, six, and seven rooms, having a gross annual rent of about $18,500.

A nominal consideration is given in the transfer, which is made subject to an incumbrance of $101,000, but the actual figure is said to have been about $170,000. Mr. Johnson, who is a retired coal dealer, gave in part payment the property at the southwest corner of North Clark street and Dole avenue, the building, which contains two stores and four flats, being known as "Camp Fry." It occupies a lot 50x120 feet and was transferred at a nominal consideration, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000. Also two other parcels, the three being subject to $41,000 incumbrance.

18 Apartment House in Deal.

A notable deal in south side flat property was the sale by Walter P. Needham of La Grange to Dr. Charles J. Kurtz of the high grade eighteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Indiana avenue and Forty-second street, for a reported consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $22,500. Dr. Kurtz conveyed in part payment the clear three apartment building at 424 East Forty-sixth place, valued at $10,000. L. A. Cotter of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties to the transaction.

Another large south side flat deal was reported in the sale by Otto Balgemann of Elmhurst to Joseph Koenig of Two Rivers, Wis., of the twenty-one apartment building, with 75x125 feet of ground, at the southwest corner of Forty-eighth street and Calumet avenue.

The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $10,200 and was conveyed subject to an incumbrance of $45,000, the consideration being nominal. It is said, however, to have been in the neighborhood of $100,000, the purchaser conveying in exchange a farm of 560 acres in northern Michigan, with stock and implements. It is said to have been conveyed at a valuation of $50,000. George W. Stewart acted as broker.

Another South Side Transfer.

The twenty-four apartment building at the northwest corner of Calumet avenue and Forty-sixth street, with 97x129 feet of ground, has been sold by Eva M. Orme to Perry Glickstone, a consideration of $10 being given, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000. Mr. Glickstone gave in part payment the six flat building in Calumet avenue 247 feet north of Forty-sixth street, with 50x129 feet of ground, east front, consideration nominal, subject to $12,500 incumbrance.

Record was made of the sale by Herman B. Rulman of the two eighteen apartment buildings at the northwest and southwest corners respectively of Clifton and Sunnyside avenues, the former to Carey W. Rhodes and the latter to Francis E. Matthews, consideration in each sale being nominal and subject to $46,000 incumbrance.

Leases and Loans.

The growing ease in the mortgage loan market is evidenced by the sharp increase in the number of loans going to record. They practically are all outside loans and are for the greater part in the shape of bond issues in connection with apartment house construction which is now progressing on a large scale. The fact that a few weeks ago few of these loans were being made and building operations generally were tied up in consequence, particularly as regards large buildings, shows how greatly conditions have improved in this field.

While there is a more liberal supply of funds, interest rates show little change, 6 per cent being now the practically established minimum rate. The rate for downtown loans is quoted at about 5½ per cent, although it is probable that an extra gilt edged loan might be placed at 5 per cent.

S. W. Straus & Co. report having made loans aggregating $583,000 last week, in addition to a previous list of $1,635,000 placed during the last two months.

An interesting building lease in North Michigan avenue has been closed by which the trustees of the W. J. Quan estate have leased to the Allegretti Chocolate Cream company the four story building at 224-228 for a term of ten years from Jan. 1 next at a reported term rent of $57,000, also assuming the necessary expenses involved in connection with the construction of the proposed boulevard connection between the north and south sides. W. J. Quan & Co. have occupied the premises for half a century. The surface of the proposed elevated boulevard will cross this building above the second floor line. W. E. Haines of Alex. Friend & Co. represented both parties. The building will be remodeled after plans by Architect John E. Youngberg.

The leasehold interest in the Clark theater at 4533 North Clark street, between Wilson and Sunnyside avenues, has been sold by the Clark Amusement company to John H. Ferris, formerly in the amusement business. The theater, which has a seating capacity of about 1,100, is under a lease with about nine years to run at an annual rent of $6,500. It is stated the new lessee will expend about $20,000 in improvements. Hume & Co. and George W. Walker were the brokers.

S. Yondorf & Co. have made a loan of $42,000 in the form of a 6 per cent serial bond issue to Edward I. Bloom, secured by the high grade twelve apartment building at the northeast corner of Fifty-second street and Drexel avenue, on a lot 105x110 feet.

Grant Carpenter & Co. have leased the three story and basement brick building 352-354 West Erie street, for Oscar F. Lengacher to the Colonial Chemical company for a term of years at a rental of $8,000.

The Central Realty and Investment company has rented for La Verne Noyes the store at 121 N. Dearborn street, to Brenner company for a term of years for $20,000.

REALTY INTERESTS TO FORM BIG TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATION

Men Representing Property Worth More than $100,000,000 to Organize to Seek Taxation Reforms.

Plans for the organization of a taxpayers' association were formulated at a meeting held at the Hotel La Salle last week by a group of men representing real estate interests aggregating more than $100,000,000. The purpose of the proposed organization was stated to be tax reforms and adjustment of tax assessments.

A committee, headed by Jacob L. Kesner, was appointed to arrange for incorporation and complete the plans for organization. Another meeting will be held on next Tuesday, when reports from this committee will be presented.

The object, as set forth in invitations sent to many of the largest real estate owners in Chicago, is:

"The association is to be nonpolitical, nonpartisan, and not affiliated with any political or other organization, but will receive gladly the support of all organizations which can aid it in any way.

"The association is intended to be a practical business organization to aid in remedying the defects and in promoting efficiency and economy in our present system of taxation. It is not intended to disturb the past, but is intended to regulate the future."

The invitations were issued by:

Joseph R. Noel,
Frank R. Hebard,
B. M. Winston,
Dorr E. Felt,
Charles B. Pike,
Raymond G. Kimball,
Henry G. Foreman,
Seymour Morris,
William A. Dyche,
Russell Tyson,
John Morey,
Washington Porter,
A. C. Honore,
Joseph E. Otis,
J. L. Kesner,
Morris L. Johnston,
John A. Chapman,
McKey & Poague,
J. Lewis Cochran.

The present plan is to recruit membership throughout the state.

Chicago to Be Teachers' Host.

Presidents and principals of colleges and secondary schools of the north central states will be guests of honor at the twentieth anniversary celebration of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools in the Hotel La Salle next March, according to plans arranged at the Hotel La Salle yesterday by the executive committee of the organization.

REALTY IN LOOP SECTION FIGURES IN WEEK'S DEALS

General Business Revival Reflected in Large Number of Transactions.

Evidence of the general business revival which is upon the country was reflected last week in the activity of the real estate market, which registered the largest number of important transactions since the war. This included both downtown and outside property, as well as a free movement of the lots and the cheaper sort of improved property.

The downtown transactions were of special importance, but the fact of their being downtown transactions gave them a special interest in view of the dullness of this market for a long time.

These transactions were on Fifth avenue, one comprising the sale by White & Tabor for the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank, trustee, to Joseph B. Moos of the leaseholds and buildings at 139-145, just north of Adams street, known as the "first trust agreement."

The property fronts 48 feet, with a depth of 90 feet, improved with two five story buildings under lease to various tenants. Both fees are owned by Mrs. Rachael Salsbury of New York, and each of the leases has run about ten years, the ground rent being $4,950 a year.

$100,000 Leasehold Price.

Mr. Moos, who is the owner of the Pontiac building at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Adams street, which adjoins the above property on the south, is reported to have paid about $100,000 for the leaseholds and buildings.

White & Tabor sold both of these fees to Mrs. Salsbury several years ago, and subsequently they became the owners of both leaseholds, which they afterward transferred to the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank, as trustee.

James A. Hool of John R. Magill & Co. represented Mr. Moos in the recent deal, while F. E. Vaughn and Henry Russell Platt attended to the legal details.

In the other transaction the estate of R. J. Busch sold to James F. Porter the property 275 feet north of Polk street, 25x100 feet, west front, with improvements, for an expressed consideration of $43,000, subject to an incumbrance of $21,000. In exchange Mr. Porter conveyed to the Busch estate the property in Larrabee street, 110 feet north of Center street, 188x175 feet, east front, a nominal consideration appearing in the deed.

Deals in St. Clair District.

Mr. Moos also figured in two transactions in the St. Clair street district, which were made matters of record. He sold to Mary E. Anderson the vacant property at the southeast corner of Huron and St. Clair street, 100x100 feet, for an expressed consideration of $50,000, which is at the rate of $500 a front foot, a record price for property east of Lincoln parkway in this district.

Mr. Moos also conveyed to Henry R. Platt an undivided half interest in the vacant at the northeast corner of the two streets, 100x111 feet, a nominal consideration being given.

There was filed for record the transfer by quitclaim by John P. Wilson to Mrs. Nettie F. McCormick of the former property of the United States Express company on West Washington street, eighty feet west of Dearborn street, lot 40x[illegible] feet, south front, adjoining the Reaper block on the east. Mr. Wilson took title to the property for Mrs. McCormick several months ago, at a stated consideration of $475,000.

Good Deal on West Side.

An interesting transaction in west side business property, made a matter of record, was the sale by Joseph M. Browsky to Abraham Steiger of the property at the southest corner of Kedzie avenue and Douglas boulevard. The lot fronts fifty-five feet, with a depth of 165 feet, and is improved with a three story building containing nine stores on the ground floor and two flats and five offices on the upper floors.

A nominal consideration is given in the transfer, but the actual figure is said to have been $55,000, the sale being subject to an incumbrance of $22,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $6,350.

The store and flat property at 4804 Cottage Grove avenue was sold by H. G. Howard & Co. for J. E. Wells to Charles Nachtrieb, subject to $9,500. The lot fronts thirty feet, improved with a building containing one store and four flats.

SWEEPING REFORM URGED IN REALTY BOARD'S REPORT.

Changes in Special Assessments by Which Large Sums Will Be Saved to Taxpayers Recommended.

Sweeping reforms in connection with special assessments by which it is declared a saving of $400,000 a year can be effected for the city and a like sum for property owners were recommended at the monthly meeting of the Chicago real estate board last week.

The recommendations were contained in a report from a joint committee of the Chicago and Cook county boards and were suggested to the committee by E. J. Glackin, secretary of the board of local improvements and superintendent of the special assessment department.

One of the important suggestions is that the city treasurer purchase the local improvement bonds, which, it is said, would enable the city to secure 5 and 6 per cent on money on which it now gets only from 2 to 2¼ per cent, thus more than doubling its earning capacity.

Concerning rebates, it was asserted a rank injustice is being done to property owners in holding back 5 per cent interest reserve and charging the owner 5 per cent interest on the reserve as well as principal.

Another recommendation is that the law be so changed that when one property owner secures a reduction of his assessment a proportionate reduction shall apply to all frontage involved.

It also was recommended that the city adopt the scheme of excess condemnation as practiced now in continental Europe and in New York, Ohio, and Massachusetts.
